MAN ON THE CORNER of the Rights to law, and Some Law Met.

Mr. S. A. Stewart has resigned his position as Register in Clanton and the vacancy has been filled by the appointment of Mr. H. Simpson to the office. Our congratulations to Mr. Simpson. Mr. Stewart has removed to Nashville, Tenn., where she will make her future home. For many years she has been a resident of Clanton and we shall miss her cheerful presence.

Today, Wednesday, is the stock law election in Beats 4, 5, 10 and 11. It is a question that comes before the people, and we look for a large vote in each beat. Here in Clanton there has been a big crowd of interested voters, and the town vote being deferred, the result is somewhat uncertain in this beat.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Peoples Savings Bank last Monday a good report was made by the officers. The institution is in first-class shape, and went through the panicky year of 1908 without having to borrow a cent, a fact of which they are rather proud. W. E. Holloway was re-elected President, W. T. Callen Vice-President and John A. Thomas, Cashier.

A special train in the interests of farmers will leave Mobile and after several stoppages will arrive at Maplesville Friday Jan. 15, at 4:30 p.m. and Billingsley next day at 8 a.m. Addresses will be made by Commissioner of Agriculture, J. A. Wilkinson and others, mainly on trucking and canning industries.

Mrs. W. M. Adams, assisted by Mrs. W. D. Spigener, entertained New Year's evening at a watch party. The Adams residence is especially fashioned for entertaining, and adding to its natural beauty, were the exquisite decorations in the various apartments. Wild wax trailed over the mantels and pictures; and was intertwined profusely with cut flowers. Ferns and palms placed on tabourettes and pedestals, made an elaborate setting for the interesting group. The function proved a peculiarly fitting finale to the closing of the year. Their guests included a party of friends who watched the old year out as they spent the time in interesting games. The first was a unique guessing contest. For the correct guess the prize was a fine cravat holder, done in photography; this fell to Mr. J. H. Middleton. The guests were then given little booklets containing the "mystery" with a great many blanks, to be supplied with musical expressions. Mrs. Gamma Anderson was the fortunate winner of this prize, a daintily bound volume in white and gold, of art, poetry and music. An elaborate buffet supper was served, consisting of meats, salads and ices. Just as the clock was striking the midnight hour, and the church bells were sounding the death knell of nineteen and eight, Mrs. Gamma Anderson began reading the appropriate lines from Tennyson, beginning "Ring out wild bells to the wild sky." As the happy party was taking their departure they were presented with dainty hand painted cards, bearing good wishes for the new year.

The guests included Misses Bettie Mullins, Emma Thomas, Callie Watts, Minnie Muse, Mayme Woods; Mesdames Glennie Dennis and Gamma Anderson; Messrs. J. H. Middleton, Franklin, N. A. Kicker, E. B. Deason, C. F. Jones, Frank Thomas, and M. L. White.

The Hon. Rufus N. Rhodes has caused something of a stir by the remarks he made to President-elect Taft when in visiting the latter gentleman to visit Birmingham.

His telling Mr. Taft that his election was a benediction to the south is hardly calculated to bring benedictions upon his (Rhodes') head.

When the suffragists of the nation go to Seattle, Wash., next July for the 41st annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, a special day-light train, on the Northern Pacific, will carry delegates and speakers from Spokane to Seattle. An observation car will be attached and stops will be made at all points desired so that Rev. Anna H. Shaw and others may make "back platform" speeches en route.

Phosphate Rock Produced and Exported.

There were 2,265,000 tons of phosphate rock produced in the United States in 1907, and of this amount 900,000 tons, or about 40 per cent, was exported. The phosphate rock of South Carolina is nearly exhausted, the Florida deposits have reached their maximum production, and although the output of the Tennessee deposits is growing, these deposits, if the increase in the rate of production shown during the last decade continues, will last only about eleven years. There is some phosphate in Arkansas, but it is of low grade. At the present rate of mining the known available supply of high-grade phosphate rock in the United States will be exhausted in twenty-five years. It is therefore evident that the large deposits of public-land States must be depended on to replenish the fertility of the farms of the United States, and the only available method of preventing the acquisition of these phosphate deposits by foreign companies for shipment abroad and of insuring their use on our lands is apparently to retain the title in the Government and lease the lands under provisions that will prevent exportation.

The list of lands to be withdrawn was furnished by the United States Geological Survey as a result of preliminary examinations made in the field. Further work will be done by the Survey as soon as practicable, for the purpose of making a careful classification of the lands and restoring to agricultural entry such portions as many contain no phosphates.

It is pointed out by the Survey that the situation of this western field is most favorable. The smelters at Butte and Anaconda give off gases, chiefly sulphurous, which are very injurious to vegetation. These gases can be utilized to great advantage by converting them into sulphuric acid for the manufacture of superphosphate fertilizer, thus transforming a substance that is injurious to vegetation into one that is beneficial.—U. S. Geological Survey Press Bulletin.

Smarter Than She Looks.

A great many dairymen, before beginning to milk, feed each cow. The milkier hurries to get through, because if the cow finishes her meal before the milk has done his work, she exhorts more feed by holding back her milk, so must be fed again to keep her in good humor. It is a better plan to do the milking first and then feed immediately, and cows that are accustomed to this treatment generally give down their milk cheerfully, for they know that milking is a prelude to feeding. A cow is much smarter than she looks, and more grateful than most persons would believe. So long as the cows know they are not going to be struck or beaten, or neither kick nor balk. An experienced milkman will never allow any loud talking or excitement about his barn or stable, for the quieter the cows are the greater the quantity of milk given, and the easier the work is performed.—From January Farm Journal.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

Eminent Lawyer and Statesman.
Senator Philander Chase Knox of Pennsylvania, who is slated for secretary of state in the Taft cabinet, has been a prominent figure in national affairs for the past decade. Before that he had won eminence at the bar, his skill and learning in corporation law bringing both wealth and fame.

"I feel that I am to be congratulated in obtaining the services of Senator Knox in my cabinet," said Judge Taft in making the announcement. "In selecting a secretary of state I wanted first a great lawyer and second a man who would not only here, but abroad, stand out prominently as a great American."

According to a story that is told, an old lady at Brownsville, Pa., the place where Mr. Knox was born in 1852, thinks she laid for Knox the foundation of his millions. The elder Knox was a banker, but the son's allowance was never so large that he spurned an opportunity to add a dollar or two.

The first dollar, a silver "cart wheel," he ever earned was by digging potatoes for the old lady. That was during the civil war, and silver dollars were not a familiar sight then even to the son of a banker. Congressman Ernest F. Acheson, who represents the district in which Brownsville is situated, says the old lady told him that when Philander got it he looked at it, dumfounded, and remarked, "I didn't know anybody in the world had as much money as that."

Senator Knox entered President McKinley's cabinet as attorney general in 1901. He was reappointed by President Roosevelt, but resigned in 1904 to take the seat in the senate left vacant by the death of M. R. Quay. He was elected to that seat in 1905. Last summer Senator Knox was a candidate for the presidential nomination before the Republican convention.

Too Sacred to See.
"The German kaiser has been getting rough usage at the Reichstag's hands since his Morning Telegraph interview, hasn't he?" said Mark Twain at a recent dinner. "Those German royalties deem themselves so sacred too! Listen!"
"I was once traveling on the continent. A gorgeous flunky showed me through the royal palace of a tiny principality. I asked if I could have a glimpse of the ruler himself, and the lackey led me to a wall."
"Place your ear to this wall," he said solemnly, "and in about half an hour you will hear his royal highness bowling."

Inadvisable.
During a snowstorm on the Highland railway a train was held up for an hour or two. The guard, a cheery Scot, passed along the carriages trying to keep up the spirits of the passengers. An old gentleman angrily complained that if the train didn't go on he would "die of cold."
"Take my advice an' no' doo that," replied the guard. "Min' y', we charge a shillin' a mile for corpses."

It is the thin edge of the wedge; the thick end is food. But what is the use of food when you hate it and can't digest it?

Water-Power Being Wasted.

The farms are crying for more help, but greater still is the call from the rural districts for more power!

With power, —cheap, reliable power,—the farmer can run more labor-saving machinery and do with fewer tired hands. He can produce and harvest his crops with less cost and greater profit.

If farm products are to be kept in reach of the city workmen the farmers must have more power and a cheap fertilizer.

It was the noisy catarrh that answered when the world lifted up its voice for more mechanical energy to drive the industrial wheels of the cities. Now it is the whispering meadow brook which volunteers, in its silvery, murmuring tones, to do hard work of the country districts, to enrich the soil, and to take the place of coal. The streams which for ages sang in musical accompaniment to the muses of poetry now dance in mechanical rhythm to the enchanted pipe of the fair goddest "Electricity." To the ears of the electrical engineer Tennyson's brook now sings:

"Engines may come and engines may go, but I give power forever"

And water-power is the cheapest as well as the most permanent source of energy in the world.

Just as coal energy is the heat of the sun stored for our use, even so is water-power heat energy stored in the streams, awaiting a harness and bridge to do the work of man.

Every drop of water sucked up by the heat of the sun from the Seven Seas and carried by the wind-borne clouds, to be deposited in the distant mountains, is just so much stored energy to be used in racing back to the great oceans. Few and scattered are the great waterfalls giving millions of horsepower, but the land is a spider-webbed with countless streams, big and little which represent enough energy to do all the farm and industrial work in this country many times over, and leave energy to light for every city and town and furnish heat and light for every building. Enough water rolls past St. Louis to turn all the wheels of the United States, and it is said upon excellent engineering authority, that enough water-power is still undeveloped in the State of Massachusetts,—where water-power is already extensively utilized,—to equal the flow of Niagara. The ex-ent of the water-power going to waste in this country is beyond the average human comprehension and intelligence.

Farm Wealth Makes a Record.

While the year 1908 brought to the 'railroads, manufactories, and general trade such depression as is inevitable after the financial crisis of the preceding autumn, the twelve months following the panic were for the farmers of the United States the most prosperous in the history of the country. Secretary Wilson's report of the Department of Agriculture gives the final figures of the size and value of the year's crops,—and amazing figures they are. The total value of farm products reaches $7,778,000,000, a gain of 4 per cent, over the value of these products for the year 1907, and a gain of 65 per cent, over the year 1899. In this decade the farms have produced new wealth amounting to the staggering figure of $60,000,000,000. Corn is still king in its contribution to the farmer's pocket; the value of the 5,643,000,000 bushels raised in 1908 was $1,615,000,000, or more than one-fifth of the value of the total products of agriculture. This year cotton has wrested second place, in rank of value, from the hay crop, which has always, until 1908, been next to corn. And yet the hay crop is the greatest ever produced,—68,000,000 tons, worth to the farmers $621,000,000. Close after hay comes wheat, the 660,000,000 bushels raised in 1908 having a value of $620,000,000, which is more than 10 per cent, in excess of any previous wheat crop's value. Minor crops barley, rye, beet-sugar, and potatoes, were, except the last, which suffered from unfavorable weather, well up to the record in point of quantity, and all made new records in value. Dairy products brought the farmers nearly $300,000,000, poultry and eggs even more than cotton, and animal products, as a whole, nearly $3,000,000,000. The farmer in 1908 produced new wealth four times as great as all the minerals taken from the ground, including oil and the precious metals.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for January.

Sardis.

Editor Banner—Will you allow me space to say a few words in your paper in regard to a letter which Two Friends wrote about a certain woman trying to take the place of the overmen of the public road. I don't know who Two Friends are, I know I did not write the letter. I know who the woman is that ordered the road worked, and as there have been so many thinking and wondering who she is, I will write her name—Mrs. Fannie Short—so the people who did not know will not wonder any longer. I will ring off, wishing the road workers good luck, and good wishes to the Banner and all readers.

He ask me a lecture while ago to breakfast, and I go. My cab fare, two shillings, and a crown. I arrive, very nice. Goldfish in bowl, very pretty. But breakfast—one egg, one toast—no more! Oh, no. THE HONEYMOON PARADE.

Wedding Custom in One Town When the Train is Late.

A small city, which need not be located more particularly than that it is somewhere east of Boston, has its own peculiar way of speeding the newly married on their honeymoon.

For one thing, every one goes to the station to see the couple depart. This is done in many small places. The showering of rice or confetti and the throwing of the old shoe take place, not at the home of the bride, but at the station. To that extent the city referred to is not unusual.

But in this city train schedules frequently go awry, and when they do the unusual happens. The wedding, of course, has been celebrated on time, and the reception has taken as much time as such things usually take. The departure from the bride's home is made in due season to catch the train if it is on time.

The wedding guests rush to the station, where all other inhabitants having nothing better to do have assembled already. It is a free show which no one would miss.

The carriage bearing the newly married pair is drawn by white horses and decorated with white ribbons. Custom demands this, and no one has yet had the temerity to do otherwise.

The carriage arrives at the station, and it is learned that the train is so many minutes or so many hours late. Usually the measure is in hours.

The carriage doesn't wait. It goes parading. It drives around and around a prescribed route, from every point of which the driver can get due notice of the approach of the train.

The crowd remains patiently at the station. Other curious persons station themselves at points along the route just to see the wedding coach pass.

Sometimes two or three carriages, drawn by white horses and decorated in white, swing steadily around this hymeneal circuit. It seems like an endless procession. It is not unusual for a wedding pair to spend the first five hours of their honeymoon just riding round and round waiting for the train.

When the screech of the locomotive finally is heard the driver continues to swing up to the platform just as the train comes to a stop. Then the bride and bridegroom make a mad rush for their car amid a shower of rice and confetti and old shoes. The honeymoon parade is over.—Exchange.

THE REAL BOWERY.

Swiftly Passing, It Has Never Been Wholly Revealed.

The real Bowery has never been written up, and probably it never will be, because it is swiftly passing. Hundreds of attempts have been made by those who have not even penetrated the surface of its reserve. Its heart and soul—for the Bowery has both, as well as reserve—are a sealed book to the writers. It is a Sargasso sea littered with derelicts of all worlds, drifting back and forth with the endless ebb and flow of the tide, while all about them is the ceaseless activity of commerce, of development, moving onward and upward despite the ceaseless cross current, which no literary mariner, cruising in these uncharted waters, can understand.

Those who know it best and have some skill in writing as well as some understanding are so overwhelmed by its endless complications, its infinity of contradictions, its astonishing goodness and its frightful depravity, the baffling mystery of its wonderful humanness and its fantastic mystery, that they do not dare attempt to write even what they know. Only one man in all literature could have interpreted the Bowery—and Balzac is dead.

Most of us know the Bowery through fugitive newspaper sketches and fear-some lurid melodramas. The sketches present certain phases more or less intelligently, but the melodramas are weird burlesques, unworthy even of being scoffed at, so far as any consideration of truth is concerned. But these cheap melodramas, endlessly repeated, have built up a fiction that has come to be accepted as the reality.—Everybody's Magazine.

Feeling the Dogs.

In a certain part of Scotland, according to Dean Ramsey, the shepherds used to take their collies with them to church. The dogs behaved well during the sermon, but began to be restless during the last psalm and saluted the final blessing with joyful barks. In one church the congregation resolved to stop this unwelcome detail, so when a stranger minister was about to pronounce the blessing all remained seated instead of rising, as he expected. He hesitated and paused till an old shepherd cried: "My aw, aw, we're a' sitting to cheat the dogs!"

GAVE THE ANSWER.

A Soldier Who Followed the Orders of General Jackson.

Illustrative of the exasperating ease with which chickens occasionally "come home to roost" is this story from "A Soldier's Letters to Charming Nellie." On a day in June, 1862, in the early part of the civil war General Hood of the Texas brigade halted each regiment in turn and gave his orders. To the Fourth he said:

"Soldiers of the Fourth, I know as little of your destination as you do. If, however, any of you learn or suspect it, keep it a secret. To every one who asks questions answer, 'I don't know.' We are now under the orders of General Jackson, and I repeat them to you."

General Jackson also gave strict orders against foraging, but apples were plentiful, and it was contrary to nature for hungry soldiers not to eat them, and so it came about that on the march to Staunton General Jackson came upon a Texan sitting on the limb of an apple tree busily engaged in filling his haversack with the choicest fruit.

The general reined in his old sorrel horse and in his customary curt tone asked:

"What are you doing in that tree, sir?"

"I don't know," replied the Texan.

"What command do you belong to?"

"I don't know."

"Is your command ahead of you or behind you?"

"I don't know."

Thus it went on, "I don't know" given as answer to every question. Finally Jackson asked sternly:

"Why do you give me that answer to every question?"

"Cause them's the orders our general gin us this mornin', an' he tele us he got 'em that er way straight from ole Jackson," replied the man in the tree.

Disgusted with a too literal obedience to his own commands, but yet not caring to argue the point, General Jackson rode on.

The Brevity of Ballarat.

It was in Ballarat that Mark Twain found the local language so puzzling at first, the good people of the place deeming life too short to dawdle in their talk.

The mayor called on the American humorist and laconically said "K'm." Then when Mark Twain gave him a cigar he simply said "Q."

Subsequent inquiry revealed that these terms were Ballaratese for "welcome" and "thank you"—London Chronicle.

ON WOOLING BENT

John Hammersmith of New York is a widower in whose case have been left some pledges of affection by his late spouse. These children are in his immediate charge of his mother, and after returning from a visit to them he writes a friend that he must have the children with himself, that home without them is not home at all, that a housekeeper is not practical and that he must solve the problem by taking into himself another wife.

He wants a good, sensible woman to take care of the house and train the children in the way they should go. He has in mind a woman he met in Chicago, knew as hour or so and remembers chiefly because he saw her holding a baby as if she loved it. So confident is he that this woman will favor his suit that he warns his friend to prepare to act as best man. Then he writes the woman as follows:

My Dear Miss Maurice—I am, as you doubt you know, a widower with two children, a boy and a girl. My wife has been dead two years, and my children have been with my mother. My little girl misses me sadly, as I do her, and if you could make up your mind to marry me and make a home for us I would show my gratitude by being as good a husband as I know how. Hoping you will consider this favorably, I am, my dear Miss Maurice, sincerely yours.

JOHN HAMMERSMITH.

Those who know nothing about love will not be surprised that Miss Maurice responded in this wise:

Dear Mr. Hammersmith—Thanking you very much for the honor you have conferred upon me, I must respectfully decline your proposal. Very truly yours,

MARY MAURICE.

That would have settled most men, but it only served as a spur to John Hammersmith.

Meantime Miss Maurice takes occasion to "drop a line" to her chum, Helen Wells, in which she says things that, could he have read them, would have made the amorous Hammersmith fancy he had stepped on a red-hot stove lid. She said she was "burning to write him a scorching" rather warm language for a practical bachelor maid—but exercised almost superhuman control. Still, she had an opinion that "if he reads between the lines his eyeballs will wither." And yet this young woman "held a baby as though she loved it!"

Well, Hammersmith evidently did read between the lines, but without the optical shirreling predicted, for he again addressed his innamorata in humility and with profuse apology and hinted that he was going on a journey to Japan and would like to take his children and a wife along.

This bait failed to secure even a nibble. Indeed, it aroused all Miss Maurice's sarcasm, and, being a school-teacher, she had plenty. She suggested that he was acting in this matter of selecting a wife with less care than he would in choosing a horse, and she said that her "present employer, the city," gave her a holiday of two months each year, which was more than she could hope to get from him.

Then John Hammersmith wrote his friend that he felt about a foot high and had a strong desire to kill Miss Maurice. But he took another tack instead—wrote a renewal of his proposal and was requested to cease his endeavors, that the decision not to marry him was final. And as if in afterthought Miss Maurice told him she was considering "another man." Hammersmith responded as follows:

My Dear Miss Maurice—Thank you for your nice, long letter. I couldn't quite make out the last of it. I am going to Chicago to kill the other man. Determined, JOHN HAMMERSMITH.

There is a pause here in the narrative which fancy may fill.

Again Miss Maurice addresses her chum, Helen Wells, and her letter is so characteristic, so "eternally feminine," that it is worth reproducing:

My Dear Helen—Well, I am going to Europe sure enough, but not on a cattle boat. I am going as Mrs. John Hammersmith, and I am so dazed that I can hardly believe it. Mr. H. came to school one day looking disgustingly handsome. I looked up at him and said, "What a fright. We went to the theater. Nothing was said. Came next night, and John Bartlett appeared also. We played cards. I felt amused. Instead of a spinster of thirty-two—I told him that I was near forty—I felt like a gay young thing of sixteen or thereabouts with my two suitors. Comparisons are odious, but Mr. H. showed to so much better advantage than John, who was plainly justus, that that queer corner called me to my own heart's content. I was in a fright. THE MAN ON THE CORNER

"And Bro. P—don't want his wife any longer," exclaimed Dr. Matthews a day or two ago at the post office.

"Why, what's the matter?" enquired a bystander. "they always seem such a happy couple, I can't understand why he should want to get rid of her."

The jovial Doctor turned and said: "She stands six feet two now, that's the reason he don't want her any longer," and with a hearty laugh the crowd dispersed.

A dainty box of dainty fruit arrived daily at the Banner office Wednesday morning, a present from Mrs. Anna G. DuBose, of Maplesville. The fruit consisted of home raised oranges and lemons and is highly appreciated by the recipients. The oranges are sweet and juicy; the lemons are a big one, weighs 24 pounds, 8 inches long and 15 1/2 inches in circumference. It is the biggest lemon I ever seen and Judson Sirock suggests that we make lemonade with it and supply the town free gratis. It looks too good to cut.

From the elections held last week it would appear that the sentiment of the county is about equally divided on the question of stock law—six in favor of it and half a dozen against. Out of the five beats in which stock law elections have been held, three vote in favor of it and two against it, the majorities in the three beats favoring it being very small.

Snow and sleet are reported from all quarters but this sunny section is satisfied with a little rain. 12 below zero at St. Paul, Minn., and 40 below in Saskatchewan, Canada. "Here we rest" in balmy weather.

Eleven prisoners from Chilton county passed through Birmingham Wednesday, Jan. 6, en route to the mines of the Pratt Consolidated Coal Company, under the new contract with Jefferson. Chilton and other counties for the hire of convict labor. A contract has been let for a first class prison near the Banner mines in which the convicts are to be kept. Temporary arrangements have been made and the counties with whom contract have been made are sending in the men right along.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Jemison, Ala., Jan. 11, 1909

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your valuable paper to reply to a letter in your last week's issue signed "Citizens of Jemison," asking who was responsible for the convicts of Chilton county. To this inquiry will say I am, and as I am living here they could have asked me and I could have eased their mind and saved this letter, and to make this letter short will say that all they said in their letter was a falsehood. The negroes did not complain about them attending church, but were glad they came. The postmaster and depot agent made no complaint, as I have asked both of them. As for them shooting craps I can't say, but the Citizens of Jemison must have been in a game with the boys as they are so well posted. Usually I never answer a communication of a party not having backbone enough to put their name to it. This party hides himself behind all the citizens of Jemison. I have asked several good citizens about this and they know nothing of it. Taking the people of Jemison as a whole they would not stoop so low, they are too high toned, but every town has its meddler and Jemison was not left out. The parties who wrote the piece have got nothing and would strangle any move toward progress. I have been nearly all over the county working these men and people have always complimented these men on their behavior. The convicts are now gone to the mines and these old belly achers will have to hunt up something else to growl about. I will not say anything else through the paper on this subject, and should they wish to see me on this matter, I live at Jemison. As Paul of old said I have fought a good (hard) fight, I've kept the faith, I've finished my course, but whether there will be a crown laid up for me in old Chilton I can't say. Thanking you for this space.

Yours truly,
W. R. JACKSON.

Card of Thanks.

Editor Banner—Please allow me space to offer my heartfelt thanks to the good people of this community for their kindness and their kind attention toward my family during the illness of my wife and daughters, Clara and Pearl; also to our good doctors, Hayes and Eiland for their faithful and skillful services. Grant that they all may receive the richest of God's blessings.

Editor Banner—Please give me a small space in your columns to say a few words to the Banner readers.

Let us do right because it is right to do right, and not because we may be punished for doing wrong. Let us make this year a year of usefulness, a year of service in making the world better. Let us endeavor to bring more and more people under the benign influence of sacred song. May the Lord direct us. It has been truthfully said that the world has been influenced more by music than all other arts combined. Then taking this as a true statement the question would naturally arise in the thoughtful mind by what means can the greatest number of people be brought under the benign influence of this great art? There is no doubt but that the power of music is one of the greatest civilizing and refining forces that we have and should be introduced and taught in all our public schools. But as this is not the case all who are interested in the study of music should attend one two or more of Prof. H. M. Eagles normal musical institutes, that a few of the citizens of Chilton county have made it possible for you to attend at home or in your home county during this year. Let's make this year a year of usefulness. We stand on the threshold of 1909. The old glance back with musings and memories of the past, the young look forward with joyous hopes and happy anticipations. We launch out upon the new year as on an ocean whose fathomless bosom we drift without resistance beyond the bar and misty shore. As voyagers to an undiscovered land we peer with searching eyes to find perchance a grave unknown or happily a peaceful island upon the other shore with peaceful pastures "beside the still waters." From the past comes the echoes of forgotten songs from lips long silent, once filled with laughter, that we shall hear no more. We too must go step by step as time marks of our years, to the yonder side of which we know not, but we may trust as the faithful sailor trusts the searchlight on the distant shore, and as the oars of other days leave with us memories, so we must leave our footprints for those who linger yet a little while. Today is ours, we may make it as we will. It is for us to make it bright or sombre to say there shall be discord in the music that shall be wafted down the river from our lives, or if our lives shall live in joyous song sublime.

The home of Miss Mary Henderson was the scene of a most delightful social event on last Tuesday evening, when she entertained the younger set. Miss Henderson was beautifully gowned in white lingerie. The prevailing colors in the hall were white and green, while the parlor was gay with tender traces of Southern smilax and cut flowers. The hostess aroused the enthusiasm of all the guests by first giving a "Guessing advertisement" contest. There were two lovely prizes awarded. The first being a handsome box of candy, which was won by Miss Carl Gant. During the evening many beautiful selections of music were rendered by Miss Naomi Dorman, who was lovely in white chiffon over blue silk. Mr. Evans also gave a beautiful collection of songs, accompanied by Miss Dorman. Later in the evening a fruit course was served, after which an enthusiastic game of up jinks was played. At the close of the delightful occasion iced beverages were served by the charming hostess, assisted by her attractive friend Miss Naomi Dorman. The invited guests were Misses Carl Gant of Tallahassee, Fannie Thompson of Union Springs, Arrie Stitt of Wehadkee, Naomi Dorman and Pearl Driver of Marbury, Messrs. Howell A. Evans, Ollie Gilbert, Tom Allen Yancey, Chas. Thraixill Eugene D. Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Bonnie Roberts of Mountain Creek.

THE CLANTON BANK

CLANTON, ALA.

The true secret of success is thrift in all its phases, and, principally, thrift as applied to saving. A young man may have many friends but he will find none so steadfast, so constant, so ready to respond to his wants, so capable of pushing him ahead, as a little leather-covered book, with the name of a bank on its cover. Saving is the first great principle of all success. It creates independence, it gives a young man standing, it fills him with vigor, it stimulates him with the proper energy; in fact, it brings to him the best part of any success—happiness and contentment. If it were possible to inject the quality of saving into every boy, we would have a great many more real men.

LABOR MEN TALK OF SENTENCES.

UNION MEN UNANIMOUS IN CALLING JUDGMENT IN SOYCOFF MATTER A VIOLATION OF FEDERAL CONSTITUTION.

Washington, Jan. 11.—One of the most important assemblies in the history of union labor in the United States is the meeting today of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, called to consider the sentencing of three leaders of union men to jail for contempt of court.

Just what action the federation will take in the cases of Samuel Compers, its president; Frank Morrison, its secretary; and John Mitchell, its second vice president, is not definitely known. It is safe to say, however, that a vigorous protest will be made against the imposition of the jail sentences pronounced by Judge Wright of the District of Columbia supreme court.

All the labor leaders gathered here for the meeting repeated their former declarations that the sentences were unjust and in contravention of the rights of free speech guaranteed by the federal constitution.

Chile Inauguration Today.
Columbus, O., Jan. 11.—With the inauguration here at noon today as governor of Ohio of Jackson Harmon, Democrat, who will preside over a state government that will be Republican in its legislative end, lively times are predicted in the politics of the Buckeye State.

The Democrats of the senate, who are outnumbered by the Republicans by only six members, have already served notice on their opponents that they expect to receive more consideration than is usually accorded to a legislative minority.

Tomorrow the two houses in joint session will elect Theodore E. Burton of Cleveland to the senate seat which will be vacated by Joseph B. Foraker on March 4. Mr. Burton will serve out his congressional term, ending March 4. As he was re-elected last fall, a special election will be called in Cleveland soon after March 4 to determine his successor in the house of representatives.

Talking on Air Problems Today.
London, Jan. 11.—Of immediate interest to all who are watching the progress made in flying by human beings is the meeting of the International Aeronautic federation which began here today. Delegates from every European country in which aviation is a subject of daily news interest have assembled here to discuss some of the important questions that have arisen in regard to the sport, or science, as its ardent followers prefer to term it.

In view of the prominence of the Wright brothers and other Americans in this field, regrets are expressed that no American is attending the conference. The United States has, however, a representative in the person of Roger William Wallace, the Englishman selected by the Aero Club of America to look after its interests.

American Press Association. Officials.
New York, Jan. 11.—The directors of the American Press Association announced today the election of the following officers to fill the vacancies caused by the death of Major Orlando J. Smith, the founder and former president and general manager of the association: Hon. Jesse H. Pomeroy, president; Courtland Smith, vice president; and general manager, William G. Brogan, assistant general manager, Albert Berner, auditor.

Courtland Smith has been the acting general manager for the past year. William G. Brogan has been the acting assistant general manager for the same period. Mr. Berner is manager of the Columbus office. Wayne B. Stowe and Maurice F. Germond remain as secretary and treasurer respectively. William G. Brogan was elected to the vacancy in the board of directors.

Dine Mr. Taft Tonight.
Augusta, Ga., Jan. 11.—As a sort of prelude to the great doings at Atlanta on Friday of this week Augusta will entertain at dinner tonight its distinguished temporary fellow townsman, President Elect Taft.

Mr. Taft will be the guest of the Augusta Bar association at its annual banquet. Numbered among the guests will be most of the prominent residents of the city and surrounding country.

See Island Cotton.

Valdosta, Ga., Jan. 11.—The receipts of sea island cotton in this city for the season have broken all records heretofore, and are more than double the receipts to this date last year. The number of bales received up to Saturday afternoon were 12,722 against 6,375 to this time last year.

GRAFT CHARGED TILLMAN.

PRESIDENT CHARGES SENATOR TILLMAN OF USING OFFICE FOR PRIVATE BUSINESS.

Washington, Jan. 9.—President Roosevelt yesterday made public the details of an investigation by postal inspectors and secret service agents of Senator Tillman's connection with an alleged "land grab" in Oregon.

As he presents the evidence to Senator Hale, in response to the latter's request to the heads of the various executive departments for a statement of the operations of the secret service, the president undertakes to show:

"That Mr. Tillman used his influence as a senator in an effort to force the government to compel a railroad corporation to relinquish its control of land grants from the United States in order that he and his family and his secretary, J. B. Knight, might profit through purchases of some of the land; that the senator used his government franking privileges in numerous instances for the conduct of private business."

Comparatively few senators were favored with the opportunity of reading the president's report to Senator Hale, but those who did read the report took a serious view of it, although most of the senators refused to believe that Mr. Tillman had ever come anything in violation of his oath as a senator.

Praising Dead Senator.
Washington, Jan. 9.—According to resolution of the senate passed several weeks ago, today was devoted to the people to eulogies on the late

SENATOR DILLINGHAM.

Senator Redfield Proctor of Vermont. The date for the eulogizing of Mr. Proctor was originally set for Dec. 12, but it was postponed until today on motion of Mr. Proctor's colleague, Senator Dillingham.

Senator Dillingham's address in eulogy of Mr. Proctor is in keeping with the usual tenor of such addresses, touching on the late senator's career as a civil war soldier, state and national legislator and secretary of war.

Thaw Renews Fight For Freedom.
New York, N. Y., Jan. 9.—For the third time since the commitment of Harry K. Thaw to the state hospital for the insane at Matteawan his case came into court today, when arguments were made before Supreme Court Justice Tompkins on the writ of habeas corpus obtained by his mother, Mrs. Mary C. Thaw.

In the new proceedings Mrs. Thaw asks that her son's sanity be tested by a jury trial. She says, among other things, that her son is not a criminal, having been acquitted by a jury; that he is now sane and should not be kept a prisoner in the asylum.

In the previous attempts of Thaw to be freed from the asylum he was opposed by his mother, but after spending much time at Matteawan, visiting him daily, she is, she says, convinced that he is not insane.

Tabled Part Roosevelt Message.
Washington, Jan. 9.—After having made him the target all day for criticism, with here and there words of commendation, the house of representatives, last night, by a vote of 213 to 35, rebuked the president by tabling so much of his message as reflected on members of congress in connection with his recommendations regarding the secret service detectives.

Tang Shao Yi Recalled.
Peking, Jan. 9.—Tang Shao Yi, who is at present in Washington on a special diplomatic mission from the Chinese government, has been recalled to Peking. He will come back via Europe, leaving Washington immediately.

Memphis Protests Prohibition.
Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 9.—Memorable business and professional men met yesterday in mass meeting at the Merchants' exchange to protest against the passage of a prohibition law which would include Memphis in its operation.

NIGHT RIDERS SENTENCED.

SIX TO DIE ON GALLIES AND TWO GIVEN TWENTY YEARS.

Union City, Tenn., Jan. 9.—With a verdict of guilty in varying degrees the jury in the night rider trials reported at 1:45 p. m. yesterday.

Verdict of the Jury.
The twelve men found Garrett Johnson, T. D. Burton, Ray Hanson, Fred Pines, Arthur Clear and Sam Apple white guilty of murder in the first degree with mitigating circumstances, and Bud Morris and Bob Huffman, the other defendants, guilty of murder in the second degree, and fixed their punishment at twenty years in the penitentiary.

The punishment of the six first named defendants was left to the court and may be death or life imprisonment. The defense filed a motion for a new trial, which was set for hearing Saturday and which will be overruled, as indicated by the court, when sentence will be pronounced.

The court will sentence the six first named defendants to death.

Receiving Reception for "Fighting Bob." New York, Jan. 9.—In Carnegie hall tonight the Navy League of the United States will give a public military reception to Rear Admiral Robby D. Evans. The event is in celebration of his recent recovery from illness. All military and naval men have been asked to appear in uniform, and members of patriotic societies are to wear their insignia. Military formalities will be observed in the proceedings.

The famous guest on this occasion will make his debut as a lecturer. He has been induced by the league to tell publicly for the first time the story of the battleship cruise from Hampton Roads to San Francisco.

Democrats Get Together.
Chicago, Jan. 9.—With the purpose of getting together leaders of the Democratic party to discuss the party's future the Irregular club of this city welcomed five Democratic governors and governors elect at its Jackson day celebration today.

Among the men who will assemble at the club's board at its annual banquet tonight are Governor Johnson of Minnesota and Governor Burke of North Dakota, who have been re-elected, and Governors Elbert Harrison of Ohio, Marshall of Indiana and Shallenberger of Nebraska.

Roosevelt After Tillman.
Washington, Jan. 9.—For months Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, was shadowed by United States secret service detectives, who were acting under the direction of President Roosevelt.

The president claims he thought that Senator Tillman might be interested in a western "land grab," and he had the senator shadowed. The result of the investigation of the detectives is now before the senate.

Congress After Roosevelt.
Washington, Jan. 9.—The special committee concluded its consideration of the message yesterday and drafted its report, which will be presented by Representative Perkins, of New York. The unusual and extreme course advised by the committee—that of declining to consider any communication from any source which, in the judgment of the house, is not respectful—is likely to create a sensation when it is read.

Plea of Insanity for Hains.
Flushing, N. Y., Jan. 9.—The trial of Thornton Jenkins Hains passed today to that stage frequent in homicide cases, where testimony is developed from medical experts and alienists. Hains' counsel placed on the stand Dr. L. Samuel Manton, an alienist, who, after listening to a hypothetical question containing the lay facts regarding Captain Hains' sanity, declared that on August 15, when Captain Hains shot William E. Annis, he was suffering from "impulsive insanity."

HIGHER FREIGHT RATES SUSTAINED.

CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS AT NEW ORLEANS REVERSING DECREE OF JUDGE SPEER.

New Orleans, La., Jan. 7.—A decision of vast importance to the south and southwest, because it affects the question of an increase in freight rates on practically all the railroads in these sections, was handed down here yesterday by the United States circuit court of appeals, reversing the decree of Judge Emory Speer, of the southern district of Georgia, restraining the defendant railroads from putting the proposed increased freight tariffs into effect.

The decision was in the case of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company and others, appellants, against the Macon Grocery Company, appellee.

The opinion was by Judge McCormick, Judge Pardo concurring. Judge Shelby dissented.

It is expected that an appeal will be taken to the United States supreme court by the shipping interests, although the question of the proposed increase in rates is at present before the interstate commerce commission.

Educators Meet Today.

sion here with an address of welcome by President Jacob Gould Schurman of Cornell university, who is head of the association.

The program of the conference includes the presentation of papers on educational problems of importance now engaging the attention of colleges and universities.

Hauls Down His Flag.
New York, Jan. 7.—Rear Admiral Casper F. Goodrich, commandant of the New York navy yard and since the retirement of Admiral Evans the ranking rear admiral on the active list, was placed on the retired list today under the age limit. Admiral Goodrich, who is recognized as one of the ablest officers in the service, when he hauled down his flag today had been in active service nearly forty-four years.

Bribery Laid to Governor Patterson.
Union City, Tenn., Jan. 7.—After a bitter attack upon the governor of the state and an attempt to bring the killing of former United States Senator Edward Carmack into the night rider case, late yesterday afternoon, Rice Pierce, senior counsel for the accused night riders, was reprimanded by Judge Jones. Mr. Pierce was preparing to close, and was discussing the testimony of Fehring, Hogg and Morris, the three night riders, who turned state's evidence. He launched into a violent denunciation of Governor Patterson.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 7.—The dismembered body of Rev. John J. Carmichael, a Methodist minister, was found yesterday partially consumed by fire in the two heating stoves of one of his three churches near Columbus in the southeastern part of St. Clair county.

Investigation was begun at once to clear away a temporary uncertainty as to the identity of the victim, and to obtain clues regarding the murderer and the motive for the crime.

SCOURGE FOLLOWS EARTHQUAKE.

TYPHOID FEVER BROKEN OUT IN PROVINCES THAT WERE SHAKEN—EARTH STILL TREMBLING.

Rome, Jan. 6.—The report from Messina that typhoid fever has broken out there, has filled the authorities with alarm and apprehension. It is realized here that unless proper sanitary precautions are taken at once the disease may spread far outside the ruined districts. Even though the present cases may prove to be dysentery, it is well known that this disease under such conditions as prevail at Messina and Reggio would be likely to prove just as fatal as typhoid.

King Victor Emmanuel received Ambassador Griscom, who presented him with the steamer Bayern, in the name of the American relief committee, representing the American people. The Bayern is loaded with provisions and medical supplies and is ready to proceed to the straits of Messina. The king was greatly pleased and said that the Americans were always first.

Congress May Take Drastic Action Regarding Message.

Washington, Jan. 6.—President Roosevelt's special message in regard to the secret service may be drastically treated by the house.

After the meeting of that committee yesterday, a report spread that the committee would recommend to the house that that portion of the annual message referring to the secret service be expunged from the record.

Another report was that the recent message in regard to the request of the house for more information on the subject would be returned to the chief executive.

War on Prohibition is Begun Today.

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 7.—Before Judge Thomas G. Jones of the United States circuit court here today the fight against the new Alabama prohibition law was begun in the shape of arguments for a restraining order. The contest is being watched with intense interest throughout the southern states, in view of the wave of prohibition laws that has swept through those states recently.

In a petition filed in the United States circuit court on behalf of a brewing company of Evansville, Ind., it is alleged that the law is unconstitutional and will mean a loss to the company of $125,000 a year. The law is also said to be in violation of the interstate commerce act.

Standard Not Free Yet.

Night for Belles and Beaus.

Washington, Jan. 6.—With the belle's cotillon tonight the social season in the national capital will begin formally.

All of Washington's socially prominent young women, as well as many of the younger married set, will be at the cotillon. Among the buds will be Miss Carrie Munn, Miss Martha Bacon, Miss Elizabeth Parker and others of Miss Roosevelt's set, as well as the White House debutantes. Another prominent figure will be Miss Katherine Hines, whose "affair" with the Duke of Abruzzi filled so much newspaper space a short time ago.

MESSAGE LAUGHED.

CONGRESS IN HIGH SPIRIT PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TAKEN SERIOUSLY.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Jokes precipitated the laughter which marked the session of congress yesterday. Laughter on the floor of the house, despite the solemnity of the special message on the secret service sent to the lower house by President Roosevelt. At the time of the reading, Judge Griggs cured the floor and moved messages be returned to the president. This was unheeded for, and effect of a bomb. Immediately Judge was surrounded by his cratic colleagues. Champ C. Bourke Cockran, who was near the Georgian, appealed to withdraw his motion.

Judge Griggs finally withdrew his motion, which had been offered as an amendment to that of Mr. Griggs providing for the reference of the special message to the committee which had considered the original message, to which congress was then adjourned.

Prohibition for Tennessee.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 5.—The Tennessee legislature, which assembled yesterday, was organized by the advocates of state-wide prohibition. Speaker of the senate, while Mr. Taylor, of Gibson county, moved over the house. Both belong to the anti-administration faction of the ocratic party.

Yesterday's action is a definite adherence of Governor Patterson who are opposing the prohibition of state-wide prohibition. It was brought about by a coalition of republicans and anti-Pattersons.

Rebates Must Be Paid by C. & N. O.

Washington, Jan. 5.—The case of the government against Chicago and Alton Railroad Company in the United States circuit court in the northern district of Illinois, which the company and its officers were fined $60,000 on the charge of making a refund to Kansas City, are as terminal charges, was yesterday decided by the supreme court of the United States against the company.

The magnificent sum of $500,000 granted almost immediately after reception in both houses of a message from the president calling attention to the calamity and the pressing need for aid for the stricken state.

Whelan, of Hill county, has won the first prize and prizes at the contest at Omaha, over all contestants for the corn in the southern zone.

MONSTER PETITION FOR WOMEN SUFFRAGE

not want to vote, the suffragists of the United States are now engaged in securing signatures to a petition asking Congress to submit to the legislatures of the several states for ratification on amendment to the national constitution which shall enfranchise women. The work has been organized on a large scale than ever before attempted and is in charge of no less a person than Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, the president of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance, who directs activities from a headquarters established for this purpose at 29 E. 26th street, New York City. Here a force of competent clerks and a body of volunteer helpers meet out the blanks and leak of the returns.

Mrs. Catt is one of the best known workers in the woman suffrage cause in the world, and indeed may be said to belong to the world for she was born in Wisconsin, reared and educated in Iowa, was the first woman reporter in the city of San Francisco, lived in the State of Washington and later removed to New York. When Susan B. Anthony retired from the active leadership of the National American Woman Suffrage Association in 1900, Mrs. Chapman Catt was unanimously elected President. In 1904 She became president of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance, which, in the few short years of its existence, has grown into an affiliation of National organizations for sixteen countries. The President of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance is just as simple and sweet in her manner, just as Democratic and unpolished as the young woman who came from "Out West" years ago and commenced work in the National Association as Chairman of its Organization committee.

Over one hundred persons lost their lives in a mine explosion at Bluefield W. Va., on Tuesday. Two weeks ago fifty men were killed in the same mine by a similar explosion.

It is to be hoped that the bill for the development of the Coosa river will be passed by Congress. It would mean a great deal to this section.

The bill provides that the government and private electric companies shall co-operate in the building and using of dams for both lockage and manufacturing purposes, so as to prevent damming the river too much, and to save money. It will also make the government much more willing to appropriate the necessary money.

The State Examiners of Public Accounts having finished their examination of the books of several counties and those institutions under control of the State, submitted its report to the Governor.

In Chilton county there is an error in assessment amounting to $386.43 due the State.

The census bureau Saturday reported 12,470,236 running bales of cotton ginned from the growth of 1908 to January 1 last against 9,951,505 a year ago and 27,386 ginneries operated against 27,376 a year ago. The percentage of the whole crop ginned to January 1, is 90 per cent for 1909 and 90.4 for 1908.

"The man who grows an abundance of grain, hay, chickens, eggs, pigs and other things to eat, and with which he can supply his own wants and that of his local market, is the man who is at all times independent of the price of cotton to sustain him. Nobody ever heard of the creditor, or the sheriff making life miserable to the man who has a full smoke house and corn crib. Such farmers are not bowed with debts due to the supply merchant or the local bank. Such men do not feel the depressing influences of hard times, low prices or panic. They sleep well at night, meet the whole world with a smile of peaceful contentment and are always ready with a hearty hand shake and with the latchet on the outside of their hospitable homes. They feel the powerful and fascinating influences of perfect contentment at all times and are what you would truly typify as independent husbands. The man who depends wholly on cotton and the credit system to carry him from year to year will always have a hard and rocky road to travel. There are hundreds of thousands in the south who each year travel this road, and they will never see better times until they fall into line and live at home, instead of on the supply merchant and the credit system. Pick out the independent and successful farmers in any cotton growing country and go upon their premises and the success of their farming is soon found in the well filled corn cribs, hay stacks, smoke houses and good gardens."—Cotton Journal.

Zoology and Flags.
Zoology figures very largely on the flags of different nations. On the British royal standard is the lion. It was Richard Coeur de Lion, by the way, who altered the device from leopards to lions on the king's standard. The eagle appears on the standards of both Russia and Germany and both the lion and the eagle on that of Spain. Bulgaria has a lion, China a dragon and Mexico a bird quarreling with a snake. Taken together with the animals that appear on national arms, the royal unicorns and Australian emu and kangaroo, a fairly comprehensive collection could be made from national emblems.

Inconceivable.
Brown—It's curious about people's beliefs. They will give entire credence to the most absurd things and get so faith whatever in the most obvious truths. Black—Yes, I've noticed it. There's Green, now. He hasn't the least confidence in hash, but he'll eat all the croquettes and mince pie you can set before him.—Exchange.

PROHIBITION IN TENNESSEE

In a special message to the Legislature of Tennessee Governor Patterson discussed in detail the subject of State-wide prohibition.

He declared that State-wide prohibition is fundamentally and profoundly wrong as a governmental policy and does not accomplish the result hoped for. He says it violates the plainest and most obvious rule of individual actions and personal freedom. He declared that the use or non-use of liquor should be left to the individual. He reviews the legislation by States on this subject, declaring that States cannot prevent the manufacture of liquor in other States and the shipment from other States. He declares that until the United States forbids the manufacture and sale of liquor, it is not possible to have a prohibition law.

He declares that to destroy the value of existing plants without remuneration is confiscation without compensation. He asserts that prohibition States are filled with open and secret violations of the law and that the abolition of the sale of liquor by law is an "impossibility and an empty dream."

The Governor says it is a choice between the regulation and control by law and the secret or open violation of the law. The Governor declares that the regulation and control of the saloons is the best solution of a difficult problem. He recommends, therefore, high license, strict regulation and a forfeiture of license for violations of the law. He makes a strong plea for local option, for permitting the people of each community to voice their sentiments on the subject, declaring that this is in accordance with Democratic principles.

He asserts that a majority of the people are not demanding State-wide prohibition. They have spoken more than once on this proposition. He says there is nothing in the divine law which makes prohibition itself a moral issue. He urges that the Legislature proceed with deliberation and caution and with due regard for the welfare of the State.

He recommends that no bill or bills be passed prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquor in Tennessee. He reviews Democratic legislation on the temperance question, declaring that it was understood that this question would be eliminated from politics after the passage of the Pendleton bill. He recommends that the people of La Follette, Chattanooga, Nashville and Memphis be given an opportunity to declare for themselves whether they want liquor manufactered and sold in their communities and if they do, that a law be passed to prohibit it, but if they do not so express themselves that their wishes be respected.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 12.—At 5:02 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Senate Bill No. 1, providing for the prohibition of the sale of liquor within four miles of any schoolhouse in Tennessee, passed third and final reading in the Senate. The vote was 20 to 13. Senators Barkerville, of Sumner, and Swab, of Claiborne, voting with the eighteen who have been known as "State-widlers."

It is expected that the House will pass the bill tomorrow.

NOT SHOT

Funny things happen in different parts of the world, but this is a new one from California.

It rained hot bird shot at Santa Cruz, Cal., one day last week for nearly an hour, according to Mrs. W. H. Burns and her neighbors. Some of the shots have been preserved. Mrs. Burns' curiosity was aroused by the peculiar antics of a number of barefoot children who were playing in front of her house.

When she asked them what was the matter they told her that the air was full of electricity and that hot shot was falling from the clouds. She then heard a clatter on the house top that sounded like hail, and she saw little white threads of steam arising from the neighboring roofs. This steam was found to be the result of the dropping of little hot globules on the damp shingles.

This molten rain continued from about 3 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and varied in intensity. At one time the children, who were bare headed and unshod, were compelled to take to cover. One boy carried a burn on finger where one of the hot pellets struck him.

One theory to account for the phenomenon is that the metallic rain was due to a meteor. The pellets are about the size of No. 8 shot and resemble lead.

Big Still Raided.

Stored away behind rocks in a desert island of the Coosa river, in Coosa county, Revenue Agent Knox Booth and deputies discovered one of the largest stills ever found in the state last week. Thomas Davis is held by bail. Over 100 gallons of beer were destroyed. The still was reached by boats from the shore and guarded by men on the banks.

Going Too Far.

At a school exhibition a juvenile electionist got up to recite the first piece of his life. He was ambitious. He wished to make a great success of his piece, and he had been told by his teacher that the secret of elocution was the gesture—for every phrase its fitting gesture. The opening line of the boy's selection was, "The comet lifts its tail of fire." The overzealous boy, to fit its proper gesture to this line, lifted up the tail of his coat and held it out in a horizontal position.

The Fare.

This is how a driver of the prison van, known as Black Maria, distinguished himself. A would be wit on the causeway hailed him: "Got any room inside, Robert?" "There's room for one," replied the driver. "We keep it for you." Not entirely disconcerted, the wit made another shot. "What's your fare?" he asked. The answer entirely extinguished him. "Bread and water—same as you had before!"—Pittsburgh Weekly.

A Dollar is Wise Advertising is as Good as a dollar in Bonds.

Some young men engaged in the advertising business have asked advice as to the best kind of work in the advertising line for a young man to take up. The best kind of work in any line is the most honest, the kind that gives the best results to those that patronize it. If you go into business, go into a good honest business. If you undertake to advertise something, undertake something of which you can be proud, something that you would sell to your own brother as well as to strangers.

If you are proprietor as well as advertiser of the article, make sure that you are not throwing away your time and your money in advertising what is not good. A man who puts money into advertising ought to feel that his money is being permanently and safely invested, though he had put it into bonds, mortar or building material of any kind. Every dollar in advertising should be a brick in a structure that will permanently pay on the investment.

The advertisement that lists and continues must be the advertisement of something worthy, or else it means every dollar of advertising means a dollar spent in enlightening the people concerning a fraud, and it means the end of the advertiser just so much sooner.

The man who advertises in the right direction prides himself on having the confidence of the people and earning it. He looks upon advertising simply as a short road to public confidence.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, fullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Peptic is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

A ONE NIGHT CONVERT.

Incident in the Temperance Career of Father Mathew.

In 1843, when Father Mathew was crusading for total abstinence in London, he created no small amusement for a large party at the hospitable mansion of an Irish nobleman by his attempts, partly playful, but also partly serious, to make a convert of Lord Brougham, who resisted good humorously, but resolutely, the efforts of his zealous neighbor. The incident is related by Katharine Tynan in her biography of Father Mathew.

"I drink very little wine," said Brougham, "only half a glass at luncheon and two half glasses at dinner. And, though my medical adviser told me I should increase the quantity, I refused to do so."

"He was wrong, my lord, for advising you to increase the quantity, and you were wrong in taking the small quantity you do," said Father Mathew, "but I have my hopes of you."

And so, after a pleasant resistance on the part of the learned lord, Father Mathew invested his lordship with the silver medal and ribbon, the insignia and collar of the "new order of the Bath."

"Then I will keep it," said Brougham, "and take it to the house, where I shall be sure to meet old Lord—the worse for liquor, and I will put it on him."

The announcement of this intention was received with much laughter, for the noble lord referred to was notorious for his potations.

Lord Brougham was as good as his word, for on meeting the veteran peer he said, "Lord —, I have a present from Father Mathew for you," and passed the ribbon rapidly over his neck.

"Then I tell you what it is, Brougham. I will keep sober for this night," was the peer's unexpected response. And he kept this vow, to the amusement of his friends.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Signs We Saw, and Some We Saw Not.

About the hardest thing for a man to understand is something that emanates from the brain of a woman.

The majority of the rising young men of today run elevators.

People who live in stone houses should never throw glasses.

In the time of peace, prepare for war articles in the magazines.

The corkscrew is often mightier than the pen or sword.

One coat of tar and feathers will last a man a life time.

The young widow is not always as mournful as she is dressed.

Ignorance of the law excuses no one—except the man with a pull.

Kong Natives and Their Dead.

"In the matter of preserving bodies for burial Kongos, after the usual bidding in cloth, keep them for two or three months in their houses, where a fire is kept burning, but in Zombo they are suspended on two forked sticks in a dugout vault in the ground, which is covered over with palm branches and earth," says a missionary.

"Sometimes the body is placed under a specially built grass roof in the open. This is not considered a burial, and some years ago they brought out for a big funeral feast and dance the body of an important chief that had thus been preserved for over twenty years. In other districts the dead are thrown away into a river or into the bush to be devoured by jackals and vultures."

A Lame Excuse.

"A French sentinel in Algeria," said a playwright, "had for his colonel a very tall, lanky, round shouldered man. This round shouldered colonel one night was making a quiet inspection. Passing the sentinel, he found, to his rage and indignation, that he was not challenged. So he returned to the man and roared:

"You didn't challenge me?"

"No, sir," faltered the sentinel, stammering.

"Well, why didn't you?" the colonel demanded.

"Excuse me, sir," said the sentinel, "but I thought—I beg your pardon, sir—I thought you was a camel."

His Denomination.

A man who had been playing golf with a clergyman heard him swear two or three times under his breath. Suspecting the lapse, he could not be sure of it until one monosyllabic came out with unmistakable clearness. After he had finished the match a friend of his said: "I saw you playing just now with the Rev. Mr. Dash. Of what denomination is he?"

"Of what denomination is he?" replied his late opponent, "but I should call him a Profanitarian."—Argonaut.

Without Horns.

A clergyman was an important witness in a horse dealing case. He gave a somewhat confused account of the transaction in dispute, and the cross examining counsel, after making several blistering but ineffective attempts to obtain a more satisfactory statement, said:

"Pray, sir, do you know the difference between a horse and a cow?"

"I acknowledge my ignorance," replied the reverend gentleman. "I hardly know the difference between a horse and a cow or between a bull and a bull—only a bull, I am told, has horns, and a bull—here he made a respectful bow to the advocate—"luckily for me, has none."

Beans, Spanish Style.

Soak overnight two cupsful of white or pink beans. In the morning boil with a pinch of soda fifteen minutes and drain. Fry one large sliced onion with a piece of pork or bacon. Add to the beans; also a cup of canned tomatoes, two shredded chili peppers, salt and sufficient hot water to cover well. Boil briskly for ten minutes on the stove before putting in the cooker. Leave in for five hours.—Good Housekeeping.

Dental Incubation.

"Tommy," said the visiting uncle, "seems to me that baby sister of yours is pretty slow. She hasn't any teeth yet, has she?"

"She's got plenty of teeth," replied the indignant Tommy. "She's got a whole mouthful of teeth, only they ain't hatched yet."—Woman's Home Companion.

Barefaced.

"Freddie," said the visitor, "I hear your father gave you a watch on your birthday. Was it a hunting case watch?"

"No, ma'am," replied Freddie. "It was a barefaced watch."—Exchange.

IN MEMORY.

On Jan. 11 the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Stevens and took from them their sweet little babe, Elvora, age 10 months. She is gone but not forgotten. Weep not dear father and mother, for our loss is heaven's gain. The Lord said suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not for such is the kingdom of heaven. The Lord does everything well. He has called her home to rest. She is sleeping calmly sleeping in the arms of Jesus. We are sadly weeping for our loved one gone away.

CONCORD CHURCH BURNED.

Early on Tuesday morning, about two o'clock, it was discovered that the church building was on fire, although how the fire originated is open to conjecture.

A singing school had been conducted there on Monday, and adjourned at 4 p.m. and ten hours later the building was being destroyed by fire. At 9 p.m. Grady Armstrong passed the church and noticed nothing wrong.

The church was a nice building and furnished with a fine organ, good seats, etc., and was recently repainted. Now all is a mass of ruins. $500 insurance was carried, but the loss is a grievous one.

The singing school was continued on Tuesday at the Walnut Creek Methodist church, the brethren kindly coming to the relief of the sufferers.

Prof. H. M. Eagle lost about $25 worth of books, and all the song books of the church were destroyed.

THE CLANTON BANK

CLANTON, ALA.

The true secret of success is thrift in all its phases, and, principally, thrift as applied to saving. A young man may have many friends but he will find none so steadfast, so constant, so ready to respond to his wants, so capable of pushing him ahead, as a little leather-covered book, with the name of a bank on its cover. Saving is the first great principle of all success. It creates independence, it gives a young man standing, it fills him with vigor, it stimulates him with the proper energy; in fact, it brings to him the best part of any success—happiness and contentment. If it were possible to inject the quality of saving into every boy, we would have a great many more real men.

STRANGER THAN FICTION.

The Way the Captain of a Slave Trader Was Convicted.

Romance writers are often blamed for making the plots of their stories turn upon slight chances and improbable incidents, but here is an incident in real life stranger than fiction.

In 1700 the cutter Sparrow brought the brig Nancy into harbor at Kingston, Jamaica, under suspicion that she was engaged in the slave trade. But, although many circumstances pointed to this fact, no clear proof could be obtained, as the brig had no papers from which the charge could be substantiated. The suspected vessel was therefore discharged, but the day before she left the harbor a man-of-war arrived, bringing some documents that clearly proved her guilt.

These papers had been obtained in a "highly improbable manner." While cruising off the coast of Santo Domingo the crew of the man-of-war had amused themselves by fishing for sharks. One monster was captured and cut up on deck, and in its stomach was found a bundle of ship's papers, the very documents hung overboard by the captain of the Nancy when he was boarded by the Sparrow.

Curiousity led the captain of the man-of-war to clean and examine the papers, and the result was, that he brought them before the authorities at the nearest port. The unlucky brig was condemned on this romantically acquired evidence.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Brilliant Reception Closed Taft Visit.

Atlanta, Jan. 12.—A fitting and brilliant climax to the visit to Atlanta of President-Elect William Howard Taft, of Ohio, was the reception at the Capital City Club Saturday night. The reception, which was elegant in every detail, and brought together a distinguished company of Atlanta's beauty and civility, was the closing event of a day which had been a busy one for the next president, and when it was over, he was escorted to the Union depot, where he boarded the train of the Georgia railroad for Augusta. This train was to have left Atlanta at midnight, but was held, and Mr. Taft left shortly before 2 o'clock Sunday morning.

Beginning the day with an automobile ride, which was taken in a driving rain, Judge Taft visited the Georgia School of Technology, and made an address, which was loudly cheered by the young engineers in training there. He was then carried to Big Bethel African Methodist Episcopal church, where he addressed the negroes of the city at 11 o'clock. At the close of this address, Judge Taft was taken to the Union depot, and a special train on the Seaboard was taken for Athens, where an address was made to the students of the University of Georgia. At 1 o'clock, the Taft party returned to Atlanta, and Judge Taft went to the Piedmont Hotel, where he rested until 9 o'clock, when he was escorted to the Capital City Club for the reception.

CELEBRATING FOE CENTENARY.

EXERCISES BEGUN TODAY AT UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA WILL CONTINUE FOUR DAYS.

Washington, Jan. 12.—With the opening today of the room of Edgar Allan Poe at the University of Virginia as a Poe museum the national celebration of the centenary of the great writer's birth began.

There will be no one great central celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the poet's birth, which occurs Jan. 19. A number of separate celebrations, however, will be held in his honor—one in Boston where he was born; one at the University of Virginia, where he was educated; another in Providence, R. I., where, after the death of his wife, he wooed Mrs. Sarah Helen Whitman, also a poet; another in New York, where he lived the closing years of his life; and one in Baltimore, where he died three years ago.

Two celebrations will be held in New York City on Jan. 13, one at Columbia university, where Thomas Nelson Page, the Virginia author, will be one of the speakers, and another at Fordham college and New York university.

Taft Pleased With the South.

Atlanta, Jan. 12.—When the Taft smile met the "possum grin" last night, the apex of the most brilliant and at the same time most unique banquet ever given a national figure was reached. It marked the height of happiness at one of the most notable gatherings ever witnessed in the new south.

The occasion was the banquet tendered President-Elect William Howard Taft by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and held in the new Auditorium-Armory, just nearing completion, and brought to a brilliant close the first of the two-day visit made to this city by the man who is soon to become the chief magistrate of the United States.

"I expect to spare no effort to find out the facts in respect to the character of the proposed appointees, and so far as in me lies to select those whose character and reputation and standing in the community commend them to their fellow-citizens as persons qualified and able to discharge their duties well, the real attitude of a president toward the nation toward the south depends upon the character of the men it appoints to office."

President-elect Taft in the foregoing words at the banquet given by the chamber of commerce last night gave a voluntary pledge to the south, which is sure to greatly endear him to people in every community of this section.

Judge Taft declared: "I may not succeed in winning the south, but the south has already won me."

Child in Earthquake Ruins Still Alive.

Rogio, Jan. 12.—A child of five years was taken from the ruins of a building here yesterday, entirely uninjured, having lain beneath the debris for eighteen days. An officer in passing heard the low moaning of the child and immediately began a search, delving in the direction from which the cries came. As he worked a wall fell and he was seriously injured, but even this did not deter him in his heroic effort and he continued his task until he had rescued the imprisoned child.

The work of excavation and the exhumation of bodies continues. The population is calm.

Eulogizing Senator Whyte.

Washington, Jan. 12.—Today does not exist on the calendar of the United States senate so far as the transaction of public business is concerned. Differences with the president, with the house of representatives and other causes of vexation were forgotten in the homage paid to the memory of the late William Pinkney Whyte, senator from Maryland, who died last March at the age of eighty-four, after long public service.

The address of eulogy was delivered by Senator Ryner of Maryland, colleague of the late statesman.

TAFT EATS POSSUM.

GUEST OF HONOR AT BANQUET
IN ATLANTA, CITY'S GREATEST AFFAIR, NEVER BEFORE HAVE SUCH PREPARATIONS BEEN MADE TO WELCOME A VISITOR TO GEORGIA'S CAPITAL.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 12.—Never in the history of Atlanta, not even in the halcyon times "before the war," has the city seen a day like this. The city is astir with excitement over the coming of President-Elect William H. Taft, who will be the city's guest for twenty-four hours. Only one thing mars the occasion in the opinion of Atlantans. That is the absence of Mrs. Taft, for whom the ladies of Atlanta had planned a warm reception. It was announced with regret by the president elect that a previous engagement with their son at Yale would prevent her coming here.

The climax of Atlanta's attentions to Mr. Taft was the chamber of commerce banquet. Six hundred and fifty sat down to dine, with the president elect on a menu composed mainly of famous southern delicacies. The piece de resistance were baked opossum, with baked sweet potatoes on the right of him, on the left of him, under him and heaped over him. The possum was included in the bill of fare at Mr. Taft's request.

The banquet was held in the new Armory auditorium. The dining hall had been turned into a grand symphony of color. Behind the speakers' table, which was about seventy feet long and which was placed against the wall, there was festooned a gigantic United States flag, made up of ferns, flowers and electric lights. The stars in the flag made of white electric lights and the other colors furnished in the same way, while the whole was artistically blended with the choicest of hothouse flowers. The lights so rise and fall as to give the appearance that the flag is waving.

For Canadian-Yankee Canal.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—The advancement of the idea of an international trunk line inland waterway is the purpose of a meeting held here today by a deputation of business men from the United States and officials of the Dominion government. The letter were headed by Premier Laurier, who is interested in the project. The object of the deputation's visit is mainly to discuss plans for the improvement of the Robeson river and the Champlain canal to correspond with the improvements now being made to the Champlain canal, thus making a great inland waterway through Lake Champlain between the Dominion metropolis and New York.

Topoka, Kan., Hotel Burned.

Topoka, Kan., Jan. 12.—The Copeland hotel, a famous stopping place for legislators and politicians, and situated at Ninth and Kansas avenues, one block from the state capitol, was destroyed by fire that started shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday morning. Every room was occupied, the guests numbering about 100, among them many persons of prominence throughout the state. The flames burned with such remarkable rapidity that most of the occupants were forced to make their escape by way of the fire escapes. Many jumped to save their lives and received more or less serious injuries.

A dozen persons were injured, suffering from broken limbs and bruises, and one person is missing.

Vice Admiral Rojstvensky Dead.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 12.—The death is announced of Vice Admiral Rojstvensky, who was in command of the Russian fleet in May, 1906, when it was practically annihilated by the Japanese in the battle of the sea of Japan.

The death of Vice Admiral Rojstvensky, which occurred in St. Petersburg yesterday, was due to neuralgia of the heart.

Sergei Petrovitch Rojstvensky, who was about 60 years old, had been in the Russian naval service the greater part of his life.

TENNESSEE GOES DRY.

ALL SALOONS IN THE STATE MUST CLOSE DOORS JULY 1ST.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 12.—The bill to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquor in Tennessee passed the lower house of the general assembly last evening at 6:15 o'clock. The vote was 62 to 34. Fifty voters is a majority. Twenty-two republicans voted for and one against the measure.

The measure passed is the one favorably acted on yesterday by the senate and now goes to Governor Patterson. He is expected to veto it, but under the constitution his veto only operates as a suggestion, not as a stay, and a bare majority may pass a bill over the executive's unfavorable action.

The governor is allowed to hold a bill five days. If at the expiration of this time it has not been returned to the assembly, it becomes a law without his signature. State-widened maintain that the governor's action is not material, as his veto will not be sustained. The bill provides that prohibition become effective July 1, 1909.

Roosevelt Rode 98 Miles on Horseback.

Washington, Jan. 14.—President Roosevelt rode 98 miles on horseback yesterday and when he dismounted last night at the white house door, more than seventeen hours after having departed therefrom, he did not show any marked signs of weariness.

The object of his long day in the saddle, he explained after his return, was to "prove to the critics who have found fault with the recent order requiring all army and navy officers to take a physical test, that if a president, who is not in training, can ride 90 miles plus in one day without being laid up in bed thereby, it should not be too much to ask the men who are supposed to be in the best of physical training all the time to ride 90 miles in three days."

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 14.—Judge Thomas G. Jones, of the United States district court for the middle district of Alabama, yesterday denied the injunction asked for against the Carmichael prohibition law.

EXPLOSION KILLS 100 MEN.

MINE EXPLOSION IN W. VA. SECOND IN TWO WEEKS IN SAME MINE.

Bluefield, W. Va., Jan. 12.—An explosion yesterday in the mines of the Lick Branch colliery snuffed out over 100 lives. In these same mines, two weeks ago, to a day, fifty miners were killed by a similar explosion.

In the quiet of the early morning hours there came, like the sound of thunder, a mighty rumbling in the bowels of the earth.

Scarcely had the detonation died away before a throng of terrorized women and children rushed to the mine mouth and implored there to allow them to aid in the effort to save some of their loved ones, who might still be alive within.

Mine Foreman Bowers, who was near the entrance, was blown from his feet, but managed to crawl out safely, as did also Robert Smith, a miner. With the foreman was a miner named Holliday, and he, too, was blown over. A rescue party organized on the moment, rushed into the jaws of the smoking mine, and tried to rescue him. They were driven back by the deadly fumes of the after-gases, and were compelled to leave him to his fate.

The explosion was in a different part of the mine from that of two weeks ago. Since the catastrophe the mine has been inspected by government officials and by the most experienced men in the region, and all, it is said, expressed the opinion that it was safe.

One rescue party came into sight of six bodies, but was forced back. The latest estimate of the number of men entombed is more than 100. That all of them are dead there can be no doubt. The fire in the mine and the deadly gases, to say nothing of the awful force of the explosion, precludes any chance of rescuing any of the men alive.

Favor Wise Use of Trees.

Washington, Jan. 12.—In line with President Roosevelt and other authorities, federal and state, on the matter of the conservation of the national resources is the American Forestry association, which began a two days' session here today. The meeting was opened by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, the retiring president of the association.

The object of the association is "the promotion of a businesslike and conservative use and treatment of the forest resources of the country." The association was organized in 1882. There are branch associations in twenty states.

Among the speakers who will address the association's meetings are Clifford Pinchot, chief of the federal forest service; Dr. Robert S. Sauer, editor of the Review of Forestry; Professor H. S. Graves, of the Yale forestry school and J. B. Blandell of Louisiana, president of the national rivers and harbors congress.

Rome, Ga., Again Visited by Fire.

Rome, Ga., Jan. 12.—A fire, which started in the heart of the business district of Rome last night, and which for a time, threatened to surpass the $100,000 conflagration of two weeks ago, resulted in an estimated loss of more than $25,000.

The fire started in the ivory stables of Lindsay & Hicks, totally destroying the property, with about 20 head of horses.

The fire spread to the Third Avenue hotel, which was in course of construction, destroying it.

The Wilkerson block, owned by the heirs of Mrs. I. T. Wilkerson, caught next, and the four stores were soon engulfed in flame.

The Rome Publishing Company, job printers, occupied a part of the Wilkerson building.

Bearer of Historic Name on Today

San Francisco, Jan. 12.—The witness today the unusual of the calling for trial on a charge of a grandson of a veteran of the United States and one of the greatest names in the history of American statesmanship.

The accused man is Patrick J. Calhoun, son of John C. Calhoun and one of the most prominent figures in the street railroad world of the States. The charge against him is bribery in connection with the granting of a franchise to the Francisco company by the supervisors.

The case was before Judge William Patrick in the superior court. Calhoun is president of the Railroads of San Francisco, and is connected with which his name is connected has caused the conviction of the company.

notice in labor matters. Prior to his appointment to the bench of the District of Columbia in 1903 he was judge of the common pleas of Hamilton, O., and rendered several decisions favorable to the labor cause.

His most important judicial decision was when he is in the manufacturing companies refused to use union labels on their labor was employed by Wright is a native of Cincinnati and is forty-four years old. His father was a lawyer and he served on the bench of Ohio. The story is that Judge Wright succeeded on the common pleas bench of his refusal to obey the George B. Cox, boss of Hamilton.

His appointment to his present position was made after his retirement from the bench. He practiced before the United States courts of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky and won an excellent reputation.

"You Can't Lose." Mr. Brisbane said, with a sour face at the recent dinner to Lord Dufferin in New York: "There is another type of editor in this man, through foolishness, a lot of money—say in libel but he easily recovers his loss. His reporters' wages 10 per cent."

Gardner of Massachusetts. Congressman Augustus Penbody of Massachusetts, leader of the movement to reform the rules of the house of representatives, is one of the most ardent parliamentarians in the body. A few days ago he sprung the old guard and, though easily defeated, won a practical victory for those who favor reform by having the rules amended to allow the use of the hands in the hands of members.

Gardner was not at all cast by his experience. He called it "a lesson in the hands of the members." He said, "but out of all this I have learned the value of the hands."

John's Geography Lesson. It was during a geography lesson, and the teacher explained: "On your right is the south, your left is the north, and in front of you is the east. Now, John, what is behind you?" John studied for a moment; then, frowning, he exclaimed: "I just knew you'd say something. I told you you'd notice the patch on my pants!"

Nothing Like. A little girl was sitting at her soup one day at dinner, evidently enjoying it very much, when she innocently remarked: "My soup isn't a bit like the soup we had the day papa and I had dinner at the hotel in St. It tasted of nothing."

FOR THE CHILDREN

Old, but Convenient. Here is a unique way of telling on what day of the week each month begins in any year but a leap year. All you have to know is on what day of the week the year began and the words of the following couplet:

At Dover Court George Howard, Esquire, Good Christopher French and David Price. There are twelve words in these lines, one for each month of the year. To illustrate the method take the month of May of the year 1903, which was not a leap year. May is the fifth month. Recite the words until you come to the fifth, which is Brown, and that, you see, begins with B, the second letter of the alphabet. Now, as 1903 began on Thursday, you count that one and Friday two; therefore May, 1903, began on Friday. As another illustration take the ninth month, September. The ninth word in the couplet is French, the first letter of which is the sixth letter of the alphabet. Counting from Thursday, as before, because on that day the year began, the sixth day is Tuesday, on which day the month of September began.—Chicago News.

Strange Animal Friendship. According to a traveler, a lioness that was kept in captivity in Somaliland adopted a bull terrier. There were several bull terrier puppies near the place where she was confined, and once in a while the lioness would come close to the cage. Then she would snarl and the puppies would scamper back. But there was one that seemed to have the good will of the lioness, for one day when he approached the cage instead of growling she showed signs of pleasure.

The puppy was encouraged, and after blinking at the lioness he walked boldly in. To the surprise of the keeper, who was expecting to see the puppy quickly killed, the lioness stretched out her huge paw and gently drew the dog in. The little fellow was delighted with his reception, and he snuggled into her warm fur. The curious thing was that the lioness would have nothing to do with the other puppies. If they came to the cage to see how their little brother was getting along she would growl at them in tones so loud and menacing that they were frightened off.

Tree Riddles. What tree is formed by two letters of the alphabet? L M (Elm). What tree is most dapper? Spruce. What tree is the most melancholy? Weeping willow. What tree is proud of being a parent? Papaw. What tree is a sorry invalid? Sycamore.

What tree is used in building materials? Lime. What tree keeps one warm in winter? Fir. What tree does history make constant use of? Date.

Whips From a Tree. In the island of Jamaica there grows a tree with the botanical name of Daphne lagetto, from the branches of which native workmen make peculiarly strong and excellent whips. These whips have the handle and lash all in one piece. The handle consists of a part of the stem retaining the bark. For the lash the stem is deprived of bark and then split into strips, which are woven together in a flexible cord six or seven feet long. The proper taper is afforded by detaching more and more of the strips as the end of the lash is approached.

A Geographical Game. Here is an amusing as well as instructive game: Give each player a slip of paper and a pencil and request her to write the name of some city she has studied about in geography. When they have done so collect the papers, shuffle them and then distribute them to the players. Each one must give some good fact about the city written on her paper, or if she fails she must give a forfeit or tell a story about some historical place in her own city.

Conundrums. What is the difference between a barber and a mother? One has razors to share, the others shavers to raise. Why are fowls the most economical things a farmer can keep? Because for every grain they give a peck. What would you call a boy who eats green apples? A pains-taking youngster.

What other name would you call an eavesdropper? An eicle. When is a bill like a gun? When it is presented and discharged.

John's Geography Lesson. It was during a geography lesson, and the teacher explained: "On your right is the south, your left is the north, and in front of you is the east. Now, John, what is behind you?" John studied for a moment; then, frowning, he exclaimed: "I just knew you'd say something. I told you you'd notice the patch on my pants!"

Nothing Like. A little girl was sitting at her soup one day at dinner, evidently enjoying it very much, when she innocently remarked: "My soup isn't a bit like the soup we had the day papa and I had dinner at the hotel in St. It tasted of nothing."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson IV.—First Quarter, For Jan. 24, 1903.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts II, 1-23. Memory Verses 9, 10—Golden Text, Acts II, 16—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Copyright, 1902, by American Bible Association. In this chapter we have another testimony from Peter to the power of the risen, living Christ in the presence of a large congregation in the temple, who were gathered to see the man who had been lame from his birth now perfectly healed. In this discourse Peter looks back not only to the death and resurrection of Christ, but away farther back to the prophecies concerning Him and to the covenant made with Abraham and then onward to the time of His coming again to restore all things of which the prophets have spoken. Thus we have another example of the contents of the Scriptures and how to use them—the humiliation and suffering of Christ, the center of all, and the kingdom the circumference. See in I Pet. I, 11; 12, 13; I, 1, his repeated references to the sufferings of Christ and the glory that shall follow. It is written in Isa. xxxv, 6, among other samples of kingdom life, that "the lame shall leap as an hart," and in this man of our lesson walking and leaping and praising God we have a fulfillment of that prophecy, for, as I understand it, the kingdom was not irrevocably postponed till by the martyrdom of Stephen they rejected the Holy Spirit, as they had the Father and the Son.

As the apostles preached the good news there were not thousands saved every day or every week, but daily some saved ones were added to the church (II, 47). There is quite a contrast between helping a poor blind beggar and winning thousands of souls, and yet the former may as truly glorify God as the latter. Not many lives are filled with startling events, but every redeemed life may be filled with so called commonplace to the glory of God. I find much help and comfort in meditating upon the life that was lived in the humble home and the carpenter shop of Nazareth, with which the Father testified that He was well pleased. In the opening verses of our lesson the temple is very prominent, but neither tabernacle nor temple was, anything apart from Him who said, "Let them make Me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them" (Ex. xxv, 8), one greater than the temple, who when He cleansed it said, "Make not My Father's house a house of merchandise" (Matt. xii, 6; John ii, 16). While, as a rule, there was at this time no real worship of God in the temple, we must remember such as Zacharias and Simeon and Anna and that our Lord Jesus Himself often taught the people there. The gate Beautiful is at least suggestive of Him who is "altogether lovely" (Is. of Sol. v, 16) and points onward to the time of the kingdom when the walls of the city shall be called Salvation and her gates Praise (Isa. lxi, 10). The inhabitant shall not say, I am sick, and there shall be no more death nor sorrow nor crying nor pain on the whole earth (Isa. xxxiii, 24; Rev. xxi, 4). The needy, the poor and him that hath no helper shall find a true helper in the King who shall then reign in righteousness (Ps. lxxii; Isa. xxxii, 1, 17). If any would inquire why this man was born lame, see John ix, 3, and lay to heart verse 4 and let God work His works in us. This poor man asked, "expecting to receive" (verse 9), which is more than can be said of many who profess to pray to God. May Ps. xli, 5, become truly our own experience. We see in the days in which we live an unprecedented grasping for silver and gold because of that which people think it will do for them, because they know not the Scriptures, that "neither silver nor gold shall deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath," and that no rich man can by any means redeem a soul or give to God a ransom (Zeph. i, 18; Ps. xlix, 6, 7). In Jesus Christ, the Creator of all things, who alone can truly say, "The silver is mine and the gold is mine" (Hag. ii, 8), are durable riches and righteousness and health for body and soul. To know Him as Peter and John did is better than all earth's riches or wisdom or might (Jer. ix, 23, 24). Peter washed, sanctified, justified and Spirit filled in such conscious fellowship with the risen Christ that he can be such a channel of health from Christ to this lame man that all the people can see it. All believers should be in such fellowship with Christ that something of His life and power might be seen in each of us to the glory of God (Phil. i, 26; II Cor. iv, 11).

Talking to Israelites, Peter magnified the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, whose son Jesus, the Holy One, the Just, the Prince of Life, had been killed by them, but by God had been raised from the dead, and heists that in His name alone had this lame man been healed. He therefore urges them to change their minds about Jesus and receive Him as their Saviour and Messiah and thus obtain the forgiveness of sins. The gospel that does not proclaim the forgiveness of sins through Jesus Christ is not the gospel of God, but some other which does not proceed from God, but from the devil. Moses and all the prophets foretold a Messiah who should suffer before He should reign, and Peter urges them as children of the prophets and of the covenant not to miss the inheritance within their reach.

Developing Power from Small Streams

According to the Government geological experts, we waste 200,000,000,000 tons of coal every year in this country, owing to improper mining methods. Through working the lower beds of the coal first, the mining of the adjacent higher beds becomes impracticable. Again, much coal is left as pillars to support the roof of the mine. We are using what is best and cheapest, and this neglect and wastefulness will cost succeeding generations more for their coal. We leave underground almost one-half of our supply; in Vancouver, British Columbia, 95 per cent. is mined. It is estimated that with the present extravagant and careless methods of mining coal fully 50 per cent. of this fuel is left in the ground where it cannot be recovered. A well-known geologist has estimated that the coal-fields of Pennsylvania, at the present rate of production, will last but ninety-three years. This estimate is figured at the present rate of production, and the demand grows by leaps and bounds every year.

A stream of mineral oil running over the ground is quickly noticed and the waste immediately stopped. A coal mine afire is apparent to all, and everything is done to extinguish it. But because escaping natural gas is invisible people do not recognize and appreciate its intrinsic value. Water power may be neglected, but it cannot be totally wasted and exhausted, for water-power will always be here so long as gravitation exists and the sun shines. It does not hurt water-power to be utilized; after the water leaves the turbines there is just as much of it as there was before. In developing water power we are utilizing the force of gravity,—the greatest natural force,—which is pulling the water toward the center of the earth. Water-power is but the energy of the falling weight.

America is still too large, too rich in natural resources, and too young to be compelled to harness every small stream at once; but experiments have already been crystallized into practical applications. The farmers are busy to day harnessing their small water-powers, and, as the necessity for electrical power increases, the small rivers, and brooks will be made to turn countless electrical generators to light the buildings, furnish an abundance of heat, and drive the wheels of every industry. The development of the water-power of small streams is just beginning, but the movement is general all through this and foreign countries. Nearly 76 per cent. of the 5,737,373 farms in the United States boast of a small creek or two rioting boisterously through the bushy glens and rocky ravines or singing and playing through the daisy-spangled meadows. Nearly every one of these streams is available for horsepower.—"From Power from the Farm Brook," by Donald Cameron Stafer, in the American Review of Reviews for January.

Headache?

If it does, you should try Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Why not do so. They will relieve the pain in just a few minutes. Ask your druggist. There are 45,000 druggists in the U. S. Ask any of them. A package of 25 doses costs 25 cents. One tablet usually stops a headache. They relieve pain without leaving any disagreeable after-effects— isn't that what you want?

My son Frank Snyder has used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for a long time. He never had anything to help him so much for headache. I always keep them in the house now, and gave many away to others suffering with headache.

WHAT OTHERS SAY ABOUT IT.
Many of the best people in Tennessee and adjoining states recommend St. Joseph's Liver Regulator as being a splendid laxative and liver medicine. Its occasional use will keep the system in good condition, thus assisting nature to establish good health. It will remove the bile and effete matter from the system, and, as a rule, Nature "will do the rest." Try it. It is well endorsed. It is made in both liquid and powders. Druggists and dealers sell it, liquid, 50 cents a bottle; powders, in tin boxes, 50 cents a box.

HANGING THE BABIES.

Little life, when people had begun to realize the genius of the man. While he was asked to arrange the annual Liverpool exhibition, and here, in his own words, is how he did it, according to the "Life of Whistler."
"You know, the academy baby by the door had been sent in, and I got them all in my gallery, and in the center of one end I placed the birth of the baby—splendid—and opposite the baby with the mustard pot and opposite the baby with the puppy and opposite the center, on one side, the baby doctor holding its pulse, rather sweeping; on the other, by the door, the baby dead—the baby's funeral—baby from the cradle to the grave—baby in heaven, babies of all kinds and shapes all along the line; not crowded, you know, hung with proper respect for the baby."
"And on the vanishing day in came the artist, each making for his own baby—coming! His baby on the line—nothing could be better! And they all shook my hand and thanked me—and went to look—at the other men's babies—and they saw babies in front of them, babies behind them, babies to the right of them, babies to the left of them. And then—you know—their faces fell—they didn't seem to like it—and—well—ha, ha, they never asked me to hang the pictures again at Liverpool!"

Poor Excuse.
"Before we were married you said you'd lay down your life for me," she sobbed.
"I know it," he returned solemnly, "but this confounded fat is so tiny there's no place to lay anything down."
—Harper's Bazar.

Keep Your Bowels Open

A Safe Certain Home Remedy that is Sold By All Druggists

A fact any doctor will verify is that constipated people suffer most from disease. Regular bowel action is absolutely necessary to health. People who are constipated either part or all of the time must use something to make their bowels move. This should not be a violent purgative or a cathartic that merely tears its way through the bowels emptying them of waste matter for the time but leaving them in a weakened state that prolongs the constipated condition. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an easy, pleasant, natural laxative that removes waste matter and establishes regular, daily movements without pain or gripe. Children and delicate women should never be given strong physic for it not only weakens the bowels but the entire system. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin serves as a tonic and an aid to digestion as well as a laxative that is certain in its effect upon the most obstinate old cases and yet safe and pleasant for a baby. With the first few doses the ill effects of constipation, such as dyspepsia, indigestion, liver trouble, biliousness, flatulency, sour stomach, sick headache, bloated stomach, etc., quickly disappear. It is a remedy that should be in every home of every member of the family at some time. It is a safe, sure laxative.
Mrs. J. C. Cooper, Chicago, Ill., writes: "I use Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for myself and family. I keep it on hand constantly, as I find it to be a most pleasant laxative and is all you claim for it." Sarah J. Hooper, Eureka Springs, Ark., writes: "I would have been dead had it not been for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is the best medicine I ever used for indigestion, indigestion and biliousness." M. R. Zerkel, Troy, Ohio, considers it the best known laxative for children.
We are glad to send a free sample to you who has not used it and will give a fair trial. Write today to Pepsin Syrup Co., 205 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, N. Y. All druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

RAILROAD STORIES.

The Man Who Paid the Conductor and the Name on the Ticket.
An old time traveling man was talking of experiences of former days on the road. "Frequently," said this traveler, "I journeyed to Cincinnati. The fare from my city to that place was then about $1.25. I saved something by handing the conductor $2 in cash. One day there was an excursion, and I bought a round trip ticket for $1.25 or $1.50—I've forgotten the exact amount, but that circumstance need not cripple this story. When I handed this ticket to the conductor as he tore off the return coupon he looked at me and in a voice betraying how deeply he was hurt he remarked, 'My young friend, don't you know that I can afford to haul you much cheaper than this company can?'"
"On another occasion, when in Chicago, a colored man met me at the entrance of the station, asked me where I was going and offered to sell me a ticket for $1. The ticket was to Louisville, but I was only going to Indianapolis. Cheap enough."
"When the conductor came along to take up my ticket he asked me my name. It was usual to write one's name on the ticket in the presence of the conductor. I told him my name was on the ticket. He grinned as he handed it back and asked me to look at it and say if that was my name. I looked. The name on the ticket was 'Mary Flaherty.' He grinned again, somewhat sarcastically, but he took the ticket."—Pittsburg Press.

SNORING.
One of the Evils We Acquire With Our Civilization.
It is a truism that no one ever heard of a snoring savage. In fact, if the wild man of the woods and plains does not sleep quietly he runs the risk of being discovered by his enemy, and the scalp of the snorer would soon adorn the belt of his crafty and more quietly sleeping adversary. With civilization, however, we have changed all this. The impure air of our sleeping rooms induces all manner of catarrhal affections. The nasal passages are the first to become affected. Instead of warming the inspired air on its way to the lungs and removing from it the dangerous impurities with which it is loaded the nose becomes obstructed. A part of the air enters and escapes by the mouth. The veil of the palate vibrates between the two currents—that through the mouth and the one still passing through the partially closed nostrils—like a torn sail in the wind. The snore, then, means that the sleeper's mouth is partially open, that his nose is partially closed and that his lungs are in danger from the air not being properly warmed and purified. From the continued operation of these causes—the increase of impure air in sleeping rooms and permitting habitual snorers to escape killing and scalping—some scientist has predicted that in the future all men (and all women, too) will snore. It goes along with decay of the teeth and baldness.—Health.

COLLEGE KICKNAVES.

Some Popular With the Students—Others Not So.
Some of the colleges have a great dislike to the way in which they are referred to commonly in connection with athletics. For instance, Wesleyan men don't like to be called "The Methodists," as they appear sometimes. At the Naval Academy there is a strong prejudice against being called "Annapolis." The navy men aren't particularly fond of "midshipmen." They believe the proper name for their institution is "the navy."
Columbia has a great distaste for the name of "Columbians" for their representatives in athletics or other public appearances. At the University of Chicago there is a dislike of the name "Chicago university," sometimes applied.
Although not so strongly opposed to it, students at Pennsylvania do not like the full title "University of Pennsylvania," as well as plain "Pennsylvania." "Penn" is preferred to either. "Maroons" for Chicago men, "Gophers" for Minnesota, "Badgers" for Wisconsin students, "Cornhuskers" for Nebraska, "Wolverines" for Michigan, "Illini" for the men of Illinois—all are names that are popular at these colleges and are used by the men there in speaking of their own teams. Indeed, to a man unacquainted with nicknames the average statement regarding a conference college is puzzling because of the almost entire lack of straightout names.—New York Sun.

THE DOCTORS.
Tribute to the Nobility of the Medical Profession.

To enter the medical profession is to find oneself in most noble company. When Dante was led by Virgil into the presence of "the master of them that know" he saw Aristotle surrounded by a group of the sages of antiquity. Look at them as they are introduced one by one, and you will see that a fourth of them bear names illustrious in medicine. To take note of but one—Hippocrates is there. The student will not turn to his pages now to learn what has to be taught in modern text books or class rooms. Yet he will do well to lay to heart the spirit that guided "the father of medicine" in drawing up the oath imposed on the students of the Hippocratic school. "With purity and with holiness," the candidate was made to swear, "I will pass my life and practice my art. Into whatever houses I enter I will go into them for the benefit of the sick, will abstain from every voluntary act of mischief and corruption."

In the long succession of those who have enlarged the bounds of his science the student will meet with a great army of men who have kept the spirit of that oath under higher sanctions than were open to the pioneers whom the medieval poet consigns to a place in his inferno because, though blameless of sin, they had not been baptized.—Sir Alexander Simpson in London Quiver.

The Old Egg.
"New York is no longer young and unsophisticated," said a man who has visited all the old world capitals. "She has now all the weariness and vice of Paris, London and Rome. They who still speak of New York as young, childish, innocent, remind me of Lord Eze of the Carlton."

Lord Eze, at seventy, tried to lead the life of a youth of twenty-five. He dyed his hair, wore a corset and frequented the music halls, Piccadilly circus and the Burlington Arcade. One afternoon as he drove from the Carlton in his brougham a member said, smiling:
"There goes Eze. He told me over a whiskey and soda just now that he felt as fresh as a two-year-old."
"Another member sneered.
"He probably meant a two-year-old egg," he murmured.—New York Sun.

Hugo and Merimee.
It is probable that with the exception of Byron no great literary genius ever was greeted with such a storm of vilification and abuse as Victor Hugo when he published "Les Miserables." While the book took the public literally off their feet, almost all Hugo's rivals united in condemning it and its author.
Prosper Merimee wrote in reference to a dinner given to Hugo at Brussels: "Have you read Victor Hugo's speech at the dinner given to him by Belgian librarians and other second-class of Brussels? His statements were without depth, solidity or common sense. He is a man who intoxicates himself with words and does not take the trouble to think."
Victor Hugo retorted by writing to a friend, "M. Merimee is a man naturally vile."

As the Twig is Bent.
"I hope you were a good little boy while at you aunt's and didn't tell any stories," said his mother.
"Only the one you put me up to, ma," replied her young hopeful.
"Why, what do you mean, child?"
"When she asked me if I'd like to have a second piece of cake I said, 'No, thank you; I've had enough.'—Harper's Weekly.

CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 23, 1909

No. 17

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Rights He has, and Some He Has Not.

Three wandering motor-cyclists arrived in Clanton last Thursday night from Birmingham, and proceeded on their way to Montgomery the next day. For a poor man's traveling there seems to be nothing to equal the motor-cycle—with a little gasoline he can serenely view the landscape o'er as he glides along the country roads, stops when he likes and resumes his journey at his own sweet will and pleasure.

In New York last year the sum total of the deposits in the savings banks was a little more than $730-000,000, although savings banks are called "poor men's banks." It is astonishing how "every mickle makes a muckle," according to the old Scotch adage. Once in a while every man has a dollar that he has no particular immediate use for.
If he puts that dollar in the savings bank, he generally wants to add to it, and in a short time he has a snug little account to his credit. Try it, and you will be surprised how it accumulates.

Some folks are a little too soon, and some are a little too late, but the Hopkins Drug Company belong to the first named class and have taken possession of their handsome new storehouse before the time announced. The new building is one of the most elegant in Clanton, and the firm propose to make it a credit to themselves and the town.

Business may be a little slack in some lines, but seems to be pretty lively with our Justice of the peace
E. H. Foshee, who has had one hundred cases on his docket this month—91 civil cases and nine criminal cases. "The mills of the gods grind slowly," but Esq. Foshee grinds out justice one after another.

The new storehouse of Harvey Chandler is about completed, and he will soon be putting in a stock and asking your favors. Here's wishing him much success.

There was some talk of an entertainment by twelve young ladies from Sylacaug, but we are informed they cannot get any place to shew. This is hard lines for Clanton.

The neighborhood of the courthouse had some resemblance of a county fair last Saturday, what with the crowd and the prancing mules showing their paces. The occasion was the selling the mules belonging to Chilton county that had been used in road work. Judge Reynolds was the auctioneer and the four mules were knocked down at $772.

Last chance to pay your poll tax before February 1. You may want to vote on stock law, you know, before the year is out.

A Change of Tune.
"Mamma, I'm tired of going to school."
"What's the matter, Willie?"
"The teacher."
"Now, don't you say a word against your teacher, Willie. I've no doubt you annoy her dreadfully, and she seems like a very nice sort of person."
"Well, she said this mornin' that she didn't think I had much of a brainup at home, an'—"
"Well, did she say that? Well, of all the coarse impudence! You shan't go back there another day!"
Exit Willie, grinning.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Qualified.
Parker—I don't know what I am ever going to do with that boy of mine. He is careless and absolutely reckless of consequences, and he doesn't seem to care for any one. Lane—Good! You can make a taxicab driver out of him.
—Life.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Huckabee, Ala., Jan. 22, 1909
Editor Banner—Will you please allow me a small space to say a few words to the readers of the dear old Banner.

The health of this community is very good at present.
Seems as though spring has come again.

Our school is progressing nicely under the careful management of Misses Western Pans and Willie Lee Taylor.

We have a fine Sunday school at this place, and we also have a good prayer meeting every Sunday night.

Mrs. Marian Wilkins and her daughter were pleasant callers at the home of Mrs. Mattie V. Chandler Wednesday.

The peanut parching at Mr.
Walter Jackson's was enjoyed by a large crowd.

Mr. Howard Deramus, one of Autauga county's most prosperous farmers, brought his beautiful bride to his beautiful mansion Sunday afternoon.

Well, girls, leap year is gone and I didn't get married.

Mrs. Elizabeth Chandler and children spent the night with her sister Mrs. M. V. Chandler.

Miss Genett Willis has been very sick but is getting along all right.

I will close hoping all your futures will be blessed with the things you like best, and that every blessing God can give may bring peace and happiness around you as long as you live. AUTAUGA GIRL.

Fairview

Editor Banner—Please allow me
a space in your paper to say that there will be a "Mock trial" at this place Jan. 30, at 7 p.m. We hope to have the people to help us by being present. The entertainment will be carried out by the debating society of Fairview, and we would be glad to have anyone who desires to do so to help us in our debates in the future. With best wishes to all, I will close.

STOCK LAW AND RURAL FREE DELIVERY.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT.
Office of the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General.

Division of Rural Delivery.
Washington, January 19, 1909
The Postmaster, Clanton, Ala.

Sir:—The Department begs to acknowledge on receipt of your letter of the thirteenth instant, stating that there was recently an election held in several parts of Chilton county, resulting in the enactment of a stock law, and patrons are inquiring of you whether the Department will discontinue the service if gates are located along the lines.

In reply you are advised, and will so inform persons interested, that it is the uniform policy of the Department not to maintain rural delivery service over roads which are obstructed by ordinary gates or any other obstruction that impedes the progress of the mails; that this policy has been steadily adhered to in all of the states, and experience has abundantly demonstrated it as being in the best interest of the rural delivery service. The Department has no objection to the erection of gates which can be au-tomatically opened and closed by carriers without dismounting from the vehicles or impeding their progress, but, as before stated, will not maintain this service over roads fenced in by ordinary gates. Should there be any ordinary gates placed across the roads over which rural service from your office is now in operation, you are directed to immediately report the facts to this office, giving the name and address of the persons maintaining such gates, and the matter will receive prompt attention.

Very respectfully,
P. V. DEGRAW,
4th Asst. Postmaster General.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Having announced last year that I had sold my shop and interest here, and would give possession on or about Jan. 1, 1909, I consider it necessary to explain that the parties to whom I sold did not comply with terms and conditions of sale, therefore I shall continue my work and business at the same place, and am better prepared to serve you in future than ever before, and will appreciate a continuance of your patronage. Respectfully, W. E. MADDOX.

THE CLANTON BANK

CLANTON, ALA.

The true secret of success is thrift in all its phases, and, principally, thrift as applied to saving. A young man may have many friends but he will find none so steadfast, so constant, as ready to respond to his wants, so capable of pushing him ahead, as a little leather-covered book, with the name of a bank on its cover. Saving is the first great principle of all success. It creates independence, it gives a young man standing, it fills him with vigor, it stimulates him with the proper energy; in fact, it brings to him the best part of any success—happiness and contentment. If it were possible to inject the quality of saving into every boy, we would have a great many more real men.

THE CLANTON BANK

Cane Creek.

Editor Banner—Please allow me
a small space in your paper, as I have not seen anything from this place in some time.

Death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Driver and took away their darling little boy, Arthur.
He left his papa, mama, two sisters and two brothers to mourn the loss.
He had been sick for about sixteen days and suffered with pain, but his pains are easy; no more pains for him. He is asleep, blessed sleep, in the arms of Jesus where no harm can come. Dear ones, do not mourn, for he is not dead, he is only asleep in Jesus' blessed sleep.
Little Arthur was laid away to rest in the Cane Creek cemetery. He is gone but not forgotten.

Mr. and Mrs. Driver have two very sick children; we hope that they will soon be well.

We have a nice Sunday school at this place. A SCHOOL GIRL.

THE HOUSEWIFE FOR THE CHILDREN

Painted Cream Candy.
A quantity of granulated sugar of water, place in a to boil. Do not stir at all the water has dissolved. While the water is boiling, stir the sugar and water mixture every few minutes, and when it grows hard, at once dropping into water add the sugar very rapidly, and boil a few minutes longer. Then pour it into a dish and let cool sufficiently with comfort and puff it with just as one does on fish candy. It will become milk and be of a smooth, creamy when done. Draw out with large shears into desired size pieces.

Darning Carpets.
Carpets can be darned to an advantage.
A bit of stout woolen cloth upon one side of a rug, fasten down with edges with casual stitches and there then darn thickly back with using the largest size embossing needles and either wool, silk or a harmonious color.
The threads are spots in the on the floor with ravelings in a holster's noose.

Game of Farmyard.
If among four circle there is one person who makes himself extremely objectionable from his forwardness or bumpiness, this is an excellent game of putting him in his right place.

The master of the ceremonies states that the present company must all imagine themselves to be the denizens of a farmyard. He says that he will whisper to each in turn the particular animal he wishes them to imitate.
Then at a given signal—when he drops his handkerchief—they must all imitate together the noise of the animal they are supposed to be.

He then whispers to each in turn apparently the name of the animal they are to represent. In reality what he really whispers is, "Remain perfectly silent." When he comes to his real victim, however, he whispers, "The donkey; bray as loud as you can!"

The youth simper and promises himself to attract general attention from the realism of his performance. The master of the ceremonies then cries out, "All ready; now then!" Every one remains perfectly silent except the bumpiness youth, who covers himself with confusion and ridicule by the loudness of his solo.

Old Style Printing.
You all know, of course, that printers make the lines of type in newspapers and in books of equal length by means of metal "spacers" of varying degrees of thickness, says the Chicago News. This is what is technically called "justifying."

But you do not know, perhaps, that spaces were unknown in the early days of printing and that the printers were in the habit of shortening or lengthening words at pleasure to make the lines even.

An illustration of this arbitrary treatment of words may be found in an old black letter Bible, where the word
"hot" is spelled "whot," "hote" and
"hot," according to the space to be filled to even out the line. In the same book the words "we" and "ye" are spelled with a single "e," and a few lines lower on the page they are spelled "wee" and "yee." In another place the printer did not have room enough for the two words "shall be," and he made them "shalbe."

A Test of Culture.
Here is what a recognized authority says on the subject: "In spoken language pronunciation is the most striking element, and thus it happens that it is more than any other one thing the most obvious test of general culture. Even in a speaker of recognized ability his mispronunciations are harshly upon the ear and cause the hearer to suspect that his early if not later education has been wanting in polish or that he has not been accustomed to the society of refined and cultivated people." Surely this writer does not overstate the case or exaggerate in any way the importance of correct pronunciation.

Polite Dogs.
A school for house dogs has been opened in Paris. The object of the school is to teach the dogs politeness.
They are trained to welcome visitors by jumping up, wagging the tail and giving a low bark. When the visitor leaves the dog is taught to accompany him to the door, constantly wagging his tail and bowing his farewell by bending his head to the floor. He is also taught to pick up a handkerchief, glove or fan that has been dropped and return it to the owner.

Lizards' Tails.
Certain lizards are remarkable for the fragility of their tails. The diamond tailed gecko frequently owes its life to the ease with which its tail may be snapped off. This reptile, which will perch upon a rock, head downward, is liable to be preyed upon by hawks. One of these birds will swoop down upon a lizard and seize it by the tail. The brittle tail snaps off, and the reptile wriggles off and grows another.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson V.—First Quarter, For Jan. 31, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Act 17, 1-31.—Maintenance Verses 15, 16.—Golden Text, Acts
17, 31.—Commentary Prepared by
Rev. D. M. Strass.

[Copy right, 1909, by American Bible Society.]
As the gospel is preached and wherever it is preached during the whole of this age we can only expect the experience of Paul in chapter xviii, 24.
"Some believed and some believed not." Some are wholly indifferent and care for none of these things, while others violently oppose the truth. The comfort of the believer through it all is that His word will always accomplish His pleasure and that He is never discouraged (Isa. 43, 11; xlii, 4). The resurrection of Jesus was accompanied by the resurrection of many of the saints (Matt. xxvii, 52, 53), and both His and theirs were resurrections from the dead. So also shall be the resurrection of all the righteous.

We now find Ananias and Sapphira and their kindred, with the rulers and elders, gathered at Jerusalem to inquire more fully concerning the healing of the man who had been lame from his birth, for all the city was stirred because of the notable miracle that had been wrought, which no one could deny (verse 16). Peter and John being brought from prison, this august assembly asked them, "By what power or by what name have ye done this?" This gives Peter another opportunity, and he who at one time asked the Lord Jesus not to think of suffering and on that dreadful night three times denied that he knew Him boldly rehearses the facts of the crucifixion of Jesus by these very men, asserts His resurrection from the dead and assures them that the healing of this man was by that same Jesus. He quotes Ps. cxviii, 22, and has in mind Isa. xxviii, 16, which passages he also quotes in his epistle (1 Pet. ii, 4-8). He is bold because filled with the Spirit, and the Spirit brings these words to his mind and utters them through him, according to the promises of the Lord Jesus while He was yet with them in His humiliation (Matt. x, 10, 20; John xiv, 26). It is grand to hear Peter tell these proud Pharisees that there is no other way for even them to be saved
but by Him whom they had crucified, whom God raised from the dead. They must have remembered the meek fearlessness of Jesus when He stood before them, for they see something in these men to remind them of Jesus (verse 13). It should be our ambition so to be Spirit filled that those who know us would be compelled to see something of Him in us (II Cor. iv, 11).
While they could not deny the miracle nor the strange power in these un-learned men, they determined to do what was in their power, as they thought, to prevent the spread of this doctrine, and so after consulting among themselves, the apostles having been sent out, they recall them and command them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus (verse 18).
One cannot but think of the words in the second psalm, "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord shall have them in derision." As they were men professing to fear God, these priests and rulers, Peter replied that they must judge for themselves whether it was right to obey God or man, but boldly, yet respectfully, added, "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard" (verse 20).

What a contrast between these men and the majority of believers today, who seem to have seen in Jesus nothing worth mentioning to any one, for both in public and private they can so rapidly keep quiet about Him. Consider Elihu and Jeremiah, who were much like Peter and John (Job xxxii, 18-20; Jer. xx, 9).

With further threatening they were let go and at once went to their own company, who had doubtless been in prayer for them. They reported all that had been said and done, and with one accord these believers looked up to God as the Creator and quoted the words of the second psalm and, resting in the eternal counsel of God, prayed, not for deliverance from further persecution, but only that they might speak the word of God with boldness and that God would accompany the word with signs and wonders in the name of Jesus. They evidently feared no man, nor even death, but by faith saw the risen Christ at God's right hand for them and desired only to glorify Him. They were certainly in touch with the throne, for the immediate response from thence—the place was shaken and all were filled with the Holy Spirit. There never was greater need than now for believers to be filled with the word of God and the Spirit of God and to speak that word boldly. It can only be done by seeing the risen Christ at God's right hand on our behalf and by so seeing Him that we shall not see the face of man. If we are ever afraid of man, we are evidently forgetting God, and if we live to please men we are not the servants of Christ (Isa. ii, 12, 13; Gal. i, 10).

There is a grand word for the servant of Christ in I Thess. ii, 4, "Allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel, even so we speak; not as pleasing men, but God, who trieth our hearts."
There is only one with whom we have to do, and to Him alone must ever be our one and only account. Let our motto be, "The Lord alone shall be exalted" and let us "Cease from man" (Isa. ii, 11, 17, 22).

A FEW WORDS ON TEMPER- ANCE

My friends, hesitate before you vote liquor back into Alabama.
Now that it is shut out, don't trust it, it is powerful aggressive and universal in its attacks. Tonight it enters an humble home and tom-row it challenges the republic in the halls of congress. Today it strikes a crust from many starving women and children and tomorrow levies tribute from the government itself.
There is no cottage in this country humble enough to escape it, no palace strong enough to shut it out.
It defies the law when it cannot obtain suffrage; it is flexible to escape; it is flexible to escape; it is merciless in victory; it is the mortal enemy of peace and order;
the depopler of men; the cloud that shadows the faces of women and children; the demon that has dug more graves, and sent more souls unshrined to judgement than all the pestilences that have wasted life since God sent the plagues to Egypt, and all the wars since Joshua stood beyond Jericho. Oh my country men, loving God and humanity, do not bring this grand old country again under the dominion of that power. It can profit no man by its return; it can uplift no industry; re-give no interest; remedy no wrong.
You know that it cannot. It comes to turn and it shall profit mainly by the ruin of your sons; it comes to wreck human souls and crush human hearts under its rumbling wheels; it comes to bring gray-haired mothers down in shame and sorrow to their graves; it comes to turn the wife's love into despair and her pride into shame; it comes to still the laughter on the lips of little children; it comes to stifle all the music of the home and fill it with silence and desolation; it comes to ruin your body and mind; to wreck your home, and it knows that it must measure its prosperity by the swiftness and certainty with which it wrecks this walk through life.

He Was Under Oath.
The late Professor Rowland of Johns Hopkins university was the most eminent physicist since the days of Joseph Henry. Among his notable achievements in the realm of pure science was the calculation of the mechanical equivalent of heat and the gas of gravities in spectrum analysis, for which purpose he devised a machine that could cut 40,000 lines to the inch on a plate of polished metal. In the practical application of his knowledge he was noted as the inventor of the multiplex telegraph apparatus.
Some years ago, testifying in a case involving the Cataract Power company, in answer to a question on cross examination as to who, in his opinion, was the greatest American scientist, he replied, "I am."
After leaving the courtroom one of the lawyers ventured to criticize the answer for its effect upon the jury, whereupon Rowland exclaimed:
"Well, what else could I say? Wasn't I under oath?"—New York Globe.

The Sacred Goose.
In Egypt the goose was the emblem of Seb, father to Osiris. A precious figure of it is extant inscribed "The Good Goose Greatly Beloved." It was the national flag of Burma and of Kandy, Ceylon. Wherever Buddhism rules the goose is venerated. Therefore it is a leading motif in the art of Japan and a symbol of peace and happiness in China. Figures of geese are as indispensable at a Chinese wedding as in bride cake with us. In both countries, as also in Burma and Siam, weights are made in the shape of a goose as a token of good faith, though the connection is not obvious. But in ancient Egypt the same custom ruled, and Layard found goose weights among his first discoveries at Nineveh. A row of gigantic geese surrounds the great Buddhist temple at Annapoora. The devout cherish a fond fancy that all geese perform an aerial pilgrimage to the holiest of lakes in the Himalayas every year, transporting the sins of the neighborhood, returning with a new stock of inspiration for the encouragement of local piety.

There is many a good hearted fool. The trouble is that a man doesn't do his thinking with his heart.—Philadelphia Record.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia
If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.
A great many people who have suffered with indigestion, have been sorry for it when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.
Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.
When you experience soreness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.
Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia" tablets, "physics," etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Peppin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.
Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.
Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Neuralgia Pains

Are the result of an abnormal condition of the more prominent nerve branches, caused by congestion, irritation, or disease. If you want to relieve the pain try Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. They often relieve when everything else fails. They leave no disagreeable after-effects. Just a pleasurable sense of relief. Try them.

I have neuralgia headache right over my eyes and I am really afraid that my eyes will burst. I also have neuralgia pain around my head. I have been taking Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills recently and find they relieve these troubles quickly. I seldom find it necessary to take more than two pills for complete relief. Sometimes I have to take two or three, but never more and they are sure to relieve. I have been taking Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills and we authorize him to return the price of first package (only) if it fails to benefit you.

A Golf Story.

Footmen are noted for their cannyness, and a story told by a Laneshire commercial traveler, who was up in Aberdeen a few days ago, shows that the men beyond the Tweed are still worthily upholding their reputation. The traveler in question was asked by a prospective buyer to subscribe to the prize fund for the local golf tournament. He parted with 5 shillings, and as he was interested in golf he remarked that he would like to be kept informed of the progress of the tournament so that he could look out for the result.

"Oh," said the customer as he picked up the 5 shillings and placed it securely in his pocket, "ye neednae dae that. The tournament was held last Saturday. It was rather a stager for the latest contributor to the prize fund, but he retained curiosity enough to inquire who had proved the happy winner. The guileless solicitor for subscriptions was quite undaunted, however. "The winner?" he said coolly, "oh, fast mesel!"—Exchange.

A Weighty Question.

"I took in $2 just now," said the first promoter. "Good enough," declared the second promoter. "Shall we issue additional stock to correspond with our increased capital or shall we have lunch?"—Puck.

How to Cure Liver Trouble

Keep Your Bowels Regular and Your Stomach Sweet

People sometimes imagine when they have liver trouble or are bilious that the best thing to do is to take physic. Taking pills and keeping your bowels regular are two very different matters. The use of a violent cathartic does not mean the cure of constipation or the establishment of regular movements. A physic is an emergency remedy, but never a bowel treatment. If the bowels do not move regularly there is a reason deeper seated than the mere clogging up that is removed by a dose of salts or pills.

When that drowsy, tired feeling, with the coated tongue, the dull head pains, the sour stomach, the sallow complexion, constipated bowels and touches of fever come on it is time to take a medicine that will act on the bowels gently and mildly, cleansing and strengthening them, stir up the liver and aid the stomach in digesting the food.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin does this every time. Take a few doses and see how quickly the drowsy feeling leaves, regular bowel movements come back, with a good appetite and perfect digestion, and you soon feel like your old self. It does not gripe nor pain, it acts smoothly, mildly and is very pleasant to take. Wm. Block, Mich., says: "I was troubled with indigestion and liver trouble. I have used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin with fine results. It is a perfect laxative and I now feel as strong and well as formerly." Wm. Block, Mich., says: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best remedy I ever used for liver complaint or constipation." Mrs. R. H. Brown, Addington, Ind. Ter. was troubled with torpid liver and constipation. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gave her prompt relief. All druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Mention Syrup Pepsin, 308 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill. I am glad to send a free sample to anyone who has never used it and will give it a fair trial.

FINDING HIS INITIAL.

A Temple of Letters That Was Finally Made O. K.

The man with a soft, low voice had just completed his purchase. "What is the name?" asked the clerk. "Jepson," replied the man. "Jepson?" "Yes, Jepson, Jepson." "Jepson?" "That's it. Eighty-two." "Your first name—initial, please." "O. K."

"Excuse me, it isn't O. K. I said 'Oh.'"

"No, rub out the O. and let the K stand."

The assistant looked annoyed. "Will you please give me your initials again?"

"I said 'Oh.'"

"Just now you said 'K.'"

"Allow me to finish what I started to say. I said 'Oh' because I did not understand what you were asking me. I did not mean that it was my initial. My name is Kirby Jepson."

"Oh!"

"No, not O, but K," said the man. "Give me the pencil and I'll write it down for you myself. There; it's O. K. now."

Proved an ANG.

This happened at a certain boarding house, one of those where a few red-headed professors may share an elegant home.

The girl with the dim looks brought in the soap. When she came to the sink she noticed a long string of substance entirely foreign to the soap itself. It was a hair. In the dim light it looked as if it might have been from the dim head of the waiter.

Justine called her attention to this, remarking that the best culinary authorities are agreed that a strip of cranial capillary substance is not essential to the success of a plate of consommé or other liquid nourishment.

The didn't follow him fully, but when she saw him holding up the quarter of a yard or more of hair, she suddenly spoke up in her own defense.

"That ain't mine!" she declared in an aggrieved tone. "It couldn't be mine. Why, I ain't even brushed my hair since yesterday!"—New York Press.

Foreign Gun Tests.

"The government ought to guarantee our guns as it guarantees our money," said a sportsman who had traveled abroad. "England and Belgium test and stamp every gun made in their confines."

"I have visited the Belgian testing works at Liege. A gun barrel gets two tests. The first costs 5 cents, the second 10. The works conducted on those small fees are self supporting. How many lives they must save! The gun barrels by themselves are tested first."

A charge three times as big as the ordinary one is fired from them. They emerge, if they do emerge, strong enough three times over for the strain to be put on them hereafter. In the second test the guns complete, with the breech action attached, are fired. If they come through again all right the government stamps them and they are put on the market. It is queer that only England and Belgium warrent in this splendid way the nation's

WHAT OTHERS SAY ABOUT IT.

Many of the best people in Tennessee and adjoining states recommend St. Joseph's Liver Regulator as being a splendid laxative and liver medicine. Its occasional use will keep the system in good condition, thus assisting nature to establish good health. It will move the bile and effete matter from the system, and, as a rule, Nature "will do the rest." Try it. It is well endorsed. It is made in liquid and powders. Druggists and dealers sell it, liquid, 50 cents bottle; powders, in tin boxes, cents a box.

A LITTLE FISH'S TRICK.

How the Puffer Disguises His Enemy and Saves Himself.

All the little sea folk have their own clever way of protecting themselves from their enemies, but the puffer has about the cleverest way of all.

He belongs to the great family called puffers, and you will see in a moment how well he can use his skin.

Just imagine the little puffer swimming around in the water looking like a small round box with a head on. A big fish comes along, sees the little puffer and thinks: "There's just a good mouthful for me!" But just as he is about to open his mouth the little puffer blows himself up like a ball, turns over on his back and floats around with all his sharp spines sticking out toward his enemy.

The big fish is dazed; he stares at the puffer and thinks, "Can that great pretty thing be the same little fish I tried to swallow?" He can't understand it, but he sees there is no use trying, so he goes on his way, and when the little puffer is sure he is gone he just empties the water out of his skin and goes back to his usual size.

Now, isn't that a pretty clever trick for a little fish to play? But, you see, Mother Nature gave the little puffer just that kind of a body that he might escape from his enemies.—St. Nicholas.

A SCOTCH RING.

One of the Royal Jewels, It Had a Melancholy History.

The traditional history of the Scotch regalia ring is of the most tragic, not to say melancholy, character. It is believed that it was the favorite ring of Mary Stuart and that after her judicial murder in Fotheringhay castle it was transmitted to her son. From James it descended to Charles I., at whose coronation at Scone in 1633 it played a distinct part. Once more did this ill-fated ring figure at an untimely and ill-merited death, for, with almost his last breath upon the scaffold at Whitehall, Charles bequeathed it to Bishop Juxon in trust for his son.

In due course of time the ring came into the possession of James II. and was carried away with him on his flight to the continent. When, however, he was detained by the fishermen at Sherrness, the ring, which had been secreted in the king's underclothing, only escaped robbery by the luckiest of mistakes on the part of the sailor who searched him. Thus the ring was passed on uninjured to James' descendants till by bequest of Cardinal York it became the property of the reigning dynasty once more and was by them replaced among the royal jewels of Scotland, from which it had been separated for many a long year.—St. James' Gazette.

A Penalty of Genius.

It seems to be the frequent penalty of genius that it is denied the privilege of perpetuating its name and kind beyond a few generations at most. Thus it is said that there is not now living a single descendant in the male line of Chaucer, Shakespeare, Spenser, Milton, Cowley, Butler, Dryden, Pope, Cowper, Goldsmith, Byron or Moore; not one of Sir Philip Sidney or of Sir Walter Raleigh; not one of Drake, Cromwell, Hampden, Monk, Marlborough, Peterborough or Nelson; not one of Bolingbroke, Walpole, Chatham, Pitt, Fox, Burke, Graham or Channing; not one of Bacon, Locke, Newton or Davy; not one of Hume, Gibbon or Macaulay; not one of Hogarth, Sir Joshua Reynolds or Sir Thomas Lawrence; not one of David Garrick, John Kemble or Edmund Kean.—London Standard.

Railroad Ragged Regiment.

"Bobby Wild Goose and his ragged regiment" was the name hoisted after Robert Railkes, the first modern Sunday school advocate, and his scholars. The thoroughfare was Sooty alley, and the scholars were the ragged boys who toiled in the pin factories of Gloucester, England. Robert Railkes paid Mrs. Brandon, a poor woman, a shilling each Sunday to teach the boys the Bible. That was in 1780. Four years later there were 250,000 boys and girls attending Sunday school in the kingdom.—Delineator.

Wearing Work.

"How's your husband doing?" said the pale woman.

"But the same," answered the thin woman.

"Hasn't he got any regular work yet?"

"Yes. He said he felt the need of some steady occupation. So he thought he'd make it his business to wind the clock."

"Did he stick to it?"

"For awhile, but now he's kicking for an eight day clock."—Kansas City Independent.

The Bishop's Rebuke.

A converted young cleric once said to an American prelate: "Do you not think that I may well feel flattered that so great a crowd came to hear me preach?"

"No," was the answer, "for twice as many would come to see you hanged."

—From "The Old Time Fables," by F. H. Ditchfield, M. A.

Ambiguities.

Debber—I don't know whether that critic meant to praise or blame my work. Cutler—What did he say? Debber—Well, I had a picture of "The Dead Sea," and he said it was fit of life.—Cleveland Leader.

The hand can serve, execute anything higher than the character can inspire.—Bacon.

Feeding For Eggs.
On the part of the hen is a struggle against an abundant supply, although all other conditions are perfect; hence to make from the hen she must be fed. The way to accomplish this all poultry keepers should know. Grain may be fed before lunch and a fair result obtained if it hangs up a little in the bow, so that they would jump to reach it, so much the better. The best results, however, are obtained by furnishing the fowls with litter of chaff and straw of sufficient depth to insure hard work in the grain scattered thereon. Large quantities, with warm and freshly cut bone in the litter and later in the day grain

A Good Fat Turkey.
This game uses the memory and brings into play the names of many things that appear in life to pay forfeits after the game is over. The leader gives sentences, which must be repeated correctly and without laughing by every one in the room. The leader then adds to it, and the whole is repeated as before. For instance, the leader says, "A good fat turkey." This is repeated by each player. The leader then says, "Two ducks and a good fat turkey," which must be repeated by each in order. The next addition is, "Three wild geese," which must be repeated by all with the sentences previously given. Then comes, "Four plump partridges," next "Five pouting pigeons," next "Six long legged cranes," next "Seven green parrots," next "Eight screeching owls," and last "Nine ugly buzzards." So that the last time the repetition goes around it will be like this: "Nine ugly buzzards, eight screeching owls, seven green parrots, six long legged cranes, five pouting pigeons, four plump partridges, three wild geese, two ducks and a good fat turkey." Any omission or hesitation imposes a forfeit.

Given Words.
Every player whispers to his right hand neighbor a single word, which he then passes, only the more difficult to introduce into an ordinary sentence the better.

When everybody knows his word, one player begins by asking a question of his neighbor on the left, who is obliged in his reply to use the word that has been given as adroitly as possible to avoid its detection by his questioner. If the latter cannot discover the word he pays a forfeit.

Suppose the word given to be "idiosyncrasy" and that the person questioned asks, "Do you like to play games?" A suitable reply would be "When hurricanes howl and icicles form I enjoy games like this, but I feel an idiosyncrasy of mine not to rapaciously admire out of door sports with the thermometer at 90 in the shade."

So by associating the real word with several others equally unnecessary for an ordinary reply to a question it may be successfully concealed.

The Railroad Game.
To play the railroad game each child is given the name of some part of the railroad or some railroad employee or traveler. Thus one child becomes the train, another the car, another the conductor, another the baggage, one the locomotive, etc. Some one, usually a elder person, then tells an impromptu story, bringing in all these things and characters. As each player hears his fictitious name mentioned he must rise and imitate the thing or character he is named for. Thus the rail stretches out his arms as far as possible in front of him, the locomotive puffs, the conductor pulls the bell rope and cries "Aboard!" Toward the end of the story there is a report of a terrible collision. When this is heard all the players "bo" loudly to imitate the noise and rush together in great confusion.

A Horseshoe For Luck
Many superstitions have been traced with some definiteness to their origin, but that about the horseshoe has none. It has been traced back to about 1000 b. c. but there the antiquarians "had to give it up. At that time most of the houses in the west end of London had a horseshoe nailed over the door as a protection against witches and evil spirits. It was believed that a witch could not enter a house so protected. Many bones in this country have a horseshoe attached to them in some way, and sailors, who are nearly all superstitious, nail the shoes up in their ships for "luck." Out of this old superstition grew the notion that it is lucky to find an old horseshoe, and it is said that the more nails there are in the shoe when you pick it up the more luck you will have.—Chicago News.

What have you now before you which would give you a company, a valied lady and a noisy toy? Co-nu drum.

It went before Queen Mary, poor thing! It followed King William the end, poor man! The letter M.

A Queer Origin.
It is interesting and sometimes amusing to trace the origin of words. There is the word "pecuniary," for example, which, you know, means relating to money. Strange to say, its original meaning was "cattle." It seems that oxen were the medium of exchange between the ancient Romans, one ox being the unit of value. The first Roman coins bore the image of an ox, and the word "pecus" means an ox or a coin according to how you used it.

Rhinoceros Blood as Medicine.
The blood of the rhinoceros is very highly esteemed by Burmese and Chinese as a medicine for all kinds of ailments. Whenever a party of hunters are successful in shooting a rhinoceros—the animals are less numerous than they used to be—the native hunters carefully draw off the blood and bring it to Rangoon stored in hollow bamboo. The precious liquid is worth about 100 dollars in the market.

Text of the Lesson, Acts iv, 22, to v, 11
Memory Verses, 22, 23—Golden Text Prov. xii, 22—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Higgins.

The greatest word in the last verse of chapter iv is found in verse 33: "With great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, and great grace was upon them all." They realized and manifested something of the power of His resurrection in their daily lives and enjoyed a fulfillment of the grace of II Cor. ix, 8, which was grace that could be seen, as in Acts xi, 23. Grace is threefold—that which saves us, that in which we stand and that which will be

I Rom. 1, 24; Eph. 1, 8, 9; Rom. v, 2. Redemption is wholly of grace through the merits of Jesus Christ without any cause on our part. It is most simply and fully set forth in the words of II Cor. viii, 9, and other words suggested by that wondrous statement, which when fully pondered in connection with His present ministry for us at God's right hand cannot fail to make us a people wholly set apart for Himself. But where shall we find today the fellowship and brotherly love and self renunciation of verses 32-33 and chapter II, 44, 45? Where do any become poor for the sake of others like any sense which as He became poor for us? Where is there such affection for the house of God, the church of God as David manifested when he prepared for the same with all his might or when, as in the days of Moses, the people had to be restrained from bringing (I Chron. xix, 2, 3; Ex. xxxv, 1-10).

Instead of one heart and one soul for the good of all believers it is difficult to find such an attitude even toward one's so called church or denomination, even though such zeal, if it could be found, would be a comparatively poor affair. I praise God that I do know not a few who almost literally manifest the Spirit of their first believers, but the common attitude of the vast majority has been strikingly set forth as follows: "And the multitude of them that profess were of hard heart and stony soul, and every one said that all the things which he possessed were his own, and they had all things in the flesh. And with great power they gave witness to the attractions of this world and the love of gold, and great selfishness was upon them all. And there were many among them that lacked love, for as many as were possessors of lands bought more and sometimes gave a small part thereof for the public good, so their names were heralded in the newspapers, and distribution of praise was made to every one according as he desired" ("Regions Beyond"). If Christians were Spirit filled this phraseology would not be true, but since it is too sadly true where are the truly spiritual who love not in word and tongue, but in deeds that all can see? (1 John III. 16-18.)

good man, full of the Holy Ghost and of faith," and he proved himself a true son of consolation to Saul when the disciples at Jerusalem were afraid of him and for a time would not believe that he was a disciple (Acts xi, 23-26, 27). He felt led to sell his land and put the proceeds in the common fund. His sister Mary, the mother of Mark (Col. ii, 10; Acts xii, 12), who had no property, seems to have been

ner home and used it as a place of gathering for the saints, and both were doubtless guided by the Spirit. In each case it was surely "unto the Lord" and "before the Lord." We must not fix our eyes on others in these matters, but calmly wait on the Lord with the prayer, "What wilt Thou have me to do?" gatherings where under the excitement of the moment many give because others are giving there is danger of men's energy of the flesh which may prove to be wood, hay and stubble to be burned.

For some reason Annals and Saphira seem to have been influenced in the selling and giving of the other and to have done likewise as far as the selling went, but professing to give as the others were doing, they agreed among themselves to withhold a part and thus they led to God. They need not have sold it, and after selling they need not give all if they did not feel so led, but they did need to be honest about it. If they had sold the apostles, "Having sold our property

We gladly know that the "rod of the word of others." It would have been accepted and all would have been won; but their sin was hypocrisy and lying, which the Lord saw fit to deal with. He did it in this stage of the history of the church, then showing us what He thinks of such conduct. If He do not continue so to deal with all like it, it is not because He hates the sin or the less, but He manifests His love in suffering that they may repent.

verses 3 and 4 see a proof that the Holy Spirit is God. Let the question search us, Am I honest with God, am I keeping for myself any part of what I have professed to give to Him? We read in I Cor. xi, 28, 31, that I came of certain sins in that church many were sick and many had died, which did not necessarily prove it, they had perished and gone out in torment, but they had been rescued from the earth.

IN MEMORIAM

On Jan. 14, the death angel visited the home of Mrs. A. C. Pool and took from her midst her beloved husband, Mr. A. C. Pool. He leaves a widow and six children—three boys and three girls—and a host of friends and relatives to mourn his departure. Weep not, dear bereaved ones, for our loss is heaven's gain. Mr. Pool was a kind father and a affectionate husband. He will be greatly missed in his home and also in his church. He was a faithful servant for his Master, he did all he could in working for his church. We do not feel that we could say anything to cheer the bereaved ones aching hearts, but can say to the dear bereaved ones to just live the life that their dear loved one lived and they will meet him where there will be no parting. He was laid to rest in Shiloh cemetery to await the resurrection morn. Rev. M. J. Parrish conducting the service.

He is gone but not forgotten,
 Never will his memory fade,
 Sweetest thoughts will ever linger
 Around the grave where he was laid.
 It was sad to part with him
 And so hard to see him die
 But we trust some day to meet him
 In that home beyond the sky.
 O we loved him, yes we loved him,
 But the Savior loved him more,
 So the angels sweetly called him
 To the bright and happy shore.

You can get some houses in this part and if they have an organ to play you can sometimes pass the time off. It isn't a pleasure to be with any kind of folks, did you know that? May be you will be there and they will have the brass on their faces to insult you before you leave, and young men and women, that is hard to take off of somebody that you don't think is good enough to waste the dirt off of your feet. Now isn't that so? The reason I know is I have been through this. Now young men and women, take my advice and you will come out better.

It seemed to J. A. Stone, a civilian veteran of Kemp, Tex., that he existed between a desperate lung trouble and the grave to come by death. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, "that developed enough that stuck to me, in spite of all remedies for years. My weight ran down to 100 pounds. Then began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which restored my health completely. I now weigh 175 pounds." WICKED JACK FROST.

Accidents will happen, and when carelessness takes a hand they are sure to come. For several years we have been running a gas engine, and were particularly warned to shut off the water from the boiler when the engine was not in use, as Jack Frost would get the best of it. Winter after winter has passed by, and while the peach crop has been killed every year, our engine had escaped, until we had grown careless and never shut the water off. But the heavy frosts at the end of last week did the business, and when we went to start printing the first side of The Banner on Wednesday afternoon we discovered how well Jack Frost, Esquire, had been working, for the engine was burst open in three places.

What was to be done? There was only one thing possible, disconnect the engine and put on the old hand power. This was done and we are slowly going on to completion. It will cause us to lose most of our mail this week, but we are doing the best we can under the circumstances, and trust to the generosity of our subscribers to overlook our being late, and blame it all on Jack Frost.

Victor H. Hanson, for several years past, the advertising manager of the Montgomery Advertiser, has purchased an interest in the Birmingham News and will at once remove to the latter place to take up his new duties. Mr. Hanson has made an enviable record of his work with the Advertiser and doubtless will make as good or better with his new venture, which we heartily hope he may.

The annual report of the Secretary of the Navy to the President has been published and it contains much matter of interest to the people at large. A large portion of the Secretary's message is taken up with data covering the criticisms made on the organizations of the Navy and the plans of our new battleships. He says the Navy Department as at present organized may not be an ideal arrangement from an economical standpoint, but it is very far from being the irresponsible and impractical organization which its critics claim it to be. The plans for the new battleships were selected from a number of plans submitted both by the Department and outsiders, and the Secretary feels no hesitancy in saying that the designs of the North Dakota and Delaware are superior to those of any battleship now in course of construction for any other Navy.

A table has been given out by the office of Naval Intelligence, showing the Navy of the United States as third in the world, in tonnage of all vessels, and second, in number of first class battleships building. Great Britain comes first, of course, with fifty-eight, United States second with twenty-nine, Germany third with twenty-eight, France fourth with twenty-four and Japan fifth with thirteen, in first-class battleships built and building.

Chief Justice, John R. Tyson, has resigned that position. Judge S. D. Weakley was offered the appointment, but declined to accept it.

Cricket Fighting.
Cricket fighting, a national sport in the Celestial Kingdom, is said to be Crickets are trained. They are exercised and drilled, and daily, before a match, smaller, weaker crickets are opposed to them that they may work out for themselves good fighting systems. In matches the betting is very high. The Chinese, who are tremendous gamblers, often lose fortunes over crickets. An American millionaire lost fortunes over race horses. A good cricket fight will last half an hour. The opposing crickets, each in a tube like a box stall, are dropped into a ring with a wall around it about six inches high. A combatant to win must throw his rival over this wall clean out of the ring. Tiny bells are rung by the seconds. These bells have a peculiar timbre and excite the crickets to a very frenzy of fighting. A cricket with a good record will sell for $5 or $10, while champions often fetch $50.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Gentle Hint.
A lady who suffered from a neighbor's fowls that overran and spoiled her garden politely asked her neighbor several times to keep his pets at home, but no attention was paid to her grievance. Finally she hit upon an ingenious method of protecting herself. She prepared grains of corn by trying to them with a strong thread small cards bearing the words, "Please keep your chickens at home," and distributed the grains about her flower beds. The chickens came to feast as usual and greedily swallowed the corn, not perceiving the thread until the card was against their beaks. Then they could neither swallow the card nor rid themselves of the swallowed corn. Twenty or thirty of the marauders ran home, bearing the polite request to their culpable owner, who, struck with the method of the hint, promptly cut the threads and cooped up his fowls.—Bombay Times.

Drinkers' Logic.
"Men drink," said a temperance lecturer, "because they are happy, because they are sad, because they are too warm, because they are too cold, is there any logic in that?"
"When I see men drinking I think of a little boy at the seashore."
"This little boy, at play with his bucket and shovel in the sand, suddenly ran to the edge of an advancing wave and, scooping up a handful of salt water and foam, drank it greedily."
"Oh, don't drink that," said his nurse. "It will make you thirsty."
"What if it does?" said he. "There's plenty more!"

Making It Last.
A young man was lately leaving his aunt's house after a visit when, finding it was beginning to rain, he caught up an umbrella that was snugly placed in a corner and was proceeding to open it when the old lady, who for the first time observed his movements, sprang toward him, exclaiming: "No, no; that you never shall! I've had that umbrella twenty-three years, and it has never been wet yet, and I am sure it shan't be wetted now!"—London Express.

An Annoying Error.
That was a very annoying typographical error that crept into the papers the other day, telling how a prominent society man had been held up by highwaymen and "robbed of his watch and other vegetables." The editor has come out with an explanation that the last word was not vegetables, but valuables.—Judge.

"The Pled Piper."
A New York normal school examination had among its questions, "What is the educational value of 'The Pled Piper of Hamelin'?" A would-be teacher answered, "The Pled Piper teaches children to be kind to animals, especially rats."—New York Times.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

Big Stick Versus Plowshare.
Benjamin Ryan Tillman, senior senator from South Carolina, who was recently called upon to defend himself from a personal attack made by the president, long ago won the sobriquet of "Pitchfork Ben." This was before he had been invested with the senatorial toga. In the course of a speech in his native state, referring to President Cleveland, he said, "But if I go to the senate I promise that I will use a pitchfork in the president's fat old ribs." Senator Tillman has been a persistent foe of the negro in politics and assails the race in and out of season. He passed a bill disfranchising them when he was governor. He held up the nomination of Crum for collector of Charleston for four years because Crum is a negro. Yet the superintendent of his plantation is Ben, a negro he has had with him for over twenty-five years and in whose charge he leaves his family and all his interests when he goes to Washington alone.

A farmer by occupation, he was twice the candidate of the farmers for gubernatorial honors, winning after a hot fight in 1890 and "walking in" two years later. He has been elected to the United States senate three times, his present term expiring in 1913.

Hardy on Dialect.
Thomas Hardy as editor of "Selected Poems of William Barnes" takes occasion in his preface to mourn over the disappearance of a good deal of picturesque Dorset dialect which Barnes used as a vehicle for his poetry. "Since his death," he complains, "education in the west of England, as elsewhere, has gone on with its silent and inevitable effacements, reducing the speech of this country to uniformity and obliterating every year many a fine old local word. The process is always the same—the word is ridiculed by the newly taught; it gets into disgrace; it dies, and, worst of all, it leaves no synonym. In the villages that one recognizes to be the scenes of these pastoralists the poet's nouns, adjectives and idioms daily cease to be understood by the younger generation."

Value of the Dust Bath.
Many people do not realize the value of a dust bath for their skin. By this they mean of the scrub and scales of the skin and rid themselves of vermin. It is the best natural method of bathing. The finer, lighter and drier the dust the more effective it is as a cleanser and vermin destroyer. The dust bath should be in the open air and in a place where the sunlight can strike it. The scratching shed is a good place for it. Here the dust settles quickly and does not affect their breathing.

How to Cure Pork.
Here is the government recipe for salt pork: "Rub each piece with fine common salt and pack closely. Let it stand overnight. The next day weigh out ten pounds of salt and two ounces of saltpeter to each 100 pounds of meat and dissolve in four gallons of boiling water. Pour this brine over the meat when cold, cover and weight to keep it under the brine. Meat will pack best if cut into pieces about six inches square. The pork should be kept in the brine until used."

Good Seed Proves Its Value.
Some tests were made last spring in grading seed oats. The oats were run through a fanning mill into three grades—first, second and third. The first grade was large, plump berries, the second not so large and plump, while the third were small. These three grades were sown in adjoining strips of land at the rate of two bushels an acre. The first grade averaged 98.5 bushels an acre, or forty-five bushels more than the other two grades.—Denver Field and Farm.

Not Well to Start In.
"After the crash," insisted a hospital surgeon to the second, over to where it lay on the pavement and when I asked if I saw any that its ribs were crushed, he replied: "I saw one that was crushed in the back." "Pardon me, doctor," broke in a medical student, who had caught words as he was about to pass the consumptive ward, "but I have no objections I'd like to see a few notes on that accident case." "I pulled his notebook from his pocket," said the surgeon, "and was surprised to find it empty." "No," the surgeon informed him, "it was empty." "I was surprised to find it empty," said the student.

Miss Varina's Valentine.

By Kate M. Cleary.

Copyright, 1919, by Kate M. Cleary.

MISS VARINA was about to set aside the large square box the postman had just handed her with the postal decision that, of course, it was for Laurel, when she caught sight of the superscription, written in a bold masculine hand, "Miss Varina Ellington."

"It's-it's for me!" gasped Miss Varina. "A real valentine—for me!"

Miss Varina had seen her thirty-fifth summer and not unkindly winter. But it was many a year since she had received a valentine. The last she could remember receiving was sent when she was nineteen and used to go to singing school with Ambrose Mead. She and Ambrose had not been formally engaged, but they had understood each other, and it had been taken for granted by both that when the new house on the half section was finished it would be as Mrs. Ambrose Mead that Varina Ellington would enter the same. But, alas, a pretty city girl came to visit in the neighborhood, and where is the country youth who can resist the dazzling charms of a city girl when she appears, starker, in the monotony of his rural solitude? Ambrose was attentive to Miss Thyra Morse. Varina imperiously protested. A lover's quarrel followed, and the city girl went into the new house as Mrs. Ambrose

"SOME ONE HAS SENT ME A VALENTINE," my life if I married Charlie, that his uncle and my aunt have been carrying on this—this lively flirtation!" She broke off with a little despairing gesture. "I'm—I'm really astonished at you, Aunt Varina!"

Miss Varina, flustered, flattered, agitated, clasped and unclasped her hands in nervous ecstasy.

"But—but you're mistaken, Laurel! Indeed you are! It was because I detested—yes, detested—Ambrose Mead that I did not want you to marry his nephew. Why, we haven't spoken for fifteen years—not since he married that poor, shiftless, good-for-nothing—there! She's dead—the Lord forgive me for forgetting!"

"Well, all I can say," averred Laurel in a voice of brisk finality, "is that he has evidently kept you in his heart all this time. And—don't be too hard on the poor fellow, Aunt Varina!"

Miss Varina preened herself, patting the bow on her neck coquettishly.

"You're a little bit," she murmured, her eyes twinkling.

"IT'S-IT'S FOR ME!"

Mead. An indifferent housekeeper and an unsympathetic wife she proved to be. She was dead these five years now, and Ambrose, whose farm joined Miss Varina's own, had been getting along as best he could with such housekeepers as he could hire.

Miss Varina's thoughts now flew over all the town men she knew who might have sent her this valentine.

"No," she decided as her trembling fingers fumbled with the string. "There ain't one of them that thinks of me."

She held up the box and rapturously contemplated the glowing object before her. A cottage covered with pink roses overhung a blue satin lake. The inevitable verse on the inner page read:

My heart is thine—
If thine were mine,
Then would I know
All bliss divine!

"What is it, Aunt Varina? A valentine? Oh, how lovely! For me?"

A girl came eagerly forward. She was a very pretty girl.

"It's for me!" declared little Miss Varina. She was suffused in blushes—

"I NEVER KNEW YOU WERE A FLIRT!"

drowned in them. "You're not the only one, I guess, who can get valentines!"

"For you? Of course, you're young enough and pretty enough to get them by the dozen! Don't it perfectly gorgeous! Who do you suppose sent it—the new minister?"

"No; I don't know as I ought to tell you. But if you look real close you'll see there's two initials written just under the verse on the inside."

With an air of the most vivid interest Laurel lifted the rose covered cottage, the blue lake, the castle, the viaduct, the heart and the doves and bent eagerly over the inner page. She straightened up with a rallying cry and a deprecating pink finger pointed at her aunt's glowing countenance.

"Oh, Aunt Varina! I never knew you were a flirt! 'A. M.'—that's Ambrose Mead, of course. And to think that all the time he has been vowing Charlie must not marry until he was twenty-six, and you've been saying you would ignore me all the rest of your life!"

"FOR I, VARINA, IT WAS FATE."

ped up on the cottage organ. "I may have been a little severe about you and Charlie, and if—"

But, deeming it best to let well enough alone, Laurel had slipped from the room.

Charlie Mead a stalwart young fellow, coming home that night from his work in the town bank, found his uncle, a grim visaged, sad eyed man, brooding above a delicate piece of rice paper foamed over with forget-me-nots. It was a trivial little thing, but pretty and in good taste.

"Charlie, look here! 'Some one has sent me a valentine.'"

"Well, why not, sir? I'm sure you're younger in heart and better looking by a long shot than many of the men to whom it is the custom, I am told, for girls to send valentines today! You can't expect to remain a widower always. The girls of Thomastown are not too dense!"

The elder man raised a perturbed face.

"No girl in Thomastown sent me this! There are initials signed"—He broke in embarrassment.

"My Jove! So there are?"

"They are V. H. E." The young man looked interrogatively at his uncle. "I can't think of any one having them."

"It might be Varina Hildegard Ellington," said Ambrose Mead.

"Why, uncle! And after all your opposition to my marrying Laurel, what a concentrated friend you are!"

"I may have been a bit severe," the elder man admitted. "I-I fancied Miss Ellington—distilled me very much on account of—well, that's past and gone now! But—I think, as a mere matter of neighborly courtesy, I ought to go over after supper and find out if that fine mare of hers is getting over her broken knee all right."

Charlie grinned, vanished and executed a war dance in the hall.

"Better wear your most becoming gown tonight—the crimson cashmere," urged Laurel. "It is quite likely Mr. Mead will follow his valentine with a visit. I'll do the dishes."

And Mr. Mead, in best Sunday attire, did call. But hardly had Miss Varina received him in the parlor when a tall young man, whisking in at the back door, caught a slip of paper up to her arms in soapy water and carried her from the kitchen sink to the china closet. He laid a compelling hand over her lips.

"It won't be eavesdropping," he whispered, "to hear if we get out scot free about those valentines. It was the only way to get the antagonistic couple to release their grip on us—to set them thinking about a love affair of their own. Listen!"

This they heard through the sliding door between the china closet and dining room:

"If it were not for that valentine, Ambrose, I'd never—"

"Nor I, Varina. It was fate. Promise never again to refer to the means of our—"

"I promise. I, too, feel sensitive that it should have taken such a trifle to bring us together and make us understand how foolish we have been. We shall never mention valentine in our house! But—those young people we have been keeping apart—I'm willing to give them this house and the quarter section. Eh, dear?"

"Right! You'll turn my shack into a home—eh, dearest? Bless those children!"

The Dress of General Washington.

This great man was very particular about his personal appearance. He took pains with everything he did and showed off his clothes to advantage. There have been some interesting details of late given of what he wore from 1783 to 1793. The general writes himself in ordering his clothes, "Plain clothes with a gold or silver button if worn in genteel dress are all I desire." He imported his best clothes from England, but on ordinary occasions wore native homespun when out of uniform. For receptions he had a black velvet coat and breeches; the coat a long cut-away, square at the ends, having a small standing collar. There were ten buttons, buttons of silver or open work, steel on the right breast, with blind buttons on the left, four inches long made of black silk braid on the opposite side. The coat had pocket flaps treated in the same way; also cuffs, which were five inches deep. There were two hip buttons at the back. This garment was very long waisted, and the top of the pocket flaps and hip buttons were on a line with the lowest of the breast buttons. It was lined with white satin, accompanied by black velvet breeches, with small buttons and knee buckles; the waistcoat of white or pearl colored satin, with a small standing collar and indented pocket flaps; a fine muslin shirt, with standing ruffles, repeated at the wrists, and the stock of the period; white silk stockings; low cut shoes, with large silver buckles. A dress sword, with silver hilt, suspended by a chain from a belt worn under the waistcoat and a linen stock completed the costume. He wore a bag wig, but not powder.

Goat Mutton.

"When you get a leg of mutton and find on trying to cook it that it seems likely never to get done, it's goat," says a local housekeeper.

"The only way of distinguishing kid from lamb or goat from mutton is that the goat flesh requires longer to cook and even when thoroughly done has a reddish appearance as though it were slightly rare. When properly prepared goat flesh is just as tender, just as nutritious as mutton and has exactly the same flavor. There is a prejudice against it, which, however, is entirely ill founded, and it is likely enough that this feeling is due more to the comic artists than to anybody else. In a comic picture representing the goat the old Billy is usually shown munching a tomato can or a straw hat or a lot of clothes stolen from the line, but as a fact the goat is just as particular about his food as the sheep, eats about the same kind and in spite of the comic artist in about the same quantity. The animal is just as cleanly as the sheep, and the only reason why the butchers do not openly avow their sales of goat meat is on account of the unfounded prejudice against it. It is sold under the name of mutton."—Exchange.

Science For Its Own Sake.

A prominent feature in Faraday's character was his absolute love of science for its own sake. He freely gave his discoveries to his world when he could easily have built up a colossal fortune upon them. He once told his friend, Professor Tyndall, that at a certain period of his career he had definitely to ask himself whether he should make wealth or science the object of his life. He could not serve both masters and was therefore compelled to choose between them. When preparing his well known memoir of the great master, the professor called to mind this conversation and asked leave to examine his accounts, and this is the conclusion the professor arrived at: Taking the duration of his life into account, this son of a blacksmith and apprentice to a bookbinder had to decide between a fortune of £100,000 on the one side and his unswerving devotion to science on the other. He chose the latter and died a poor man. But his was the glory of holding aloft among the nations the scientific name of England for a period of forty years.

A DOCTOR'S ADVICE

For Chronic Coughs and Colds a Prominent Atlanta Physician Says Nothing Equals Vinol.

"I want people to know that I believe the most valuable cod liver oil preparation, the best body-builder, health-restorer, and strength-creator known to medicine to-day is Vinol."

"I advised Vinol in my practice, and find it has no equal for healing coughs, colds, bronchial troubles and sore lungs."

"I have used Vinol in many cases of indigestion, mal-assimilation, and for patients who have no appetite, were anaemic and run-down, with splendid results. I have also found Vinol to be a boon to the aged."

"I believe Vinol to be well worthy of an honest physician's endorsement." Dr. J. E. Ennis, Atlanta, Ga.

Vinol contains no injurious drugs but it actually does contain peptonate of iron, and all the medicinal, curative elements taken from fresh cods' livers without a drop of oil to upset the stomach and retard its work.

Those who try it and receive no benefit may have their money returned on demand. Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

Thackeray's "Jemmes"

The "Fashionable reporter" (Mr. R. F.) of the Post was a familiar figure at weddings and receptions in the forties and fifties, and Thackeray always spoke of him as "Jemmes" and wrote the vials of ridicule on him and his works. "Jemmes" averaged himself by carefully leaving Thackeray's name out of all his lists. "Jemmes" had one direful experience. When Prince Albert went to the Isle of Wight to inspect Osborne the "fashionable reporter" managed to get on board the royal yacht before she left Cowes. When the boat was halfway across the Solent the presence of a stranger on board was detected, and he was interrogated by one of the suit. Jemmes announced his professional position and was informed that he had been guilty of an unwarrantable intrusion. He was forthwith bundled into a small boat which was attached to the yacht, and as the sea was rough he was drenched to the skin in a few minutes. When the yacht arrived at Portsmouth the tide was low, and Jemmes was pulled out of the boat and compelled to wade to the shore through the mud as best he could.—London Truth.

He Paid.

A well known actor was leaving a small Illinois town, near which he had spent the summer, for Chicago to attend rehearsals. The actor was driven up to the rural railroad station and deposited on the platform, together with his two trunks. As the train was about to start he approached a stranger near by and said:

"Are you going to Chicago on this train?"

"I am."

"Have you any baggage?"

"No."

"Well, friend, you can do me a favor and it won't cost you a cent. I've got two good sized trunks here, and they always make me pay excess for one. You can get one checked on your ticket and save me some money."

"Yes, but I haven't any ticket."

"But you just said you were going on this train."

"So I am. I'm the conductor."

The actor paid the excess, as usual.

An Awful Liar.

Sir Archibald Geikie, the distinguished geologist, tells a good story in his capital book of "Scottish Reminiscences." "I was quite sure you had been in our neighborhood," a friend said to Sir Archibald. "I met the old farmer of G., who had a strange tale to tell me. 'Dod, Mr. Geikie,' he began, 'I ran across the queerest body the other day. As I was coming by the head of the cleugh I thought I heard a when tinkers quarrelled, but when I looked down there was as we stood man. Whiles he was chappin' the rocks w' a hammer, whiles he was writin' in a book, whiles hechtin' w' the thorns and miscan in them for a that was bad. When he came up frae the burn, him and me had a large confab. Dod, he tellt me a' about the stanes and hoo they showed that Scotland was once like Greenland, smothered in ice. A very enterteening body, Mr. Geikie, but—an awful, awful liar.'"

—London Tit-Bits.

Rhythm in Rowing.

Rowing means much more than mere exercise of muscles. Over it all lies the strong spell of ordered movement, the delight of pure rhythm, which the rowing man is perfectly justified in claiming must be experienced to be understood.—Field.

Not Very Green.

"Odd, isn't it, how human ways are in such direct contradiction to nature?"

"In what, for instance?"

"Did you ever find anything green about a grass widow?"—Baltimore American.

The State and the Individual.

The state may make it easy for a man to acquire a small holding, but it cannot give the man the energy, the industry, which are necessary if the boon is to be an abiding blessing to him. The state may help men over bad times, but it cannot give men the moral character which enables those who possess it by their energy, determination, industry, to place themselves beyond the reach of temporary disaster.—London Strand Magazine.

Partly So.

"Confess," he thundered, "you are another!"

She shivered.

"Partially," she faltered. "This hat"—she pressed her hand to her brow—"and the upper teeth I wear are borrowed; the rest—yours."

The Feminine Paradox.

The uneducated woman has often the quickest perception, the finest tact, the most vivid sensibility. She will feel without speaking; she understands your inmost thoughts; she knows without being told.—London Black and White.

TRUE WOMANLY BEAUTY.

No woman can be truly beautiful who has a yellow complexion caused by a torpid liver. To be beautiful a woman must have good health, and this can be accomplished by occasionally using St. Joseph's Liver Regulator (either liquid or powder, as you like best.) It keeps the bowels open, pushing off the poisonous, effete matter, and in this way purifies the blood and assists in clearing the complexion. All women should occasionally use St. Joseph's Liver Regulator, Liquid 50 cents a bottle; powder, 25 cents a box.

Sleep

Sleep is nature's building period, when the energy used by the brain muscles and organs is renewed. If you lose sleep your system is robbed of the strength sleep should give. Continued loss of sleep multiplies this loss until you become a physical wreck. Dr. Miles' Nervine quiets the irritated nerves and brings refreshing, invigorating sleep. Nervine contains no opiates, and therefore leaves no bad after-effects.

"For over two years I suffered from nervous prostration, and was going crazy. I could not sleep, nor rest at all. I tried different doctors, but failed to find relief. I was head and heels all the time. I was like one drunk, could not concentrate my mind, and was no restful sleep. I was worried that sleep was out of the question. After taking one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine I felt wonderfully changed. I am now on my third bottle and am gaining all the time. I can lie down and sleep like a child, and am able to do my work."

Woman.

Woman, the gentlest of all creatures, is apt to become masterful and tyrannical, this because she is a creature in whose composition emotion dominates, and emotion when highly stimulated becomes passion, and passion spurs all reasonable limitations and becomes tyrannical. Besides, she is women with more than ordinary firm will and persistent purpose. The when winged by the passion which is natural to the sex become intolerant, masterful and more tyrannical than men. Qualification to the intense action of the impassioned soul is treacherous, and contradiction is treason. Like a stormy wind, they will have the sweep and ignore all contraries. As from this predominance of the emotional element it seems plain that though woman may try many things and succeed in most, she is, with her normal outfit, materially incapacitated from being a statesman or a judge. Daybook of John Stuart Blackie.

Poor Richard's Almanac.

Dr. Franklin himself in one of the last numbers of the almanac gathers together all the best sayings of Poor Richard, which for twenty-five years had amused and edified the country. These sayings are in constant use this day. For example, "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise;" "Drive thy business—let it not drive thee;" "Idle hands, for I have no hands;" "No gains without pains;" "Constant dropping wears away stones;" "Three remove are as bad as a fire;" "He that by the plow would thrive must himself be his hold or drive;" "A fat kitchen makes a lean will;" "Experience keeps a dear school, but fools will learn it no other." It was such homely maxims as these inserted in all the little gaps of the almanac that made it so popular. Franklin said he sometimes sold 10,000 copies in a year, a wonderful sale for that day. The first number of Poor Richard's Almanac appeared in 1732.

MINISTER RIDDLED WITH SHOT.

BODY OF REV. HUDSON FOUND IN POND NEAR HOUSTON, MISS. RIDDLED WITH SHOT.

Houston, Miss., Feb. 5.—The body of Rev. W. T. Hudson, pastor of the Baptist church at this place and one of the most prominent ministers in the state, was found riddled with buckshot in a pond near Houston last night.

It was his custom to prepare his Sunday sermon seated under a tree near the pond and it is considered evident that he was shot from ambush and killed while thus engaged.

Roby Baskin, a negro boy 18 years old, was arrested Sunday morning by Deputy Sheriff J. L. Wilkinson, and locked up for safe-keeping on the charge of having murdered Rev. Dr. W. T. Hudson.

It is the general belief that Rev. Hudson was killed and robbed. Baskin, it is said by some of the citizens, had been following Rev. Hudson several days.

At first it was thought that his leg had been broken, but when he arrived at Tampa, an examination revealed that the leg was only badly bruised.

Allison Remembered.

Washington, Feb. 6.—The senate transacted no public business today, its time being devoted to eulogies of the career of the late William Boyd Allison, senator from Iowa, who died Aug. 4, 1908.

An unusual note of feeling ran through the addresses. They had little of the perfunctory nature generally marking the obituary exercises in the senate, as Senator Allison's long service in the upper national house and the qualities of his character commanded the respect of his colleagues. The principal address was made by Senator Dolliver of Iowa.

Tornadoes Sweep Southern States.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 6.—Death for probably a score of persons, losses of hundreds of thousands of dollars in property and the crippling of many telegraph wires resulted between noon and dusk yesterday from a series of small tornadoes, which swept the south central states, from the Tennessee line to the Texas Pan Handle. Hardly had the bill been passed by the assembly before Governor Gillett received the following message from the president:

"Washington, February 4, 1909.—I, N. Gillett, Governor of California: Your kind letter just received. What is the rumor that the California legislature has passed a bill excluding the Japanese children from the public schools? This is the most offensive bill of all, and in my judgment is clearly unconstitutional and we should at once have to test it in the courts. Can it be stopped in the legislature or by veto?"

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 4.—After a debate, extending from 11 o'clock yesterday morning until 6 o'clock last night, the assembly, by a vote of 49 to 28, rejected the Drew bill, barring aliens from owning land in California. A Bernard Shaw Joke.
After addressing an Edinburgh meeting for ninety minutes once Mr. Bernard Shaw remarked that the time was a quarter to 10, and he had intended finish at 9 o'clock. He did not seem the late Thomas Cooper, the English artist, to illustrate. He was brought before a magistrate in 1846 on some minor charge and was described in the police report as being "fashionably dressed, with large moustache." The Art Journal of the date, commenting on it, said that "no member of the Royal academy perpetrates the attitude of moustaches, a most un-English affectation." Mr. Cooper became a member of the academy a few years later.

A Royal Romance.
The second son of Prince Oscar II. fell in love with a Miss Ebba Munch while at Bournemouth. She was one of the ladies in waiting to the Swedish crown princess, and King Oscar wished his son to make an alliance with one of the royal houses of Europe. The difficulty seemed one to be met only by drastic steps on the part of the lovers, but Queen Sophie's heart was won, and she it was who obtained the king's consent. She was very ill, and a dangerous operation was the only chance of saving her life. "If I undergo it and it is successful, will you allow Oscar and Ebba to be married?" she asked the king, and of course the king promised. A year later the queen was quite well again. The lovers were in her room when the king approached. At the door he stood and listened. Miss Munch was singing to the queen, and he waited until it was over. Then he advanced, held out one hand to his son and gave his other to Miss Munch, and no his pledge was fulfilled and the couple came into their happiness.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia
If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.
A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.
Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.
When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.
Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Peppin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.
Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.
Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

DUMB MEETINGS.
Curious Method by Which Poles in Germany Evade the Law.
The curious method adopted by the oppressed Poles in Germany to evade the provisions of the new law relating to public meetings was revealed in the trial of three Polish residents of Ruhrort, in Westphalia, who had convened a political meeting.
Paragraph 19 of the new law relating to public meetings compels every speaker to use the German language. The Poles circumvent this enactment by holding "dumb" meetings, at which no word whatever is spoken.
At the beginning of this particular meeting the chairman wrote on a large blackboard on the platform an announcement that no speeches could be delivered owing to the prohibition of the use of the Polish language. The contents of the lecture which would otherwise have been delivered would be distributed among the audience in the form of a pamphlet.
This pamphlet was read by the whole audience in perfect silence. The resolutions to be submitted to the meeting were then written on the blackboard and adopted unanimously by a show of hands, still without a single word being spoken.
The public prosecutor took action against the conveners of the meeting for violating paragraph 19 of the new law, but the district court acquitted them. The public prosecutor lodged an appeal, but the higher court at Cologne upheld the judgment of the district court and confirmed the acquittal.
In consequence of this precedent Polish "dumb" meetings, which are already extremely popular in all those parts of Germany where the Poles feel the need of congregating to demonstrate their grievances, can now be held without hindrance.—London Express.
A Maker of Bulls.
Some excellent bulls are credited to William Arolin, who was a London police judge in the thirties of the last century. He once remarked to counsel, "If you can show precisely at what moment the offense was committed and prove that the prisoner was not there when he did it, he could not possibly have done it." And he sagely added, "We cannot direct ourselves of common sense in a court of justice." Of a similar character was an axiom he once delivered himself of, which has been maliciously fathered on many other occupants of the bench, "If ever there was a case of clearer evidence than this case, this case is that case."

The Secret of Long Life!
A French scientist has discovered one secret of long life. His method deals with the blood. But long ago millions of Americans had proved Electric Bitters prolongs life and makes it worth living. It purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, rebuilds wasted nerve cells, imparts life and tone to the entire system. It is a godsend to weak, sick and debilitated people. "Kidney trouble had blighted my life for months," writes W. M. Sherman, of Cushing, Mo., "but Electric Bitters cured me entirely." Only 50c at Upchurch Drug Co.

The Porcelain Valentine.

By Clarissa Mackie.

Copyright, 1916, by Clarissa Mackie.

MISS LEAFY BEAN stared into the window of the stationer's shop, surveying the long lines of valentines that hung in festoons from end to end. There were all sorts of valentines from the humblest penny post card, with its crudely colored picture and amorous verse, to the huge affairs of satin and lace, with doves and cupids and bleeding hearts painted thereon.

Miss Leafy looked them over carefully. There was not one that would answer the purpose she had in mind. She entered the shop and asked in a firm, rasping voice for what she was seeking.

"Comic valentines!" repeated the clerk, with astonishment in his sheep-like eyes. "Yes, ma'am—of course, ma'am," and he drew a box from beneath the counter and displayed for Miss Leafy's inspection a varied assortment of hideous and coarsely colored caricatures. If he expected to see the little old lady shrink at the sight of the lurid pictures he was disappointed, for she put on a pair of steel bowed spectacles and surveyed each one critically—indeed, one might say with the eye of a connoisseur.

"I will take this one," she said finally, opening her slim purse. Then she hurried toward the door. As she passed through she met another woman a little younger than herself. They exchanged stiff bows of recognition. Miss Leafy blushed a little and clutched the envelope containing the comic valentine within the folds of her skirt.

She stepped out along the quiet street toward the Old Ladies' home with primly stepping feet and a soft swing of her ample cashmere skirts. She wore a rusty velvet cape, with a high collar turned up around her withered chin, and she carried a large pink muff. Beneath the narrow brim of her small bonnet her nose shone very red with the cold, and the sting of the sharp wind brought the tears to her weak eyes.

When she reached the home, which was a fine, imposing structure set in handsome grounds, she turned into the flagged path with renewed energy and was soon snugly ensconced in her own half of the room she shared with Ellen Drake. It was a large room, with polished floor and several large windows, two on the front and two on the side. The apartment was divided by an imaginary line drawn diagonally from the door to the front corner, thus affording each occupant two windows and the use of the door.

A rug placed in the center of each diagonal space, small iron beds, dressers, comfortable rockers and tables formed the furniture, while a large coal stove in the center of the room radiated warmth and cheer to every corner.

Miss Leafy removed her bonnet and cape and hung them, together with the pink muff, within her tiny closet. Then she seated herself at the table and drew out the comic valentine she had just purchased. She adjusted her spectacles again and looked long and curiously at the picture. She did not smile or otherwise exhibit any evidence of amusement. There was the light of an indomitable purpose in her eyes and in the set of her thin lips.

The picture portrayed a hideous woman, with mincing gait, wearing an enormous bonnet, from which hung multitudes of varicolored feathers and ribbons. Her dress was trimmed with buttons, buckles, fringes, bows and streamers, while about her shoulders was draped a lace shawl. She held a tiny parasol above her bedizened head. Beneath were lines of doggerel verse:

You are nothing but clothes; you haven't a mind!
Your silks are but cotton; your hat is a sham;
You're a smiling deceiver abroad in the land!

Miss Leafy nodded her head approvingly. "That's Ellen Drake to the life," she said slowly. "She thinks she's fine, and she expects every one else to think the same. She's a smiling deceiver, for she pretends to be pleasant to every one, and she treats me like the dirt beneath her feet. A-pretending that shawl is real lace! How comes it that Ellen Drake can wear lace shawls any more? I can't! I'll stick to it that mine is real lace too. I ain't going to take no back seat for Ellen Drake if her pa was a schoolteacher!"

Here Miss Leafy ended her soliloquy, and, folding her hideous valentine to fit a long envelope, she inclosed it and sealed the flap. Then with a scratchy pen dipped in rusty brown ink she printed the letters of Ellen Drake's name.

"There!" she ended triumphantly. "It'll just drop that in the letter box at the corner so she'll get it the first thing in the morning. After she learns what folks think of her make she won't hold up her head quite so high!" She affixed a stamp to the envelope and, throwing a startled glance about her thin shoulders, she hurried out to the corner of the street and posted the letter.

Ellen Drake was late. She did not return to the home until just as the occupants were sitting down to their evening meal in the long, cheerful dining room.

She left her wraps in the hall and took her seat beside Miss Leafy with a grim nod that belied the pleasant twinkle in her mild blue eyes. She was a small, plump woman, with faded blond hair and a round, rosy face and smiling lips that disclosed rows of even white teeth. These teeth were at once the envy and despair of Miss Leafy Bean's heart. Her own had gone long ago, and she was now reduced to a toothless underjaw, while an ill fitting plate of obviously false teeth adorned the upper one.

"Cold out, Ellen?" asked old Mrs. Brown from across the table.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Drake. "It's dreadful cold. Looks like snow."

"Been buying valentines?" continued Mrs. Brown, with a snickering laugh that was echoed down the table in diminishing echinations.

"Some," returned Mrs. Drake spirit-edly. "I always buy valentines. I believe in 'em!"

"Believe in 'em! Valentines are only for young folks a-courtin' and such," jeered Mrs. Brown.

"Valentines mean love," continued Ellen Drake soberly, "and old folks want love just as much as young ones do—and a sight more, I'm thinking. It don't make no difference if you're a hundred years old, if you get a valentine with hearts and posies on it and doves and flowers and a pretty verse to it it warms you all up, not quite the same as when you was sixteen, but almost!" She uttered a mellow laugh that warmed more than one of the feeble, discontented old women gathered there.

"That's so," assented Miss Piper in her shrill treble. "I remember my first valentine." And so each one told a story about some valentine she had received in the old days—some message of a love that came so readily and all unsought in the golden old days. And as they told their stories withered cheeks reddened, faded eyes brightened and fretful voices took on softer cadences until, when they rose, there was a warmer unanimity of feeling among them, and when they parted for the night they strayed off in groups of twos and threes, still telling of the old days, the golden old days, when love was everything, when love was king.

All save Miss Leafy. She had maintained a stony silence during the tender reminiscences that had arisen like a cloud of incense about her, a cloud that hovered about, but did not encompass her. She withdrew herself from it, just as she withdrew from their playful questioning, with a grim shrug. She went to her room alone and sat down on her side of the glowing heater, with her skirts turned back over her knees and her feet on the hearth; she stared through the crack of the stove door at the ruddy coals; in them she saw pictures of the past.

There were old days, but never golden days. She remembered bitterly that she had always been small and lean and homely. She never had a valentine. She never had a lover. She never had married. She had cared for her parents, who had lived to a ripe old age, and when they died she had sold the place and with the proceeds had purchased life-long comfort in the home. That had been her life—always lonely, with a heart hungering for love and kindness, which, when offered, she could not recognize, but fought off with shy suspicion.

When Ellen Drake arrived and was assigned to share a room with Miss Leafy the newcomer had sought by every art known to her genial little soul to win Miss Leafy's regard. Perhaps she might have done so had not an unfortunate thing happened. Mrs. Drake in unpacking her garments displayed to Miss Bean's admiring eyes a black lace shawl. "It's real lace," said Ellen simply. "It belonged to my grandmother."

Leafy Bean bit her lip and looked with covetous eyes upon the real lace shawl. She fingered its filmy texture, and then she said carelessly:

"I've got one just like that, only mine's white. I'd show it to you, only it's in the bottom of my trunk. I'll get it out some day. Mine's real lace too."

"I'd admire to see it," said Ellen Drake heartily, and Leafy had crept away to bed with a resentful heart and a very guilty conscience, for Leafy Bean never had a lace shawl in her life.

All the year that followed Ellen Drake's arrival at the home Leafy Bean had maintained a frigid demeanor toward that lady. This was harder to understand, because the women occupied the same apartment and a more amiable relation would have seemed in much happier to both of them. It is true that Ellen Drake strove for this, but after awhile she tired of repeated requests, and so day after day the women would sit on opposite sides of the pleasant room in perfect silence. Sometimes one of the other would have visited or they would meet in the living room downstairs, but there was generally silence between them, or, at best, a veiled hostility.

Because Ellen Drake dressed tastefully from the remnants of a once well stocked wardrobe Leafy Bean had nurtured a bitter jealousy which culminated in the purchase of the hideous valentine. And now Leafy was thinking how, the first thing in the morning, Ellen would receive the valentine. Perhaps she would not toss her head and flaunt her finery in the face of—

Just then the door opened, and Ellen Drake came in. She drew a rocking chair close to the stove and sat there for a few moments in silence; then, with a visible effort, she said in a conciliatory tone:

"Leafy Bean!"

"Well!" said Miss Bean sourly. "I got a valentine today," pursued Ellen, with some hesitation.

Miss Leafy swallowed hard. "Al-ready," she uttered; then she bit her lip in vexation.

"Well," continued Mrs. Drake slowly, "it's this way, Leafy: It's not a regular valentine. It was a letter from a lawyer saying that my fourth cousin, old Abe Harmon, had died out west somewhere and left me $500. So I call it a valentine," she ended, with a quiet laugh.

Miss Leafy snorted bitterly. "You can buy lots of clothes with $500," she said, with firm emphasis.

"Oh, I ain't quite so dressy as that," Leafy laughed Mrs. Drake good-naturedly. "What I want to say is that I've got an idea!"

She hesitated again as though in doubt as to the reception of her idea by her taciturn roommate.

That lady was lost in a painful reverie. It was only another evidence of the injustice of fate that Ellen Drake, the possessor of a real lace shawl, should become an heiress. Leafy was glad she had sent the valentine.

"OF COURSE I MEAN IT."

"I was thinking, Leafy," pursued Ellen Drake, "that maybe you'd like to get some teeth of that new dentist. He puts in porcelain teeth just like mine for $40, and I was thinking you might as well use some of my money and have the teeth now. I ain't got any particular use for the money, and you can pay it back from your knitting a little at a time."

There was silence. Mrs. Drake leaned back in her chair as if glad the announcement was out and prepared for a stormy reception of her proposal.

Miss Leafy stared hard through the crack in the stove door. The coals glowed redly, then they changed to a ruddy blue, and there was a sharp sting behind her little brown eyes.

Presently she spoke, and her sharp voice sunk to a quaver as she asked:

"Do you mean, Ellen Drake, that you're offering to lend me some of your $500 so I can have porcelain teeth like yours?"

"Of course I mean it," said Ellen heartily, "and, what's more, I'm going to use some of that $500 to have a good time with before I die. We'll go to concerts!"

"We?" murmured Miss Leafy, aghast. "Of course, you and me, and perhaps we'll ask some of the others, too, and maybe we'll have doings in our room some evening. Oh, I'm going to take a sight of comfort with Cousin Abe's valentine!" And she laughed a cheery little laugh that seemed to open up some long choked spring in Miss Leafy's bosom, for she burst into bitter sobbing and fung her hands before her little homely face.

"Leafy Bean! I do declare! What-ever is the matter? Crying because you're going to have new teeth?"

"Tain't so," sniffed Leafy. "I'm crying because I'm a liar!"

"A—a-what?" gasped Ellen Drake. "I'm a liar—and much worse!" repeated Leafy, with stern emphasis.

"Ellen Drake, when I said I had a lace shawl like yours I was lying. I never had one, and it wasn't real lace!"

"For the land's sake! Well—what of it? They're out of style anyway."

"I'm worse than a liar," repeated Leafy gloomily. "I sent you a funny valentine through the mail. Now, I guess, you won't offer me no teeth," she said, with a defiant smile.

Ellen Drake stared. Then she threw back her head and laughed. "Oh, Leafy Bean, did you send me a funny valentine?" she chuckled. "I am glad," she continued merrily, "because, you see, it will make a lot of fun. They will all laugh, and it will do them a sight of good, and it won't hurt me a mite. Well, it's all right now, Leafy. And you'll go tomorrow and see the dentist about your teeth!"

Leafy Bean laughed shamefacedly.

"I expect I got what you'd call a porcelain valentine," she said.

Mountain Creek.

On Thursday the 4th inst. five miles east of Mountain Creek, the dwelling house of Elder J. M. Todd was burned to ashes, with all of its contents; nothing was saved out of the house. He was absent, his wife and daughter were at the spring and his helpless mother, 86 years old was in the house. After he discovered the fire, which commenced on top of the house, she scrambled to the back door and by this time Mrs. Todd and daughter met her and managed to get her out in the yard. The top was falling in when myself and three boys arrived and conveyed her out of danger. It occurred about nine o'clock in the morning and it was not carelessness of the women. Bro. Todd is known to be a hard working man and a minister of the gospel and eats honest bread and any one wishing to give to the destitute and needy, send to Bro. J. M. Todd, Mountain Creek, and it will be thankfully received.

TRUE WOMANLY BEAUTY.

No woman can be truly beautiful who has a yellow complexion, caused by a torpid liver. To be beautiful a woman must have good health, and this can be accomplished by occasionally using St. Joseph's Liver Regulator (either liquid or powder, as you like best). It keeps the bowels open, passing off the poisonous, effete matter, and in this way purifies the blood and assists in clearing the complexion. All women should occasionally use St. Joseph's Liver Regulator, Liquid 50 cents a bottle; powders, 25 cents a box.

A Prophecy.

A certain college president in Indiana, a clergyman, when addressing the students in the chapel at the beginning of the college year observed that it was "a matter of congratulation to all the friends of the college that the year had opened with the largest freshman class in its history."

Then, without any pause, the good man turned to the lesson for the day, the Third Psalm, and began to read in a voice of thunder:

"Lord, how are they increased that trouble me!"—Detroit News-Tribune.

"I see sixteen years elapse between acts 2 and 3," said the manager. "Gives me an idea."

"What's that?" inquired the author.

"It's the years that the heroine wears during those sixteen years on exhibition in the lobby. That ought to draw the women in droves!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Humor.

A NEW ONE.

The Man With the Conundrum Habit at It Again.

The man with the aggravating side whiskers comes into the office of the man with the discouraged eyebrows and says:

"I've thought up a new one."

"You have, have you?" asks the man with the discouraged eyebrows.

"Yes. It's a corker. Why are the little sister and brother of a young lady who has been keeping company with a young man named Julius Smaltz and who has been away from town for two months and who is returning to see her on Sunday evening—why are the little sister and brother, who are hiding respectively behind the portieres and the piano while the sister sits expectantly on the divan near the doorway waiting for the bell to ring announcing the arrival of her sweetheart, it being nearly 8 o'clock on Sunday evening and the beau having telephoned that he will arrive a few minutes before that hour—why are they like the throng that stood along the Appian way on the Ides of March when Caesar was riding along in his chariot en route to the forum?"

"What?" mutters the man with the discouraging eyebrows.

The man with the aggravating side whiskers goes into the same detail once more.

The other man glares at him and asks:

"Why is a man who comes into your office and asks you blamed fool questions like a man who has paid a dollar and a half to a collector as the last installment on a set of books he didn't want in the first place? Because you hope he never comes back."

Indignantly the man of the side whiskers arises and goes toward the door laughingly, saying:

"Oh, very well! The answer is because they want to see Julius Caesar, but I wouldn't tell you now if you begged on bended knees."

And he slams the door as he goes out.—Chicago Post.

A Pleasant Thought.

"Well, the doctor says, my dear, that it will be months and perhaps years before I can hope to get my strength back."

"Don't be discouraged, George. It might be worse."

"Well, there's one thought, dear, that helps to keep me from despair."

"And what is that, George?"

"I won't have to tote around that ding banged rubber plant any more!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

So Sweet of Him.

"Hello, old man!" exclaimed Dubley at the literary circle reception. "It's a pleasant surprise to meet you here."

"Good of you to say so, old chap," replied Brown.

"Yes. You see, I was afraid I wouldn't find anybody but bright and cultured people here."—Catholic Standard and Times.

A Home Remedy For Burns.

No housekeeper should be without a bottle of olive oil and lime-water for burns. A preparation should always be in readiness in case of emergency. Add lime-water to oil until a creamy emulsion is formed, and bottle, always shaking well before applying. The effect of this upon burns is wonderful in its healing and soothing powers, and it is equally efficacious for sunburn.—Harper's Bazar.

Epilepsy, Fits.

Convulsions, or Spasms, and St. Vitus' Dance.

Many cases can be cured by strengthening and building up the nervous system. To do this a nerve medicine is needed. Dr. Miles' Nervine will be found efficacious and satisfactory. It has cured many cases of these diseases, and we believe it will cure you. We can give you names of many who have been cured through its use. Write for advice.

"My son John had epilepsy for years, and after having him treated by specialists for over 2 years he still continued to have attacks. I had most given up in despair, but seeing the virtue of Dr. Miles' Nervine in the case of a friend, I concluded to try the Nervine. During June, 1904, I gave him a teaspoonful three times a day, then in July I gave it as directed, and I could not say that he was improving, and he had not had a spell since August 21, 1904, and has taken no medicine since Jan. 1. I am writing the case just as it is, hoping it will induce others to try it."

An Awful Rebuke.

Once upon a time a certain community planned to give a dinner to a judge there. When the judge came to town the list of those invited he raised vigorous protest against one name, that of a man who had been the most brilliant lawyer in town, but who was now the town drunkard. They finally overcame his opposition, but the town drunkard had heard of it. He was the last speaker called upon. He arose and said: "Mr. Toastmaster—Fifteen years ago I had a practice in this town that amounted to $12,000 a year. I had a wife and family whom I supported in comfort. I had my own horse and carriage. At that time the guest of the evening was on his way west in an emigrant wagon. He landed in this town and started in to make his living. Since then, Mr. Toastmaster," he cried, with a pathetic break in his voice—"since that time I have been going steadily down, down, down, and our guest has been going up, up, up, until now we are just about on a level."

Equal to the Occasion.

The author of "Across England in a Dogcart" once stopped to examine a church in the little village of Enstone:

The day was warm, and on leaving the church I rested for awhile in the grateful shade of the building and for the sake of the coolness still kept my hat in my hand. While standing there I overheard one workman ask of another:

"Why do 'e keep 'is 'at off like that out of doors, mate?"

"'Cause 'e's a Quaker, o' course," replied the mate. "Quakers alius do in churchyards."

Here was an opportunity not to be lost. "No," said I, "I am not a Quaker. I am an Episcopalian."

There was a short, awkward pause. Then the first workman, evidently of an inquiring turn of mind, said to his fellow mason, who seemed to be considered an authority:

"A Episcopale 'one, 'e says 'e is. Wot's that, Bill?"

"Oh," replied the learned Bill, quite equal to the occasion, "that's one of them fancy foreign religions, sure!"

CHILDREN!

Vinol is the only preparation of Cod Liver Oil that children will take and which is easily assimilated by their delicate digestive organs. It builds up firm, healthy flesh, and makes little limbs round and plump. Delicate children thrive on it and love to take it.

The body-building and strengthening properties of Cod Liver Oil—but no oil—combined with peptonate of iron, makes Vinol the ideal tonic for delicate children. It tastes good and always does good.

GROWING CHILDREN

play hard and work hard. They use up an enormous amount of energy and vitality that needs replacing. Give them Vinol regularly. It keeps them healthy, builds strong bones, sound flesh and muscle and pure rich blood.

DELICATE GIRLS

"My 9 year old daughter was weak, pale, and had no appetite. I gave her Vinol, and she began to thrive at once. She gained rapidly in weight, color and strength."—MRS. W. E. GILMORE, Durand, Mich.

SICKLY CHILDREN

cannot digest ordinary Cod Liver Oil on account of their greasy nature and nasty taste. It repels their delicate little stomachs. Vinol contains all the medicinal value they do and tastes good besides.

"MY TWO CHILDREN,

who were puny and ailing, rapidly gained flesh and strength when I began to give them Vinol. I proved that Vinol is a splendid tonic for delicate children."—MRS. C. ALLEN, New Bedford, Mass.

The SPORTING WORLD

Career of Slosson.
Nobody in the realm of sport has had a better or more eventful career than George Slosson, who recently defeated George Bottom for the 18.1 ball championship. He has been champion of 18.1 ball five, at 18.2 ball five, at cushion caroms and at the complete champion's game in which the corners were marked off with diagonal lines.

His first public match was in 1870 in Springfield, Mass., at the old four ball game. As a youth he once came in contact with Michael Phelan, an

GEORGE SLOSSON, BILLIARD CHAMPION. Slosson is an autumellum champion. Slosson has gone right through the evolution of the game up to its present point of scientific development and kept pace with it all the time.

Slosson is what is known as a fire-arm player, manipulating his stroke rickily from the elbow down and with a stiff wrist. He hasn't the ease and elasticity of some players, but he is an incessant worker, determined and a thorough master of every line point in billiards. He is not the close player that Sutton and Schaefer are, but as an executioner, general and all around performer he is no slacker.

Freak Shot Putters.

The University of Chicago has the oddest bunch of shot putters that ever competed for any team. When Coach A. A. Stagg of the maroons sized up his field in this event he found that he had the most freakish set of shot putters in the world. The men who are working at this event are Schommer, Crowley, Hubble, Kelly, Gerend, Rademacher, Prather and Menaul. The last four are members of the freshmen team. Of this bunch Kelly, Prather, Rademacher and Gerend are left handers.

Kelly, the great tackle of the maroon football team, is well known in eastern athletic circles, and any one who has ever seen this giant competing in the shot put is sure to have noticed that he puts the weight with his left hand. Last year Prather appeared in local athletics, and he, too, was a south paw. Rademacher, the giant of the freshmen football team, was the next left hander who attracted the attention of Coach Stagg to the peculiarity of his field of shot men.

The final surprise came when Gerend, a 220 pounder, appeared on the scene and also showed the weight with his left hand. Coach Stagg spoke to Gerend about the field of left handers, and Gerend surprised the "Wizard of the Midway" by putting the weight equally well with his right arm.

Coach Stagg is perplexed over the situation. He is able to coach a man who is right handed or one who is left handed, but when it comes to one who can do the same distance with either hand the case is hard to handle. He is unable to decide which way Gerend should put the shot, as neither way offers any advantage over the other.

Montreal to Boom Athletics.

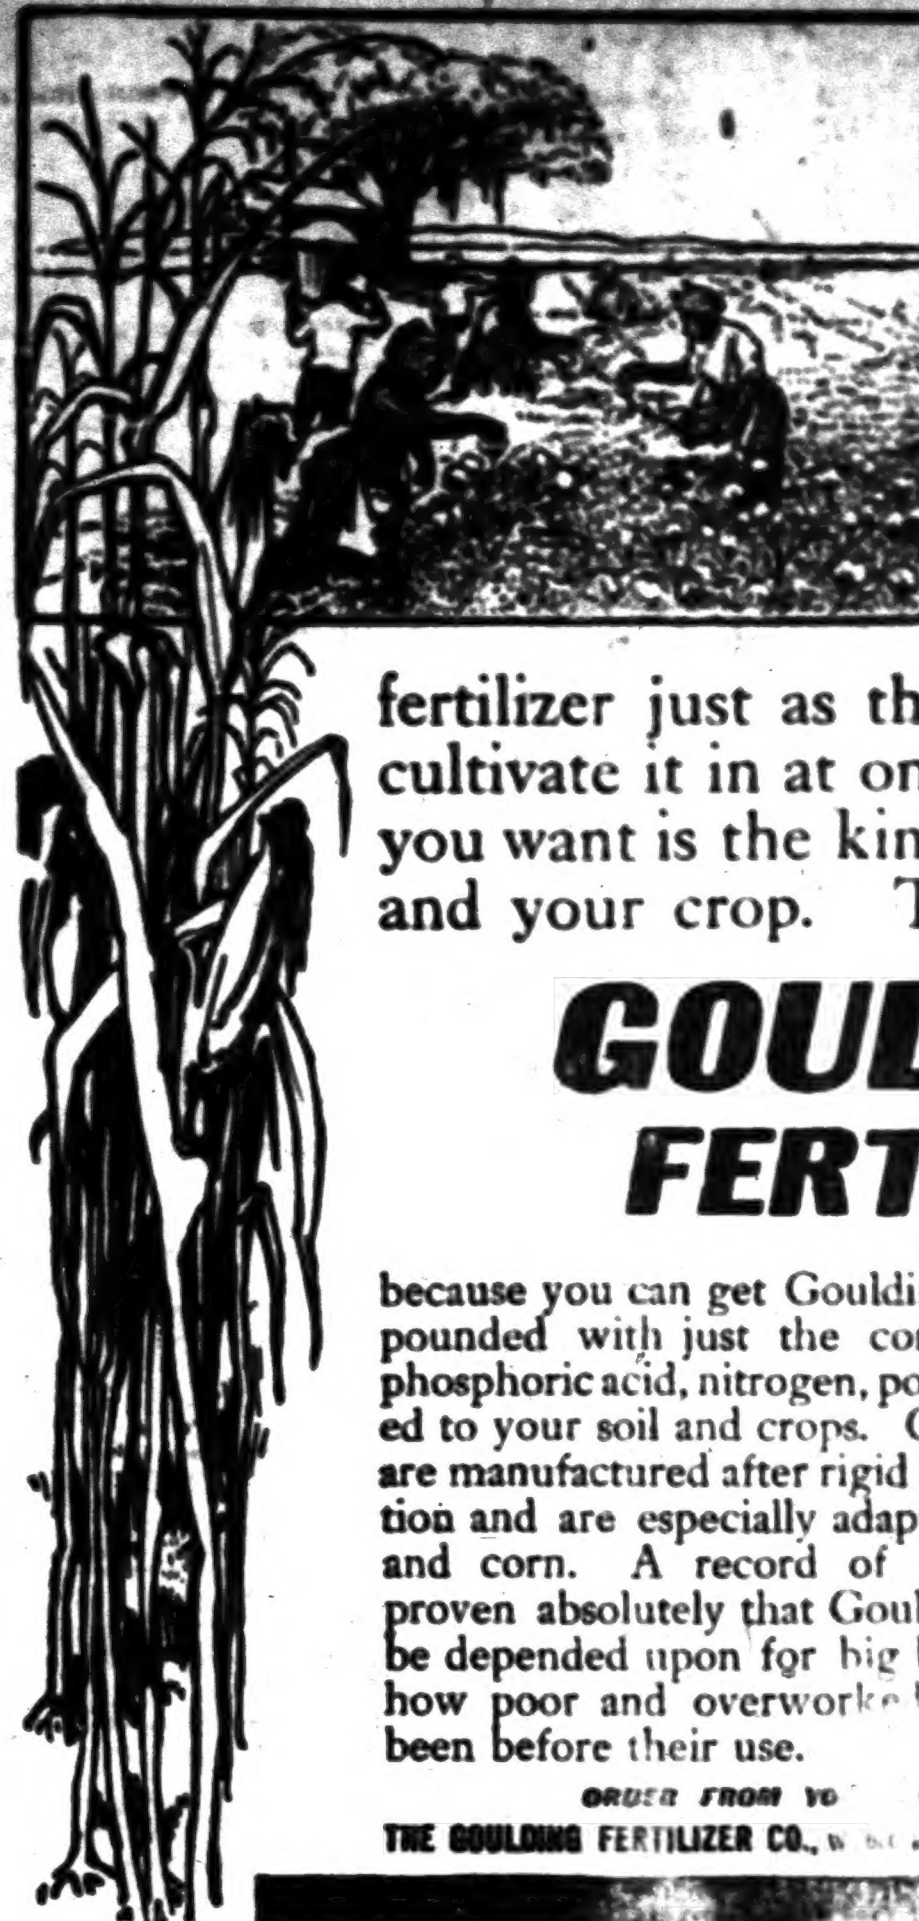

Members of the Montreal A. A. of Montreal, Canada, intend making a determined attempt to boom athletics, erect a new clubhouse and to participate in international sports. At a recent meeting of the directors the advisability of erecting a palatial $50,000 clubhouse was discussed, and the project met with great favor. No definite action was taken on the question, but it is understood that the matter will be settled shortly. It is planned to create practically a new organization along the old lines.

New Record For Ice Pacing.

A new mark for a paced mile on ice was set by The Eel in an exhibition at the Ottawa (Canada) race meet recently. The horse was started for the purpose of breaking the world's ice record of 2:14, made at Toronto two years ago. The day was still and mild and the track in perfect condition. Three seconds were clipped off the old record, as six official watches caught the time as 2:11. The quarter was made in 32 seconds, the half in 1:05 and the three-quarters in 1:59.

Going Some.

Being pursued by a farmer and his three sons after being caught in the chicken yard, a young colored person had just made up his mind that he was not eluding his followers as quickly as might be when a long eared jack rabbit jumped up from the roadside and started down the road ahead of him. The would be chicken thief had run a few hundred feet farther when the farmer and his boys were astonished to hear the negro shout in a voice that quavered with fright, though unrestrained, "Say, for de Lord sake, you rabbit, get out ob de way and let some one run who can run."—Argonaut.

The Emperor's Orderly.

Frenchmen of every rank and class dearly love titles. The manager of a Paris insurance company was decorated with the Legion of Honor a few days ago, and the clerks in the employ of the company presented him with a piece of plate to which their visiting cards were attached. On looking over these he was a good deal puzzled and amused by the visiting card of the office "boy," an old soldier from the Invalides, who was employed to open the office doors from 9 to 4. Under the man's name was the title "the emperor's orderly." He sent for the old soldier, who stood in and saluted.

"Of what emperor are you the orderly, and how?" he asked. The old invalid drew himself up to attention. "I am the orderly of the emperor," he said, "Napoleon, le Petit Corporal." "But he is dead. He has been dead some time," answered the puzzled manager.

"I must his tomb for him," growled the old soldier.—London Express

Sunshine and Long Life.

Some towns on the Italian side of the Swiss Alps are noted for the great number of sunny days. Carabietta and Pentilino, near Lugano, head the list with 327 and 331 sunny days respectively in one year. Possibly because of this liberal amount of sunshine the percentage of old people is exceptionally high in the canton of Tessin, forty-four per thousand being over seventy years old and ten per thousand over eighty.—New York Post.

MARRIED

On Sunday afternoon last at the residence of Mr. Lee Hayes, father of the bride, at Mulberry, the Rev.
who propose having fine turnout welcome prospective customers the new store. There will be music and ice cream and a big time generally.

At the residence of the bride's father, Feb. 7, Mr. Willie Vinson and Miss Clara May Keel were united in marriage, Rev. J. L. Nee performing the ceremony.

At Thorsby, February 10, Mr.

entine Hawthorn were united, Rev.

PLEASANT ENTERTAINMENT

An occasion, beautiful in its very detail was the progressive party with which Miss Callie Warr, assisted by Miss Robbins, entertained a few of her friends last Saturday evening. In every feature it was one of the most artistic functions ever given in Clanton. Notwithstanding the snowout of rain the guests assembled at the appointed time.
After entering the brilliantly illuminated home, the inclemency of the weather was soon forgotten, for all was pleasure and cordiality within.

The valentines motif obtained in all the decorations. The reception hall and parlor were elaborately decorated with hearts of all sizes.
A festoon of hearts, tied with ribbons, was over the door, entering the parlor, while hearts were also carefully used on the window curtains.

The heart guests included Messames Glenzie Dennis and Gamma Anderson, Misses Stanley, Woods,
Rose and Bettie Mullins; Messrs.
A. L. White, C. F. Jones, J. H.
Middleton, Frank Thomas, E. B.
Deason and Tom Woods.

The score cards were large white cards, embossed with tiny red hearts. The successful contestants in this interesting game were Messames and Mullins, Mrs. Anderson, and Mr. Middleton. On a cut, Miss Woods captured the prize, an immense heart-shaped box of chocolate bon-bons.

At the supper hour the folding doors connecting the lovely dining room and parlor were thrown open, and the guests were served at the beautifully appointed dining table, the exquisite damask cloth having hearts scattered as tastefully as it nature spreads her many tinted leaves over the earth, after once having left the chilly frost. The dining centerpiece was a tall cut glass vase of red carnations, resting on a handsomely embroidered cloth.
The lights were covered with red shades, casting a soft light over the room. Graceful ribbons of hearts reached from the chandelier to the four corners of the table. The place cards were hearts with hand-painted carnation. The beautifully served supper was most delicious and of each of the courses; as red was the color scheme, the ices and cakes were red and in heart shape. While partaking of this elegant repast, a string band secluded in a cozy corner, discoursed beautiful music.

The guests were then invited to the parlor where they were greeted by an immense red heart shaped cake, resting on a table covered with an embroidered cloth, done in American Beauty roses. On cutting this the dainty little silver heart fell to Mr. Tom Woods, proving clearly that he does not propose to be numbered among the bachelors.

Altogether this occasion was thoroughly enjoyable, and the guests took their departure hoping to soon have the pleasure of accepting the hospitality of this charming hostess.

looking forward for the good year of 1909 to bring forth a bounteous crop and trusting it will be even a more prosperous year than 1908.
It is indeed a pleasure to visit the different parts of the county and find that the farmers are so much interested in their own general welfare.

Prof. Roper and myself have just returned from Oden and County Line, local at which places he, an assistant County Lecturer, spoke very eloquently to the farmers in behalf of the F. E. & C. U. of A.
They seemed to be very much interested over the lecture. I am proud to say that I believe the spirit of unionism is present among the good people of both locals. We were lavishly entertained. And too, when I hear men say that they intend to be the last one to quit the union, it proves to me that they are men that are ever ready to stand by and support the principles of our grand and noble order. Brethren, let us all rally to the support of our true and just cause, thereby hastening the time when the farmers, who are now looked on as the slaves of the world, can live in a land of peace and plenty. Then farm life will be a pleasant life in stead of a burdensome one, as it is now.

Wishing everyone pleasure, happiness and prosperity.

Respectfully,
WALTER KENDRICK.

IN MEMORY.

On Feb. 9, the death angel came and took away the spirit of little Harvey Grooms to the realms above.
He had been sick for many weeks and his sufferings were great. Dear weeping friends and relatives, we have nothing of this world's consolation to offer. We do not feel that we could speak any words that would ease your aching hearts or fill the vacancy of this dear one, but remember the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away and he will fold his arms of love and protection around those who put their trust in him. Little Harvey was laid to rest in Isabella cemetery on the 10th, where a large congregation of mourning relatives and friends had gathered to pay their last respects.

New Harmony.

Editor Banner—Please give me a short space in your paper to say a few words. Health of this community is very good except a few bad colds.

Stock law pastures are all the go
now. A great many of the people are tearing down their field fencing and leaving their crops in the woods. Rain in this vicinity is plentiful. People are getting behind with plowing on account of so much bad weather.

Our school is progressing nicely under the management of Miss Annie Cherry. We all like her very much; hope we can keep her with us.

Well, we notice a lot about prohibition. I just want to say right here. I think for myself it is a bad law. First, look how much it takes from the school fund; the tax will be raised on us in some other way.
Second, it takes away the privilege from us. I think what a man makes he ought to have a right to do what he pleases with it. We make corn and rye and syrup and it looks to me like we would have a perfect right to do what we pleased with it. Some people are going to drink whiskey as long as they live and they will send an order to Tennessee, Florida or Kentucky, and that reminds me of a circus that will come to Clanton and you will hear people say: "I am not going to give them any of my money, for it will be gone clear out of the country." And it will be the same way with the whiskey, they send off to other States and the money is gone plumb out of the State and this State poorer and the other richer. We spoke of the school fund; you will hear some people say they don't want any whiskey for education. I'd just as soon have that is to be taxed to death
some other way to pay it.

The writer wonders if they will prohibit the use of tobacco. We look for all that to come down the line. First, we had the proposed road law; next have the game and fish law; next, the prohibition law;
next, the new forest law. We wonder what will come next. Hello! I forgot the stock law.

Advantages of a Bank Account

More and more in late years, with improvements in business system, methods and facilities the custom has grown of re-mitting checks by mail in payment of bills of all kinds, as well for business, personal and family expense items in the residence town as for purchases of merchandise from distant points.

This method of payment has the distinct advantage of preserving a record of fact and date and amount on the check stub, and of an additional evidence in the return check with the endorsement of the payee.

Besides these advantages to the customer there is an obvious saving of time to the payee and promotion of his convenience in entering up the proper credit.

Death of Mr. L. M. Stevens.

As the sun was sinking behind the western horizon giving space for the beautiful canopy of the evening on Feb. 11, 1909, the fleecy winged angel lowered its soaring till it gently rested on the home of our much beloved brother, L. M.
Stevens, and bore from thence that spirit, noble, true and eager to float over life's billows to the shores of eternal bliss. Bro. Stevens leaves a widow, one precious little babe, Leola, and one sister, Mrs.
R. J. Mahan, of Billingsley and a host of friends to mourn his death.
When "Lim" was a little boy cheerfully adorning the school rooms of our country, there and then in the very beginning of the career of which he was overtaken he possessed all the graces that tends to aid in developing a noble manhood. And when the dawn of manhood came he made the wise choice of adding to his calibre the spirit of a Christian boy and united with Lime Springs Methodist church, living a consecrated life till death. He was married to Miss Cuba Jones about four years ago, and during their wedded life God placed in their care two sweet little girls, one of which preceded her father to the great white throne just one month. Lim led a blameless life, had no enemies and died in the arms of his friends, and we are proud to say what David said:
"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." And to the bereaved we wish to say that God doeth all things well, and grieves not, for one day there will be a family reunion when there will be no more farewells.

Charlotte, N. C., Feb. 10.—J. G. Hood, at one time a leading dry goods merchant of Charlotte, was shot and killed here yesterday morning by W. S. Biggers, also a well known citizen.

The shooting was the most sensational ever occurring in Charlotte. The tragedy was enacted on the sidewalk in front of the Central hotel, the very heart of the city, and witnessed by several hundred people.

Four shots were fired by Biggers, three taking effect in the head, the fourth barely missing a negro hack driver. Biggers surrendered his gun to officers and was taken to the police station, where he is now, apparently in a state of violent insanity.

The shooting grew out of business troubles, dating back four or five years ago, when the two men were partners. Biggers claims that he lost all his investments with Hood, and that the latter got the funds.

Hood was a middle-aged man. He leaves a wife and two children. Biggers has a wife and family. He has only one arm. He was a dealer in blooded horses.

IN MEMORY
Thou art gone, our precious darling
Never more we'll see thy face.
Till we meet thee over the river
In that happy dwelling place.
On Friday morning February 11, the cold icy angel of death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. J.
W. Weldon and took from them their sweet little daughter, Ida Belle. She was about 9 years old and had been sick only seventeen days. All was done for her that willing hands could do, but God saw fit to remove her from our midst into a world of joy. It is very sad indeed to part with such a loved one but all should remember that the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. What is this life?
Only a perishable flower. She leaves many relatives and friends to mourn her sad departure. Weep not dear ones for she is not dead but sleeping. Dear weeping relatives and friends, we do not feel that we could speak any word that would ease your aching heart or fill the vacancy of this loved one for we know this place can never more on earth be filled, but we feel assured that this place is not vacant in heaven. Let us take warning and be ready to meet this loved one where she cannot be taken from us any more. Her remains were laid to rest at the McCord cemetery to await the call of the last day.
Two THAT LOVED HER.

Card of Thanks
We beg to thank our kind friends and neighbors for their aid and sympathy during the illness and death of our daughter, Mabel. May God bless you all.

TWELVE NEGROES ARRESTED.

them were acquitted and seven were in jail, in default of bail of $500 each, to await the term of court.

Pete's Babette.

By ISOLA L. FORRESTER.

There had always been Pete. At least so the people down at St. Michel said when a stranger would ask where he had come from. Even before the government had built the lighthouse on Presque Isle Pete's fishing hut had been there, and every night he had hung out his lantern on the end of a pole so that the boats rounding the point a mile or two below would see its flicker and steer clear of the long sand bar that ran out like an ant's nose from the northern corner of Presque Isle.

Everybody along the strait knew the quaint old figure, but no one knew of Babette until they saw her one morning shuffling along behind Pete, her red calico dress the one bright spot of color among the grays and browns of Presque Isle. The day before Pete had been seen rowing over to the Mackinac shore, but no one knew of his return except Mere M'rie, and she was so old and deaf that all she could do was cook Pete's fish and sit out in the sunshine all day smoking in the kitchen doorway.

When Landry Dubois, from Algonac Island, asked the question direct Pete smiled and shook his head, his dark eyes, deep set in the small brown face, watching Babette build houses with the red bark chips around the lighthouse steps.

"She has no one but me," he said, with a dubious shrug of his thin, stooped shoulders. "Babette, who art thou, petite?"

Babette stopped playing long enough to flash a merry glance at him under the shelter of her thick brown hair.

"Pete's Babette," she laughed.

And so, all through the isles of the strait, as far as St. Ignace and even down to Mackinac, she was known as Pete's Babette. Pete taught her all manner of wonderful things in fish lore and ship craft, and before long she knew all the boats that passed by Presque Isle, from the great iron kings and grain boats bound for Buffalo to the gay little yachts that fluttered like white butterflies here and there. But, best of all, she loved the schooners, the old monarchs of the lake, when they came sailing up the strait on a still summer's eve, like wondrous phantom ships, with the glory of the sunset behind, and she called them Babette's birds.

And the years passed by, ten of them, slow and sure and steady, one by one, as the wild geese fly to the southland, and each one left Pete browner and more wrinkled and smaller, while Babette grew up tall and slender and strong as a young pine tree, with hair and eyes brown as dry oak leaves. Then came the terrible winter of 1904, when boat after boat went out on the lakes and no more was heard from them until spring waves brought in the wreckage. It was cold at the little, low house back of the lighthouse on Presque Isle, colder than even Pete could remember, and every week it was harder for him to row down to St. Michel for provisions.

One night he came home half frozen and with a dreadful cough. Babette sent him to bed and said he should go no more. They must make what food they had last until warmer weather. But instead of sunshine and fair seas the clouds swept low and gray like gulls before a storm, and the waves came rolling in, with a deep, heavy swell that sent a dull, threatening roar, as they broke, up to the lighthouse. And here and there in the dark green waters could be seen something else, a clumsy, swaying mass that glinted blue white.

"The ice has come," Babette thought when she saw it from the lighthouse window one morning after she had trimmed the lamp, and there was a queer ache in her heart as she looked out down the strait and thought of how her birds would have to battle with it, but she did not tell Pete.

It was three days later when Mere M'rie showed her the empty meal bag. She smiled. There were still bacon and rice and dried fish. They were rich. At the end of the week there was no bacon, and they had saved the last of the rice for Pete, who lay on the old lounge near the stove coughing, coughing all the time.

The following day Pete was delirious. Babette stood in the old kitchen, looking from the flushed, wrinkled face on the pillow to where Mere M'rie knelt over by the stove praying. The provisions were gone. There was no medicine.

Babette took the fur jacket from its nail. Before she went out of the kitchen she leaned over the old half-breed woman's bent form. "To St. Michel," she said slowly, pointing eastward and then at the empty meal sack and four bags thrown in a corner. Mere M'rie understood and stopped her praying long enough to watch the strong, erect young figure pass down to the shore, the wind blowing the ends of her scarf backward over her shoulders like red wings.

Her hands worked quickly over the lines of the boat, and, taking advantage of a momentary lull, she pushed away from the small, tumbled down pier and struck out bravely for St. Michel. She had often been out with Pete when the waves were as high as now, and she loved the excitement of it all. The low, flat shore of Presque Isle vanished entirely behind the wall of water, but she could catch a glimpse of the dark old lighthouse and its round top above the highest wave, and the eight strengthened and nerved her for the five mile journey to St. Michel.

Suddenly, when scarcely half a mile out, the boat seemed to strike a new current. Babette caught her breath sharply as she felt the strong, redolent power sweep her from her course, and she bent over the oars with set, close lips and tense muscles, but it was useless. The deep, swelling rush of water carried her northward, straight on to the middle channel of the strait. The wind had come up again, and raged over the lake like a wild beast. Then, without warning, there rose before her the jagged, cruel line of the ice floe, and the next moment the waves had thrown the boat as if it had been a leaf full upon it. Instinctively Babette had risen at that last awful instant. As the boat crashed into the ice with a shock that made it leap and tremble she sprang forward and gained a footing on the ice floe, a slight, perilous one, to be sure, but one that meant safety, for the moment at least.

Already the little boat had disappeared in the whirlpool of dashing waters, and Babette's heart beat fast as she looked about her on her new craft. It was large. It seemed as large as Presque Isle itself, and at first it appeared stationary. But when she had reached its center she could feel the slow, steady motion as it swept on toward Lake Huron.

And now came the division of the channel, and Babette's heart almost stopped its frightened beating as she thought of what would happen if the floe drifted north of Algonac Island and out on the great, pitiless waters of the lake.

With hushed breath she waited. The floe was heaving so that she could hardly retain her place, but at last the pine crests of Algonac showed on her left, and she knew she would pass St. Michel. With fingers stiffened by the cold, she untied the red scarf from about her head and let the wind blow it like a danger signal above her as she caught a glimpse of the lighthouse on the west pier. So near it seemed she placed her hand to her mouth and shouted, but her voice sounded like a reedbird's pipe in the noise of the rushing waters.

She was opposite the town now. She could see the waves break on the pier, and yet there was no sign of help. With a fearlessness born of desperation she struggled to her feet and waved the scarf wildly, and suddenly a figure appeared on the lighthouse ladder. Again she waved and tried to call. The figure signaled back and ran along the pier toward town.

It was Landry Dubois. He burst into the warm back room at old Mme. Porteau's breathless and hatless.

"It is Pete's Babette!" he cried to the crowd of on-lookers and sailors who had gathered about the lighthouse. "She is on the ice, drifting north of the lake!"

In five minutes the new, red-sailed and the shore was crowded with the strongest boat in the place was manned, with Landry at the rudder, and stout arms pulled away to the rescue of Pete's Babette. And when they brought her back half frozen and half dead and gave her into Mme. Porteau's care she told her errand in the warm back room—told how Pete lay dying without food or medicine and how unless help was sent there would be no light shining from Presque Isle that night.

"The light shall shine," promised Landry, and the waves that had laughed at Babette's little boat bowed before the masterful stroke of ten pairs of St. Michel's strongest arms as they manned the boat that bore Babette and provisions and medicine back to Presque Isle.

"Thou hast saved his life, little one," said Landry when they stood in the kitchen where Mere M'rie still prayed. But Babette only smiled and nodded her head, and she went on to the lighthouse.

The winter twilight was falling swiftly, and the wind had gone down like one tired with its mad play. Far to the west she could see a boat struggling slowly up the strait, its lights gleaming now and then like jewels. She lit the lamp with fingers that trembled, and the broad path of light streamed out over the point. Babette's birds could fly in safety tonight, and below Landry Dubois held aloft a red scarf and told its story, even as it is told today around the islands of the strait—the story of Pete's Babette.

Chemical Aid to Medicine.

Chemistry may be of use to medicine in at least three quite different ways. One of these is concerned with finding out what things are made of. This kind of chemistry is called analytical chemistry. Another way in which chemistry can help medicine depends upon the ability of the modern chemist not only to find out what the things are made of, but also to discover how the parts are put together. This branch of chemistry is called structural chemistry because it has to do not only with the materials, but also with the way in which these materials are arranged. Yet another method of helpfulness comes from a still more recent development of chemistry, commonly called physical chemistry, which deals with the phenomena lying on the border line between physics and chemistry, especially that part of the border line concerning the relation of energy to material. The physical chemist must know not only what things are made of and how these elements are put together, but also what energy is concerned in putting them together and what energy is set free when they are decomposed.—Theodore Richards in Atlantic.

FRIEND OF THE FAMILY

"Well, sir," said the shoemaker shortly after the sun had quit blizzing, "I got a letter yesterday that does me a lot of good. You remember I told you the last time we was out fishing together that I used to have a shop of my own up in old Illinois an' made good money too. Well, sir, all the kids in that town knowed me, an' they wasn't a one of 'em that wouldn't have gone to the bad place for me if they'd been old enough to know what that really meant. But they wasn't—bless their little hearts!"

"An' there was two of 'em in particular, the nicest little kids you ever seen. It's a fact that there little girl'd come from school every day leavin' her little brother by the hand. An' they'd never be a time they'd be passin' the shop on their way to school or goin' home to dinner that they wouldn't stop an' knock on the shop window."

"An' often after school 'd be out there'd stop in an' see me. Why, I've had as high as ten or twelve of 'em at one time after school in my shop singin' the shoemaker song an' goin' through the motions just like their teacher 'd learn 'em to."

"Sometimes some of 'em would have to stop an' laugh—they thought it was such a good joke on the shoemaker. But there'd always be two or three of 'em would go on an' finish out, 'cause they knowed they'd never get the dime for candy if they didn't. An' there's where I used to have the joke on 'em. They never knowed how much I liked to hear 'em sing that song. I'd sooner hear it now than have a dollar."

"Well, that's just the way it was all the time with 'em kids. They all knowed me, an' they all knowed my dog. An' when they knowed my dog they knowed a mighty good dog."

"Well, sir, this little girl's daddy used to be station agent there at that town, an' it was known all along that part of the Big Four line that there wasn't a depot anywhere that was what you could call as model a depot as his. Course I knowed him, an' he knowed me, an' his wife she used to tell the little girl when they'd want me to come an' take dinner or supper with 'em. It wasn't very often I'd go, but I couldn't refuse when they'd send the little girl after me."

"Now, him keepin' his depot so model is what got him promoted. The Big Four sent him over to a bigger town in Indiana. Course I was glad to see him, but he didn't deserve it. But after they'd gone me an' my dog we used to shut up shop an' go fishin' an' huntin' a little oftener than before."

"Well, come along Christmas time an' what 'd I do but one day get a letter from this here little girl tellin' me her an' her little brother was goin' to have a Christmas tree an' couldn't I come over to Indiana an' see 'em Christmas."

"So I made all arrangements to go, an' you bet I laid out a dollar or two for presents. But course, like it had to be, one day I gets word her an' her little brother was took down sick—diphtheria, the dispatch said."

"So I makes up my mind I'd go anyway. There's no tellin', you know, what's liable to happen in a case like that. So I put $100 in my pocket—an' even at that I didn't have to put it there; I always carried at least a hundred in them days—an' I went over. An' I didn't get there none too soon neither. She died the afternoon of the evenin' I got there."

"Well, I didn't know then what to do. I wasn't what you could call a friend of the family, but I wished I could do somethin' for that poor little girl a-layin' there. An' before three days was out I got my chance. "You see, her dym' of diphtheria, they wouldn't let 'em ship the body back over the railroad. Her daddy bein' agent didn't help 'em none in that case, neither. He tried hard enough to get a permit, but it didn't do no good. He just couldn't get it."

"The mother was just about crazy to think they'd have to lay her away in Indiana instead of the old buryin' ground over in old Illinois alongside of 'em that had gone before. But you bet yer life they didn't have to, fer I went an' got a team an' a wagon, an' I says, 'I'll drive her through.'"

"It was 12 below zero when I started, a little before midnight. They took the mornin' train next day an' got there long ahead of me. Ninety-one miles in a spring wagon at 12 below ain't no picnic."

"I didn't get to see 'em after the funeral. I felt just a little bit wore out, an' I thought the best thing I could do was to go lay down awhile. An', leave me tell you, I got all the layin' down I wanted in the next year an' a half, an' it cost me everything I had but my tools an' shoemaker's kit. I've got that stored up there in old Illinois yet."

"I wrote to her folks one time, but I didn't get no reply. I thought maybe they thought I wasn't quite as good as they was, so I never tried writin' no more."

"This here letter I got the other day was from a friend of the family that knowed them an' knowed me. It said they hadn't never heard a line from me an' they often wondered what had become of me. It said that little girl's mother often wished she knowed where I was at, so she could write, because this letter went on to say, she said I was the best friend of the family they ever had."

"An' that's the kind of letter that makes a feller feel good."—St. Louis Republic.

VINOL CURES CHRONIC COUGHS, COLDS AND BRONCHITIS After Other Remedies Fail

"I have been troubled with a chronic cold and bronchitis for a long time and have tried many remedies without finding relief. Through the kind suggestion of a friend I tried Vinol, and after taking four bottles, am entirely cured." A. H. Wilde, 733-8th Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

S. McDonald, 147 W. Congress St., St. Paul, Minn., writes: "I contracted a severe cold last winter and thought I would never get rid of it. I tried Vinol as a last resort, and it has completely cured me."

Vinol combines two world-famed tonics, the healing, medicinal properties of cod liver oil and tonic iron, deliciously palatable and agreeable to the weakest stomach. For this reason, Vinol is unexcelled as a strength-builder for old people, delicate children, weak and run-down persons, after sickness and for chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis. Vinol is sold in Clanton by Upchurch Drug Co.

IN MEMORY

On the night of Feb. 11, 1909, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Farley and carried away the white spirit of their oldest daughter, little Mabel, being about 13 years old, just in the bloom of youth. Oh how heart rending 'tis to give her up, though the good Lord knows best. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord. We know we loved her and the Lord loved her more. She was only a precious jewel given to her good parents for awhile, and we feel that her sweet spirit rests with the Father who gave it and we know that 'tis almost more than the bereaved family can do to give her up. It seems that it is more than I can stand, she is on my mind day and night; though I know that I am doing wrong to grieve as I do for the dear one that is asleep in Jesus, for I feel like my time on earth is short, and 'twill be brighter over there than 'tis on this earth, for we poor mortals do have a rough road to travel here. But the Scripture says we are to be sown a mortal body and raised a spiritual body. So weep no more dear mother, for the promise is to and your children and to everyone that can believe, for He says if you only can believe, all things are possible. GEORGIA A. SHARBUTT.

TRUE WOMANLY BEAUTY.

No woman can be truly beautiful who has a yellow complexion caused by a torpid liver. To be beautiful a woman must have good health, and this can be accomplished by occasionally using St. Joseph's Liver Regulator (either liquid or powder, as you like best.) It keeps the bowels open, passing off the poisonous, effete matter, and in this way purifies the blood—and assists in clearing the complexion. All women should occasionally use St. Joseph's Liver Regulator, Liquid 50 cents a bottle; powder, 25 cents a box.

Duchess Versus Lord Chancellor.

The English house of lords has never been particularly kind to its fair visitors. Long ago, in the days when duchesses sold their kisses for votes, the house of lords forbade them to enter, and a battle royal ensued between the ladies and the peers. The lord chancellor had sworn that he would not let them in, and the Duchess of Queensberry had sworn that ladies should come in. "This being reported," we read in an old diary, "the peers resolved to starve them out. An order was made that the doors should not be opened till they had raised their siege."

These amazons now showed themselves qualified for the duty even of foot soldiers. They stood there till 5 in the afternoon without either sustenance or intermission, every now and then playing volleys of thumps, kicks and raps against the door with so much violence that the speakers in the house were scarcely heard. At last by strategy worthy of a general the ladies "all rushed in and placed themselves in the front row of the gallery," where they remained till an hour before midnight, applauding or hissing to their hearts' content.

Ruskin on Art Critics.

A. Stodart Walker tells of Ruskin throwing a large quarto at his head because he had dared to question the artistic excellence in the matter of proportion of Michelangelo's "Moies" in Rome. After the throwing was over he asked, "How often have you seen it?" "Oh, half a dozen times," Stodart Walker answered with confidence on his side as to the result of such a reminder. "Good heavens!" Ruskin cried. "No man should dare to give an opinion on any work of art unless he has seen it every day for six months," adding after a pause, "and even then he should hold his tongue if he has used his eyes as you seem to have used them."—Chambers Journal.

Worked Hard Too. A persistent lawyer who had been trying to establish a witness' suspicious connection with an offending railroad was at last elated by the witness' admission that he "had worked on the railroad."

"Ah!" said the attorney, with a satisfied smile. "You say you have worked on the P. T. and X.?"

"Yes."

"For how long a period?"

"Off and on for seven years, or since I've lived at Peacedale, on their line."

"Ah! You say you were in the employ of the P. T. and X. for seven years off and on?"

"No. I did not say that I was employed by the P. T. and X. I said that I had worked on the road off and on for that length of time."

"Do you wish to convey the impression that you have worked for the P. T. and X. for seven years without reward?" asked the attorney.

"Absolutely without reward," the witness answered calmly. "For seven years off and on I've tried to open the windows in the P. T. and X. cars, and never once have I succeeded."—Youth's Companion.

The More Wives the Less Work.

According to the Geographical Journal of London, the marital relations among the peoples of Nigeria vary somewhat according to their state of civilization: "Polygamy is the rule, the reason given being that it is impossible for one woman to do all the work of the house, look after the children, prepare and cook the food, fetch the daily supply of water (often an arduous job), cultivate the plantation and go to market. The African is an exceedingly hungry person. It is the custom to eat several times a day when at home, and the men spend most of their day sitting in the palver house or market place, while the women bring the food all day long. One wife could not possibly do this. Besides, the African lady encourages it, for she says, 'The more wives the less work.'"

Why They Stared.

A young woman stopped in one of the stores to have her coat altered slightly. As the operation wouldn't require more than an hour, the man said she could borrow another coat out of stock to wear while she went about her shopping until her own was ready.

She accepted the offer and went her way. In half an hour she came back looking frightened. "I'm going to stay right here until my own coat's ready," she declared. "Everybody seems to know this coat doesn't belong to me. Dear me, how they did stare! I'd rather sit right here for a week or go without any coat at all rather than be taken for a shoplifter."

"No wonder they stared," spoke up that man. "We forgot to take the tag off that coat you borrowed."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Spitting the Difference.

When jurymen in Stony Gulch disagree there is usually some member whose influence, backed by his recognized "handiness" with a gun, carries the day. "Some thought he'd ought to get $3,000 damage and some thought $4,000," said Bud Lewis, referring to a case, "but I persuaded 'em to compromise."

"Indeed?" said the stranger, with a wary eye on Mr. Lewis' gun, which he seemed to be fondling in rather a careless way. "What sort of compromise?" "I put it to 'em, 'Why not split the difference and call it $3500? And when I'd brought my reason to bear on 'em," said Bud, with a loving gaze at his weapon of defense, "they all come round to that compromise in no time."

A Boy's Essay on Ducks.

A schoolboy assigned to prepare an essay on ducks wrote: "The duck is a low, heavy set bird composed mostly of meat and feathers. He is a mighty poor singer, having a hoarse voice, caused by getting so many frogs in his neck. He likes the water and carries a toy balloon in his stomach to keep from sinking. The duck has only two legs, and they are set so far back on his running gear by nature that they came pretty near missing his body. Some ducks when they get big have curls on their tails and are called drakes. Drakes don't have to set or hatch, but just loaf, go swimming and eat. If I was to be a duck, I'd rather be a drake."—National Food Magazine.

A Mild Laxative For Baby's Bowels

Doctor Points Out Dangers of Pills and Cathartics

"Babies, purgatives, and violent cathartics are dangerous when given to children or delicate women," says a well known doctor. "Neither should they be given medicines containing narcotics to stomach or bowel trouble."

It would be well for mothers to keep this warning and keep on hand a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for baby and herself and for any member of the family that has need of a laxative or a stomach remedy. It is safe and pleasant to take and has cured old people of chronic constipation and dyspepsia of many years' standing, and yet is harmless for a baby as many a happy mother can testify. It brings natural daily motion, sweetens the stomach, adds digestion and stimulates the torpid liver to proper action. The children like it. Lab. Weather's, the popular hotel man in Indianapolis, says: "The children like it, we all use it and would not be without it in the house." Mrs. Matthe Crona, Tippecanoe, Tenn., cured her 3 month old baby of indigestion with it. Mrs. Almon Willis, Jamaica, Vt., says it saved her baby's life. Mrs. A. Cunningham, Fresno, Calif., says she can't live without it. It cured her little son of rheumatism and stomach trouble.

Mrs. Flora Hebrer, Bow Creek, Kan., says: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin cured my little girl of constipation. I cannot recommend your splendid remedy too highly for children."

Mrs. Mary E. Young, Burlington, Ia., writes: "I cheerfully recommend it to mothers as the best laxative for children." Mrs. Alice Miller, Canal Dover, Pa., has used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin with splendid results as a laxative for children.

All druggists sell it at 50c and 10c per bottle. Pepsin Syrup Co., 201 Caldwell Bldg., Montreal, Ill. Will send a free sample to any one who has never used it and will give it a fair trial.

Scorched Table Linen.

When the three men sat down the leader of the trio began a minute inspection of the tablecloth. Presently he put his finger on several little scorched spots.

"See this?" he said to the waiter.

"Yes, sir."

"Well," said the man, "just bear in mind, won't you, that these holes were here when we came in? And when we get through don't tack a dollar on to our bill to pay for burned table linen."

"That's all right," said the waiter. "I'll look out for that."

The order having been given, the cautious diner elucidated the remarks still further. "That is a trick those fellows have," he said. "Somebody burns the tablecloth with sparks from a cigar and gets away before the damage is discovered, and the next corner, if he happens to be a smoker, is blamed for his predecessor's sins and is charged with the cost of the linen. I have had to pay well for other people's carelessness, so nowadays I make it a point to examine tablecloths at the beginning of a meal."—New York Press.

The Hired Cowboy.

I recall one picture by a celebrated artist of the east who does western things. It depicts a "Cowboy at Rest." He is lying on his stomach in the sun, his chin in his hands. His horse stands nearby, with the reins thrown over the horn of the saddle. Now, a cowboy in the daytime, well filled with beans and canned tomatoes, would not lie thus, and, above all, he would not leave his horse standing thus. He would pull the reins down over the horse's head and let them hang, otherwise his cowhorse would depart. I recall yet another picture of a faithful cowpuncher who with his trusty rifle defends himself from behind his dead horse, which he uses as a fortress. The dead horse is about four feet and a half through sideways—excellent for a fortress, but a trifle wide for a thin flanked cowhorse. It would be useless to point out any detail like this to any earnest artist of today. Worse than useless would it be to suggest that a cowpuncher is the laziest created thing, for in art he must do perpetual stunts of "action."—Cottler's Weekly.

Unique Cannon.

It is a curious fact that when the island of Malta was in possession of the Templars those doughty knights defended their forts by means of cannon cut into the solid rock. Each of these strange engines of war was capable of containing an entire barrel of gunpowder and, it is said, could throw 10,000 pounds of projectiles. Inasmuch, however, as these natural cannons could not be aimed, fifty were cut out of the rock guarding the various channels of approach, and the vessels of that time were therefore unable to come within their own range before being annihilated by the big weapons of defense. Although the fame of these cannons was spread far and wide, they were not duplicated elsewhere, and to this day they remain the only rock cannon of which there exists any record.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The "Cat House."

A curious little building stands at the end of a private walk on the shores of the river Orwell in Suffolk, England. It is known as the "cat house," for the reason that in the "good old times" a white cat used to be exhibited at a window visible from the river as a signal to smugglers, who flourished in the locality. When the animal was shown the "free traders," as the contrabandists were euphemistically called, knew that the coast was clear and promptly sailed up and landed their cargo, secure from the attentions of the "preventive." Near the "cat house" is Downham reach, which was the scene of some of Margaret Catchpole's most exciting adventures.—Wide World Magazine.

A certain young man who lives in the east end of town and sports an apartment "blissed" in connection with a ten dollar suit of clothes was in a hotel clothing store several days ago when one of the clerks, a practical joker, snatched the store out of the owner's life.

The owner did not miss the "blissed" until he returned home, and then, caused a frantic search for the missing store, which included advertising in the newspapers and reporting the matter to the police.

Yesterday afternoon the joker returned the pin to its owner.

"God, I am glad it was you who had it," gasped the delighted youth. "Some dishonest person would have kept it."

"So would I," returned the clerk. "But a jeweler to whom I took it said it wasn't worth more than 20 cents."—St. Joseph Gazette.

Dissolve Glass in Water.

At a sufficiently high temperature every kind of glass must eventually show complete solubility in water. Under pressure glass dissolves in water heated 410 degrees F. Sea water more than about 600 feet beneath the surface will remain liquid at that temperature, and if it penetrates the earth's crust where the temperature is equally high it will, apart from the pressure, liquefy the silicates or glassy rocks. An eminent authority has concluded that at a depth of about five miles silicates in contact with water are virtually fluid and that the level of aqueous fusion in the earth is five times nearer the surface than is that of igneous fusion.

Snake That Never Happened.

A grotesque and foolish view of the west lands many who are not acquainted with that part of the country to perpetrate amazing blunders regarding the possibilities of the typical western weapons, the rifle and the six shooter. To shoot an animal's eye out at a hundred paces is a common feat in wild west literature. Sometimes it is done with a six shooter—in type, not anywhere else. Of course, no man can see the eye of an animal that far. I have had a good riderman tell me he could cut off a robin's head at a hundred steps. The truth is that he could not see the head clearly that far. You read that the desperado Slade could hit a man in "any bottom of his coat" that he chose, but you may be sure that neither Slade nor any one else could do anything of the kind. Even trick and fancy shooting at its best could ever cover feats ascribed as matters of course to the average frontiersman who never saw the frontier.—Quoting Magazine.

Sliding the Officers.

Here is an amusing description of one of Balm's periods of impetuosity. Merry, the post, a great friend of Balm's, was an inveterate gambler and rarely left the card table before daybreak. His way lay past the Cafe de Paris, and for four consecutive mornings he had met Balm's strolling leisurely up and down dressed in a pantalon a pieds (trousers not terminating below the ankle, but with feet in them like stockings) and frock coat with velvet facings. The second morning Merry felt surprised at the coincidence; the third he was puzzled; the fourth he could hold out no longer and asked Balm the reason of these nocturnal perambulations roundabout the same spot.

Balm put his hand in his pocket and produced an almanac showing that the sun did not rise before 3:50. "I am being tracked by the officers of the tribunal de commerce and obliged to hide myself during the day, but at this hour I am free and can take a walk, for as long as the sun is not up they cannot arrest me."

Milk on a Stick.

In winter time milk goes to the buyer in a chunk instead of a quart, says a Glasgow paper. The people in Siberia buy their milk frozen, and for convenience it is allowed to freeze about a stick, which comes as a handle to carry it by. The milkman leaves one chunk or two chunks, as the case may be, at the houses of his customers. The children in Irkutsk, instead of crying for a drink of milk, cry for a bite of milk. The people in winter time do not say, "Be careful not to spill the milk," but "Be careful not to break the milk." Broken milk is better than spilled milk, though, because there is an opportunity to save the pieces. A quart of frozen milk on a stick is a very formidable weapon in the hand of an angry man or boy, as it is possible to knock a person down with it. Irkutsk people hang their milk on hooks instead of putting it in pans, though, of course, when warm spring weather comes on they have to use the pans or pails as the milk begins to melt and drop down the hooks.

The Illusion of Night.

I sometimes fancy that every great city must have been built by night. At least it is only at night that every part of a great city is great. All architecture is great architecture after sunset. Perhaps architecture is really a nocturnal art, like the art of fireworks. At least I think many people of those nobler trades that work by night (journalists, policemen, burglars, coffee stall keepers and such mistaken enthusiasts as refuse to go home till morning) must often have stood admiring some black bulk of building with a crown of battlements or a crest of spires and then burst into tears at daybreak to discover that it was only a haberdashery's shop with huge gold letters across the face of it.—G. A. Chesterton in London News.

Tax on Hats.

Not only have hats at various times been subject to taxation, but have even been made the subject of special laws. Thus in Henry VII's reign none was allowed to sell hats at a larger price than 20 pence or caps for more than 2s. 6d. Some compensation, however, for this interference with free trade could be found in the fact that in 1571 on Sundays and holidays every one above seven years of age was required to wear a cap of wool of English make under penalty of 3 farthings fine for every day's neglect.—London Chronicle.

Needed Mourning.

The Lady—I haven't much in the house to give you, my poor man, but would you like a piece of my pie? The Hobo—No, lady. But have you got a old black coat? The Lady—Why do you want a black coat? The Hobo—De feller yer gave a piece of pie to de odder day was a pal o' mine.—Cleveland Leader.

A Convenience.

Curate—And so, Mrs. Howard, you come to church every Sunday? Mrs. Howard—Yes, Mr. Priestly. We're such strangers in town yet—that we have no other engagements.—Brooklyn Life.

The Poor Woman.

"He climbed almost to the top of the ladder—and then fell off."

"What was the trouble?"

"There was a woman at the bottom of it."—Litt.

Liberty cannot be established without morality nor morality without faith.—Greney.

You're a pretty sort o' saint, Valentine!

Saint, indeed! You bungling dunces, Valentine!

Anything to Oblige Him.

"Herbert," said the stern father, "I suppose you are going to marry that doll-faced, wasp-waisted, pink-cheeked, simpering, giggling, gum-chewing, poverty-stricken little Miss Wredtill."
"No, father," answered the dutiful son, "if you prefer it I will marry that long, lean, freckle-faced, sharp-chinned, goggle-eyed, solemn, austere, ravenous, vinegary, suspicious, blue-nosed, lantern-jawed, prim, rich old Miss Alkoyne."
"You shan't!" roared the indignant old gentleman. "You're not half good enough for her."
Thus a soft answer may turn away a hard fate. —Chicago Tribune.

Cold Weather Fable.

Once a smart hare met a wise fox. "B-r-r-r," chattered the hare. "What's the trouble, my friend?" queried the fox craftily. "Why, this weather is terrible. I am almost frozen." The wise fox winked up at the crow in the tree. "In that case, my friend," he chuckled, "I think you will find it warmer inside than it is outside." Without further ceremony he swallowed the hare. Moral:—It is not always a safe policy to complain about the weather. —Chicago News.

Professional Pride.

"I should regret very much to hear that anybody has ever offered money for political influence." "Yes," answered Mr. Graftwell, "your hearing of it would indicate very crude work on somebody's part." —Washington Star.

Cowardice or Discretion?

"Tell me what you said to your father-in-law when you asked him for his daughter." "Why, I married the daughter of a widow." —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

An Engaging Talker.

Maude—Mr. Hardcash called on me last evening. He's the most engaging talker I ever listened to. Clara—Indeed! What did he say? Maude—He asked me to marry him. —Minneapolis Journal.

A Good Reason.

"Well, I married after all, and she declared she wouldn't marry the best man living." "Of course she couldn't. The bride never does marry the best man." —Baltimore American.

Hunting the Hippopotamus.

A dead hippopotamus invariably sinks to the bottom of the river if shot while swimming, and it is only after an interval which varies between two and eight hours that the body rises and floats on the surface. For this reason, says the Wide World Magazine, if you kill a hippopotamus in a river the current of which is at all rapid, you must, in nine cases out of ten, give up all hope of ever recovering your quarry. The carcass may be carried a great distance under the water, reappearing at the surface miles away, where it furnishes a providential feast to the native inhabitants on the banks, who call down ironical blessings upon the infallible rifle of the white man.

The Ox's Affections.

Oxen usually die in pairs. One yoke-fellow seldom survives the other. Working and resting side by side through many long years, those patient animals develop so strong, so deep and abiding an affection for one another that separation means death. When a pair of oxen are yoked together in youth they fight. Their mutual hatred is as great as would be that of two men yoked together. But with the years' passage they cease to kick and butt. They become friends. And this friendship ripens at last into an overwhelming affection, which, it may be, consoles the mild, laborious creatures for the measure for the lifelong cruelties heaped on them by man. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

Handed For Loafing.

Old time Englishmen hated idleness. An act passed in 1531 decreed that any person "being whole and mighty in body and able to labor" found begging might be arrested, and if unable to give a satisfactory account of himself he was brought to the nearest market town, tied to the end of a cart, stripped of his clothes and beaten with whips through the town, bleeding and ashamed, after which degradation he was sent to his native place, on his oath to "put himself to labor like a true man ought to do." If the sturdy vagabond were caught a third time in idleness he was to suffer death "as an enemy to the commonwealth."

Hob and Nob.

The phrase "hob and nob" and the custom it indicates originated in Elizabethan days thus: When great chimneyneys were in fashion there was at each corner of the hearth or grate a small elevated projection called the hob and behind it a seat. In winter time the beer was placed on the hob to warm, and the cold beer was set on a small table, said to have been called the nob, so that the question "Will you hob or nob?" seems only to have meant, "Will you have warm or cold beer?"—I. e., beer from the hob or beer from the nob. —London Scraps.

Censoring the Mail.

"It is strange there is no mail for me," remarked Mrs. Instyle. "Yes, dear, quite strange," acquiesced Mr. Instyle.

Then as she stepped into the other room he checked three fashion magazines, four patterns, a skirt catalogue, a cloak catalogue, a jewelry catalogue and a letter from the Royal Lady Tailors into the fire.

"Two hundred dollars saved!" he chuckled and became so well pleased with himself that he set aside one-tenth the amount for cigars.—Judge.

The Jap's Santa Claus.

The patron saint of Japanese children is named Kotte. He is always pictured with a big sack, which is said to contain presents for the good children. When Kotte wishes to cross a river he uses this sack as a boat. He is believed to have eyes in the back of his head to watch the little ones and has various other qualities which remind us of our Santa Claus. —London Chronicle.

Editor's Department.
The English chemist Dalton was a schoolteacher. He worked without a laboratory and with crude apparatus, mostly made by himself from simple materials. Here is an example described in his own words:
"Took an ale glass of a conical shape, two and a half inches in diameter and three inches deep; filled it with water that had been standing in the room and consequently of the temperature of the air; put the bulb of the thermometer to the bottom of the glass, the scale being out of the water. Then, having marked the temperature, I put the red-hot tip of the poker half an inch deep in the water, holding it there steadily for half a minute, and as soon as it was withdrawn I dipped the bulb of a sensible thermometer into the water, when it rose in a few seconds to 180 degrees."
He then determined the temperature of the water at the bottom after five minutes, after twenty minutes and after an hour and found that it rose gradually from 47 to 52 degrees. This simple experiment proved that water has the power to conduct heat, which had been denied by no less an authority than Rumford.—Youth's Companion.

The Mistake He Made.

He sauntered into the central police station and approached the desk sergeant. There was a careworn look on his face. He stood there a moment as if in reverie. Finally he burst out: "I want to give myself up."
"What have you done that you should seek a felon's cell?" the sergeant asked.

"I have long been a fugitive from justice. The welfare of society demands that I should be punished."
"But what is it? What heinous offense have you committed?"
"I am a bigamist—yes, a polygamist—and I don't dare think what worse. No longer must I keep it from the world. Lock me up. I am ready to do penance."

"But will you not explain?"
"Yes, if you insist. I thought I married only the daughter, but I have found, to my sorrow, that the whole family was included."—Kansas City Independent.

An Eccentric Russian Doctor.

The famous Russian, the late Dr. Zaharin, was noted for his eccentric methods. When summoned to attend Czar Alexander III, in his last illness, Dr. Zaharin required the same preparation for his visit to the palace, as to any of his patients' houses. That is to say, all dogs had to be kept out of the way, all clocks stopped and every door thrown wide open. He left his furs in the hall, his overcoat in the study, his gauchos in the third, and, continuing, arrived at the bedside in ordinary indoor costume. He sat down after walking every few yards and every eight steps in going upstairs. From the patient's relatives and every one else in the house he required absolute silence until he spoke to them, when his questions had to be answered by "Yes" or "No" and nothing more.

A Necessity.

"Twenty dollars for trimming your hat!" exclaimed Mr. Madison. "But we agreed to spend nothing except for things that were positively needed."
"Well, John, this is. You see, my best friend has just had hers trimmed, and I have promised to go with her to the concert on Friday."

"Oh, all right. But I can't give you more than fifteen this morning, because I broke my meerschaum and must have it mended."
"Can't you smoke your old briarwood?"

"Certainly, dear. And you can wear your old hat."
"John, let's begin to economize next month after we get things all straightened out."
"All right." —New York Herald.

Sardou's Quip.

"Victorien Sardou hated shams," said a New York theatrical manager. "If you tried to impose on him he would call you down."

"At the Ambigu during a rehearsal he said he doubted an actor's statement that he had given forty hours of study to his lines."

"You doubt me?" said the actor hotly. "I assure you, M. Sardou, I have never lied but twice in my life."
"Sardou smiled dryly."
"Then this makes three, eh?" said he.

He Was Slow.

He uttered a joyous cry. "And I am really and truly the first man you ever kissed?"
"Yes, Clarence," the beautiful girl rejoined, her red lip curling slightly. "The others all took the initiative." —Kansas City Independent.

Know the Trouble.

"You are wasting your time, old man," said Fred to George. "You are courting the wrong girl."

Make Less Acres Pay You More Money

You must consider that, in the great variety of farm soils, one may contain almost enough nitrogen for the cotton crops—another will need more potash than phosphoric acid, another requires a greater percentage of phosphoric acid, also there's the individual plant food of the crops to consider. It is obvious that a general fertilizer will not do for all crops. If you want record yields you must get the fertilizer formula that contains the plant food your land requires are made especially for growing Cotton and Corn, and the different formulas are prepared only after most rigid soil tests, which absolutely insure every crop getting the plant food it requires in the exact proportions needed.

The largest yields of Cotton and Corn in this state have been due entirely to the use of Bigbee's high grade fertilizers and a little judgment in cultivation. Bigbee's are standard fertilizers, and judicious use of them will in a few seasons reduce work by increasing both quantity and quality of crops with a reduced acreage.

The beauties and wonders of nature as displayed in Vancouver have formed the theme of many a traveler's rhapsody, but it appears that there are people who do not appreciate them. One such woman, born and bred in Vancouver, recently visited in New York.

"It must be wonderful to have lived and grown up in such a place," said a New Yorker who had traveled round the world.

"Why, I don't know," said the native of Vancouver without enthusiasm. "We've just got the mountains and the sea; that's all."

Famous Rubies.

The largest ruby known is one mentioned by Chardin as having been engraved with the name of Sheikh Sephy. Another noble ruby is in possession of the shah of Persia. Its weight is put at 175 carats. A ruby possessed by Gustavus Adolphus and presented to the czarina at the time of his journey to St. Petersburg was the size of a small hen's egg.

Editor and Contributor.

Clearly the editor had been in a bad humor, for in returning the regular contributor's last consignment of jokes he had written at the bottom of the courteously worded rejection slip:

"These are older than the English language. They antedate the mother-in-law and summer girl and with even less excuse for being."

The regular contributor wrote in reply: "Sorry to have afflicted you with such chestnuts, but at least, when they got back to me they were roasted chestnuts." —New York Times.

Might Have Been Said Differently.

A correspondent of the Manchester Guardian supplies a rather amusing experience of his own at a "literary guild meeting" where he was giving an address on Stevenson. "We had a prayer," he says, "then we had a hymn, after which the chairman announced that the So-and-so quartet would render an item. But the members of the quartet were not complete, so the chairman called on me to speak on Stevenson. 'After Mr. —'s address," he added, "we'll have the quartet to brighten things up a bit."

More and more in late years, with improvements in business system, methods and facilities the custom has grown of re-mitting checks by mail in payment of bills of all kinds, as well for business, personal and family expense items in the residence town as for purchases of merchandise from distant points.

This method of payment has the distinct advantage of preserving a record of fact and date and amount on the check stub, and of an additional evidence in the return check with the endorsement of the payee.

Besides these advantages to the customer there is an obvious saving of time to the payee and promotion of his convenience in entering up the proper credit.

BIG FLEET IS HOME AGAIN.

BATTLESHIPS ANCHOR TODAY IN HAMPTON ROADS. WELCOMED BY THE PRESIDENT. HE REVIEWS HOMECOMING VESSELS ON THE MAYFLOW.

Port Monroe, Va., Feb. 22.—Our fleet is home again. Hiding safely at anchor in the waters of Hampton Roads after a welcome such as never before warmed the hearts of returning sailors are the sixteen "bully" vessels that have sailed around the world.

When the Mayflower, bearing President Roosevelt and his invited guests, Secretary Newberry and others, sailed down the harbor today the guns of Port Monroe told the thousands of visitors to these shores that the welcome to the fleet would begin soon.

When the Mayflower reached the position, selected for her the party aboard prepared to await the coming of Admiral Sperry and his ships. Word was sent to the admiral that this commander in chief was waiting for him, and the Connecticut hoisted the signal for the fleet to follow the flagship. Steaming at a fair rate, the Connecticut moved past the Mayflower, her guns booming out the presidential salute. The Mayflower responded, and the great naval review was on.

From that time until the last of the twenty-five returning warships had sailed past the Mayflower and paid its respects to the president in noise and smoke there was a continual roar of artillery.

While the fourteen vessels of Sperry's fleet that have made the circuit of the world, covering more than 42,000 miles since they left here in December, 1907, received the greatest amount of applause, the two battleships which joined the fleet on the Pacific coast and the vessels of Admiral Arnold's convoying squadron received their due share of attention. Probably the greatest amount of applause greeted the appearance of the Connecticut, which was the flagship of the fleet throughout the cruise, and the Nebraska, which made its first appearance on the Atlantic seaboard.

When the last ship had passed the Mayflower the presidential yacht weighed anchor and turned to take up her position between the Connecticut and the Louisiana. Hardly had she cast anchor again when boats were cleared from the sides of the vessels of the fleet and Admiral Sperry and the commanders and executive officers of the ships were rowed to the Mayflower to pay their respects to the president. After these official calls were paid and the naval men had returned to their own vessels the president visited in turn the flagship of each division and met and greeted the assembled officers and the representative enlisted men sent to pay the respects of the jacks to him.

Paying Honor to Father George.
Although the celebration of the centennial of the birth of Lincoln has overshadowed this year the birthday of George Washington, the usual honors are being paid today to the memory of the Father of His Country.

President Taft delivered an address today at the University of Pennsylvania, Governor Fort of New Jersey spoke at the annual celebration of the Union League club of Chicago, and Governor Hughes of New York was the principal speaker at the winter convocation of George Washington university in the national capital.

Robin Cooper Goes on Stand.
Nashville, Feb. 22.—Defense in trial of Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, Robin J. Cooper and John D. Sharp began Saturday by putting Robin J. Cooper on stand. He is a slender, boyish, clear-cut looking youth; age 27; his profession a lawyer.

He testified that Senator Carmack began shooting as soon as he saw them, firing two shots in quick succession, then he returned the fire, shooting three times.

New British Dreadnought.
Barrow, England, Feb. 22.—The Vanguard, the latest addition to King Edward's battleship fleet, was launched here today.

300 CREMATED IN THEATER.

PLAYHOUSE IN MEXICO FIRED BY FILM IN MOVING PICTURE SHOW.

Mexico City, Feb. 16.—Between 250 and 300 people were burned to death and many more were injured in a fire which destroyed the Flores theater in the city of Acapulco Sunday night.

The news of the disaster only reached this capital yesterday afternoon, telegraphic communication with Acapulco having been destroyed owing to the fact that the telegraph office adjoining the theater was burned and all the wires put out of commission.

The floor of the theater was a wooden affair, and over 1,000 people crowded into it to witness a special performance given in honor of Governor Damian Flores, of the state of Guerrero, who was visiting the port at the time.

One of the numbers of the program consisted of a series of moving pictures. While the operator was exhibiting these a film caught fire and a blaze was quickly communicated to some bunting which had been used for decorative purposes. In an incredibly short time the flames spread to all parts of the structure. There were but three narrow exits and the panic-stricken audience rushed to these, many falling and being crushed to death, their bodies choking the way to escape to others.

Trial Carmack's Slayers Begins Today.
Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 16.—On the eve of the trial of Duncan B. Cooper, Robin J. Cooper and John D. Sharp, for the slaying of former Senator E. W. Carmack, the factions are figuratively resting on their arms. Most of the witnesses for the state, who are from a distance, are in the city. The others are on the way.

Mrs. E. W. Carmack, wife of the slain editor, arrived tonight, and will sit behind the attorneys for the state. Sam C. Carmack, the dead man's brother, and S. S. Carmack, a cousin, are now here. The state proposes to establish, first, the death of Senator Carmack by the eye-witnesses.

The state's early witnesses will be Mrs. Eastman, with whom the senator was talking when shot; former State Treasurer Ed Craig who carried Colonel Cooper's threats to Senator Carmack; Carey Folk, brother of the state treasurer, who saw the defendants standing near the scene of the tragedy a few moments before it happened.

Knox Can Now Enter Cabinet.
Washington, Feb. 16.—After the Gaines bill to reduce the salary of the secretary of state to $5,000 a year had failed of passage once for want of a two-thirds vote, a special rule was brought in by the rules committee of the house of representatives yesterday afternoon, and the measure was passed by a majority vote.

This means that Mr. Knox will be the next secretary of state, as desired by Mr. Taft. It also means that the premier of the cabinet will receive a smaller salary than any other cabinet officer, and a smaller salary than his chief assistant, who will be known as the "under secretary."

Baseball Row Comes to Surface.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—The meeting of the national baseball commission which began in this city today is expected to prove one of the most sensational episodes in the history of the game. The announced purpose of the meeting is the giving out of the playing schedules and the consideration of other matters of interest to the fans, but the scrap between Garry Hermann and Harry Pulliam on the one hand and Charlie Murphy on the other will claim almost all of the public attention.

Meet to Talk on Tariff.

Negroes Not to Hold Office in South.
Washington, Feb. 15.—The present draft of Mr. Taft's inaugural speech contains a positive statement that he will not, as president, appoint negroes to federal offices in the south.

The speech was shown to a number of the next president's friends on his recent visit to Washington, and from them it is learned that in his inaugural address he will come out even more strongly than he has yet in outlining his policy with reference to the negro adherents of the republican party.

Negoes may be given some good offices under the next administration, but they will not be placed in positions where they will cause friction or be assigned to offices where the local sentiment is against their appointment.

COOPERS IN COURT.

FIRST DAY'S TRIAL OF COOPERS AND SHARP FOR KILLING CARMACK.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 15.—Marked by bitter quarrels between attorneys and by new and startling testimony, the second day of the Cooper-Sharp trial for the murder of former Senator Carmack closed.

There were three star witnesses and all of them women. Miss Mary Skelington told when, within 200 feet of the scene of the shooting, she met John Sharp. Just as she greeted him, she heard three shots, and asked Sharp what it meant. Without turning around to learn, she says Sharp replied:

"That's Dunc Cooper shooting Senator Carmack."

Miss Lee told how, on the morning of November 9, the day of the tragedy, when she arrived at the office, she found Colonel Cooper already there in conference with his son. She heard Colonel Cooper apply to him (Carmack) epithets so vile that she cried when ordered to repeat them. The court permitted her to write them, and when they were read, she covered her face with her hands.

Miss Donie Braxter, a maid in the service of Mrs. Lucius Burch, a daughter of Colonel Cooper with whom he made his home, heard him tell Mrs. Burch something that greatly excited the young wife. She heard Mrs. Burch say:

"He will kill you, papa," and the father's reply: "He is as liable to be killed as I am."

This was confirmed by the rushing of several persons to get water. Mrs. Tucker, who was in the room not more than twenty minutes, was followed by her mother and her son.

PEOPLE OF THE HOUSEWIFE.

The President's Brother-in-Law.

Douglas Robinson of New York recently made an affidavit on oath against the New York Times and Joseph Pulitzer, charging libel, in a brother-in-law of President Roosevelt. The charges were at the invitation of District Attorney Jerome. The alleged libel consisted in connecting the name of Mr. Robinson with participation in the purchase of the sale of the Panama canal $40,000,000.

Mr. Robinson, it is understood, the step as a citizen of New York.

Whether Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, Robin J. Cooper and John D. Sharp killed former Senator E. W. Carmack in self-defense or as a result of a conspiracy, is the great issue in the case. Mrs. E. W. Carmack, the slain senator's widow, was half-carried, half-assisted into the room. She was gowned in deepest mourning.

Her knees gave way as she neared her seat and she was leaning as she was placed in her chair. Her little son, Ned, Jr., aged 10, stood by his mother.

Surprise number two came when the state called Mrs. Carmack as its first witness. She was almost carried to the witness stand by her kinsman, Frank Lander, who succeeded her husband as editor of The Tennessean. Her little boy accompanied her, and caressed her cheek as she sat sobbing and moaning. A few questions were asked her, but she became hysterical and was excused.

Next came the testimony of Mrs. Eastman, the star witness for the state and one of—if not the only—eye-witness of the slaying. Mrs. Eastman is nearly sixty years old. Her hair is snow-white.

When called upon to do so, she seized the revolver said to have been found near the dead editor's body, and re-enacted the tragedy. Every action, every gesture, every tone of voice, from entreaty to bitter arraignment, from denunciation to appeal, was a duplication of what occurred upon that November afternoon, until, when she had finished, her breathless, spell-bound audience seemed to feel that it had witnessed the tragedy, and at least one spectator broke into applause.

Hugh Morton, the next witness, told of discussing the Carmack-Taylor campaign for senator three years ago, during which he said he had heard John Sharp say: "Since Carmack came into politics here we have had nothing but trouble."

For several years the Alabama Educational Association has been growing very rapidly, until last year its membership passed the eleven hundred mark. This year, with the meeting at Birmingham, the center of the most populous district of the State, with a splendid program, with holidays for the occasion granted by practically every school in the State, with an intelligent and wide-awake teaching force all over the commonwealth, with fares for the occasion practically cut in two, there should be an enrollment of two thousand teachers.

It is reported that the committee is looking with more than usual favor upon the Coosa river improvements. This is due to the untiring work of Representatives Burnett, Heflin and Craig of Alabama and Representative Lee of Georgia. These four gentlemen pooled issues and went in to get something done looking to the development of the Coosa upon the idea that the water power of the river, if properly handled, can be made to pay for the improvements for the navigation which has been so long and earnestly sought by friends of this river. In like manner Mr. Burnett and Mr. Lee worked for the Etowah river and Messrs. Heflin and Craig for the Tallapoosa both of them introducing resolutions on the same day, asking for $15,000 for this river, and the fact that a survey of all three of these rivers will be made looking to the development of power and storage sites, as well as navigation, looks like good news to the districts in which these representatives live.

The thirteenth annual meeting of the Alabama Live Stock Association will be held at Montgomery, February 26th and 27th, 1919.

When you spend a dollar for home-made goods you give the merchant a profit; you help pay his clerical help; you pass on a dividend to the landlord; you aid in the support of the lighting and heating corporations and their army of local laborers; you give a profit to the manufacturer, and you provide him the means to broaden his plant, to employ thousands of other laborers, shipping clerks, bookkeepers; you increase tax values, which, in turn, lowers your own tax rate; you add to the population of the city, additions of the most substantial nature; you create additional avenues of employment, better paid employment for yourself and your children and the man in the next ward and his children.

These men and those to whom they give employment are all your fellow citizens. Their prosperity and their development mean your prosperity and development—the development and the prosperity of the community.

Are you helping on that work by calling for the home label?—Atlanta Constitution.

The island of Oahu, on which Honolulu is situated, has two railroads, one of which is 71 miles in length. An idea of its importance may be gained from the fact that for the year ending June 30, 1908, passengers to the number of 446,318 and freight amounting to 359,445 tons were handled.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of Scott's Emulsion. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

WILLIAMSON CORN METHOD.

PREPARATION OF LAND.

Do not use any fertilizer before planting; but apply fertilizer later as directed. Do not plough land when it is wet; this rule should be observed at all times, and not only in the preparation of the land, but in the planting and cultivation of the crop.

Break land as it may require during the winter. It should be broken deep, but not more than one-fourth deeper than land has been broken before. Stiff land requires more breaking and subsoiling than light, sandy soils.

Lay off land in rows six feet apart, and bed in these furrows with turn plow leaving a balk (unbroken land) of five inches between the beds, until ready to plant.

RULES FOR CORN CONTEST ARE MADE UP.

W. H. Seymour, who has taken a lively interest in bringing the attention of the people of this state to the Williamson method of corn growing, has prepared the following rules to be followed by contestants for the prize of $100, $50 and $25 offered through him to the farmers and boys respectively, of the State, growing the largest yield on an acre of uplands after the method. A record shall be kept showing the following:

1. Date and method of preparation of land.

2. Date and method of planting.

3. Date and method of each cultivation.

4. Date and method of applying fertilizer and the kind and amount of fertilizer used.

5. Date and method of applying nitrate of soda, and amount applied.

6. Date and method of sowing peas, and laying by crop.

In addition to the above record, should show what her condition is for time of planting to harvesting.

All contestants should follow the method in detail as nearly as possible, and especially in the following particulars:

1. No fertilizer must be used before planting, but applied later as directed.

2. Corn must be stunted as directed.

3. A complete fertilizer must be applied after stunting.

4. Nitrate of soda must be applied at last plowing and peas planted.

Contestants planting more than one acre after the method shall have the right to designate any acre of their patch, or field, for the contest.

No corn shall be harvested before October, nor within 180 days from time of planting.

The rules governing the measurement of land and the ascertainment of the yield by a committee of three disinterested parties will be published at the proper time.

All parties desiring to enter the contest should give notice to W. H. Seymour, Montgomery, Ala., not later than March 31st.

Time Flies.

The days are gliding on their way, and we must let them glide. The weeks are sliding, day by day, and still we let them slide. Old Father Time still grimly wends; Age at our doorway knocks, and soon our sympathetic friends will place us in a box.

We have but little time to stay where now we sadly dwell—a little work, a little play, and then the evening bell.

And if we do not lend a hand to others as we see the tawdry shoes in which we stand are worth far more than we.

Swiss English.

A Zurich newspaper published the following advertisement in English: "Residing board house among a charming set of mountains. Very becoming for families or singular individuals. Shadowed glades and amiable places for resting for guests of the cure. All facilities for mountainous expeditions. Excellent kitchen, with lager beer running from the tap."

In an English village an official notice reads as follows: "The public are warned against using the well for domestic purposes unless previously boiled."

The Hapsburg Bridal Trains.

There is a curious custom among the daughters of the house of Hapsburg. Their bridal trains instead of finishing an honorable career in the ballrooms are bestowed after the ceremony on the church whose sacred floor they have swept. At a centenary celebration at Remagen the altar floor was covered with a sheet of satin and silver mellowed by a breath of age that had once formed part of the wedding garment of Marie Antoinette, the ill-fated queen of France executed in the French revolution.

Language of Business.

"I understand that your wife and daughters have acquired several foreign languages."

"Yes," answered Mr. Cameron, "when they're having a good time in society or at the opera they talk French or Italian. But when it comes to talking their troubles they get back to plain English, so that I can take a hand."

PROHIBITION.

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 22, 1909
Editor Banner—Notwithstanding the financial panic and the general hard times, the Banner still seeks our homes with the news of not only dear old Chilton, but the state as well. I am always glad to read the news from my dear old home county, and to see just what is going on.

I notice the writer from New Harmony in last week's issue, stating that a great deal is being said about prohibition. I am glad to say that he will still hear, read and see more of prohibition in the future than ever before. I am also proud to state, and if space would permit, I would give you the statistics of our great city, of which there has been so much talk of her death if we got prohibition. We are proud to state that we have had thirteen months trial in Birmingham, and can say we are still alive with a brighter future before us than ever while whiskey was in our town.

I would like to give you some idea of the many states in which prohibition predominates, but time and space will not permit. I will, however say that Mobile is progressing onward under her many disadvantages as all seaport towns have. The meat men will have to employ more clerks to wait on the trade they have from 4 to 10 p. m. It means that many families have meat for breakfast who are not in the habit of such a luxury.

"Boost, and the world boosts with you. Knock, and you're on the shelf. For the world gets sick Of the one who'll kick. And wish that he'd kick himself."

Boost when the sun is shining, Boost when it starts to rain. If you happen to fall, Don't lie there and bawl, But get up and boost again.

Boost for your own advancement, Boost for the things a-bloom; For the chap that's found On the topmost round, Is the booster every time."

Respectfully yours, SAM R. BILLINGSLEY.

A Washington's Birthday Experiment

By EDGAR E. WEBB

Copyright, 1918, by C. M. Loris.

BLAME that pigheaded Schmidt!

Squire Hardy was in the sitting room talking to his wife. "To think of his kicking just because the little schoolhouse is bound to celebrate the day and wants leave to use the schoolhouse!"

"He's a well meaning, peaceable neighbor, Hiram," said the squire's wife placidly.

"So's horses and cows. Gimme folks that's got some public spirit in 'em. Why, there ain't been a mite of public improvement done this ten year back."

"Oh, now, Hiram, we've got the postoffice."

"Yes; much thanks to the rest of 'em! It was me worked and kicked and badgered till I got them a tri-weekly mail, and much use they make of it."

"I don't recollect much public improvement ever being in Hardyville," said Mrs. Hardy dryly.

"There would 'a' been," said her husband testily. "There would 'a' been if the Americans had stayed here and the Germans had kept away."

"Sho, Hiram! You can't say but what the German folks keep the church and schoolhouse going."

"Goin'-yes, goin' to-rick and ruin all the same! Schoolhouse leakin' like a sieve, and catch 'em taxin' themselves for a new roof! I wonder Miss Atworth can stay in the place, her and the children mirlin' shop mouth deep in mud to get to school in the winter. Hello! Here comes Jack with the mail bag."

A little while later Squire Hardy was in the act of distributing the bag's small contents when two farmers walked in without even stopping to stamp the mud off their cypress boots. Mrs. Hardy kept on placidly knitting beyond the fireplace. She was used to such invasions of the sitting room, from which she had removed the carpet soon after the postoffice was granted to the sleepy settlement.

"Draw up to the fire, Mr. Gates," she said hospitably. "Take that rocker, Mr. Schmidt."

Mr. Gates kicked his feet against the andirons to rid them of clay and snow.

"Cold day," he remarked, settling his coonskin cap more firmly on his head. "What's this I hear about the new teacher?"

"Well, what?" snapped the squire, looking around.

"Some say she's dead set on gettin' up them dimes on Washington's birthday."

"Well, s'pose she is?" said the squire. "She ain't askin' nothin' but the schoolhouse for an evenin', and I've got power to let her have that. I'm school agent, ain't I?"

"I don't say the contrary, but to my way of thinkin' she's just a wastin' time over a lot of foolishness. Hey, Schmidt!"

"Yah, das ist so!" assented the man in the rocking chair as he took his pipe from his mouth. "I tell mein boy I shud dook him out of school and put him to work ven I hear some more of dose crazy ideas."

"Crazy? Nothin' crazy about it!" interrupted the old squire hotly.

Mr. Gates gave a snarl. "They say she's had a piano hauled out from the city, too," he said. "Hope she don't intend to levy on the parents to pay for it. She'll get nothin' out of me. I'll tell her that right now."

"Shucks!" cried the squire as he handed Schmidt his Zeitung. "Neither of you need't worry. She's too smart to expect to get blood out of turnips."

"Well, all I haf to say," was Schmidt's parting remark as he wound his blue woolen muffler about his neck, "is she keeps on mit dose foolishness I dake mein Karl out of school right away alretty. Dot vos better dot he pork as to waste his time so."

"Poor little Miss Atworth!" sighed Mrs. Hardy as she watched the two men tramp off together. "I'm powerful glad she's boarding with us. The whole neighborhood is down on her newfangled ways. I'm going right out now and make something extra nice and hot for supper. It's pretty near sundown, and she'll come in soon all worn out with her day's work."

The little teacher did need the good chow and "extra nice" supper that awaited her in the cozy kitchen, for she had felt much discouraged as she trudged homeward through the falling snow. Her pupils had nearly all been telling her the same thing that day. It was that their parents counted the idea of helping her to celebrate Washington's birthday.

"How could the poor children learn patriotism?" said Mrs. Hardy. "That big room upstairs in the schoolhouse was built for a public hall. It has not been opened for fifteen years for any kind of an entertainment, not even a magic lantern show. It is the same old treadmill existence year in and year out. The children don't get their lives brightened—no public holidays are celebrated here, not even the Fourth of July. How can they love the country?"

The upshot was Miss Atworth's determination to celebrate Washington's birthday. The indifference or hostility of the parents had but roused her American spirit, even to the resolve that she would bear the entire expense herself if none would contribute from their plenty.

"Ten dollars," she reflected, "will buy decorations and material for cos-umes and stage curtains. Another $10 will rent a piano. Most of the children have never even seen one. All my spare time must go to getting up the entertainment, and all my savings too. Well, I'm glad. I guess I can give up so much for my country."

Not a particle of encouragement did she get from any of the parents except Peter Dowling, a one armed veteran of the civil war, and he was much more discouraging than he meant to be.

"Go on, I wish you luck, young lady," he would observe. "You can count on me for anything a one armed man can do. But what's the use? I've tried and tried to get some 'Merican sentiment into these youngsters. Tain't no go, and never will be. But you can count on me to hooray for you all the same. I'll be there if no-body else is."

Miss Atworth's programme, besides the decoration of the schoolhouse, comprised tableaux and the recitation of patriotic poems and addresses by her larger pupils, but most of the children soon received strict orders to hurry home at a o'clock to attend to the milking and evening chores. They were also kept at work till the last possible minute in the morning. But with only noontime and recess for practicing their parts her enthusiasm worked wonders.

"It ought to be a grand success," said Miss Atworth as she took a final approving survey of the decorations the afternoon of the 21st. "Only it's a little top warlike. I wish I had an old fashioned pruning hook to hang across that sword between the windows."

"Mr. Schmidt has one," volunteered Sarah Gates. "But he's so mad about our wasting so much time, as he calls it, that it's as much as a fellow's head is worth to ask him for it. I heard him tell pa that he was going to keep Karl at home tomorrow night."

"Keep Karl at home!" cried Miss Atworth in dismay. "He couldn't be so mean as that!"

Karl was the brightest pupil in her room, a big, manly boy of sixteen. He was kept at home every spring and fall to help with the work, although his father was not poor. She had taken an especial interest in him from the first, had drilled him carefully in his declamation and counted on him as the star of the entertainment.

Miss Atworth locked the door and started rapidly homeward. What would she do if Karl must be left out of the performance? A quarter of a mile brought her to the lane leading from the pike to the Schmidt place, and there she stopped with sudden resolve.

"I'll beard that old lion in his den and ask him for his pruning hook. That will be an excuse for going and will give me an opportunity to plead Karl's cause."

It was nearly dark when Miss Atworth ran up the squire's front walk and danced through the house into the kitchen.

"Oh, such luck!" she cried gayly. "I went to see Mr. Schmidt, and some good angel prompted me to speak to him in German. It was such bad German—perhaps that's what pleased him. Anyway, it thawed him right out. He lent me his pruning hook and showed me over his barn. Of course I admired his fine cattle, and then, as he got more and more pleased at my showing such an astonishing lot of sense, I praised Karl so highly that he made a complete surrender. He is coming tomorrow night to bring the whole Schmidt family, from the old grandmother to the baby. Hurrah for Washington's birthday!"

Never had the old public hall held such an assembled and defiant multitude as the one that crowded into that memorable night. Gay decorations of bunting, countless little flags and wreaths of evergreen fringed the dingy old place. The picture of Washington, borrowed from his place in the schoolhouse, was tacked to the wall, and around it, reaching across the stage, was a long line of candles.

"It's enough to make even a pig a image feel like a pig," said Peter Dowling. "Hardly to his wife and daughter's sweet voices me a happy with the grand old national airs."

Declarations followed each other in rapid succession. There was a "Gloria" and all the states of the Union took part. The very air seemed charged with the little teacher's electric spirit of patriotic enthusiasm.

It was at its height when Karl came forward to give the famous speech of Patrick Henry. His delivery was so much better than the rehearsals had led her to expect that even Miss Atworth was surprised. He seemed to find an inspiration in the crowd. A storm of applause followed the "Give me liberty or give me death!"

"What shall we do?" she whispered in dismay as the persistent clapping of many hands called him back. "I wish you had prepared for an encore."

"Oh, I know," said Karl, and in another instant he was on the stage again.

In the deep bush that followed his clear, musical voice rose in German. He was reciting "Mein Vaterland." Old grandmothers who knew but a few words of English rocked themselves back and forth in excited delight; Mr. Schmidt beamed with vast smiles; many an eye grew dim, thinking of the old beloved home across the seas. But the boy was thinking of his own native country. There was no mistaking his meaning as he turned in closing to wave his hand toward the portrait and the flag. "My fatherland!" he cried, with true feeling, and then, after a moment of general surprise, deafening applause broke out.

As it subsided Miss Atworth stepped forward to announce the last song, but Peter Dowling, his face aflame with new delight and old memories, rose, stalked up the aisle as if unconscious of all the eyes fixed on him and swung himself up on the platform with one long step.

"Friends," he began, "I've been livin' kind of dead among ye for many's the year. Now I want to say a word or two. I ain't no great at speechifyin', but these old songs and pieces we've been a-listenin' to have spirited me up like the trumpet does an old war horse."

"I want to say that I fit for that old flag, and yet, livin' here so long and never a celebration for young or old, I'd half forgot my patriotism. It's our schoolteacher has woke me up to see in the truth."

"I propose that we all get out our pocketbooks and throw in to get a handsome flag to fly over this schoolhouse. Take an old soldier's word for it, there ain't no greater inspiration anywhere to make a fellow put in his best licks and come out on top. Now, Miss Teacher, I'll just get the sense of this meetin'."

He paused a moment, then turned to the audience: "All who want to express their thanks for this evening's entertainment and are willin' a collection should be took say 'Aye!'"

Such a storm of ayes followed that Peter caught up his slouched hat and began to pass it around with his only arm. Dimes and quarters clinked into it, while an occasional dollar showed how deeply selfish hearts had been stirred by the uplifting influences of the hour.

Miss Atworth seated herself at the piano and beckoned to the bewildered Goddess of Liberty to lead the states again across the stage. Some of the smaller ones struggled sadly out of line, but as Karl, at a nod from his teacher, caught the great flag from its place and stood with it in the midst of them every voice rang out full and true on the chorus:

Yes, we'll rally round the flag, boys,
We'll rally once again,
Shouting the battle cry of freedom!
People seemed loath to go when it was all over. They came up to the teacher with awkward expressions of pleasure and appreciation.

"I'll never forget this night," drawled one faded, overworked woman, to whose eyes the rich colors and tinsel of the stage decorations had seemed a part of fairyland. "That music was so sweet, and my little Meta looked like a picture with her hair curled and that beautiful dress on you made her. I really didn't know she was so pretty. I'm going to fix her up and get her a lot of nice things after this."

"Well, it was worth while," said the little teacher as she dropped into a chair at home, too tired to take off her wraps.

"Indeed it was," answered the squire. "Jake Schneider's new patriotism rose so he said he'd put a walk on each side of the school for half a mile, even if nobody'd help him. Then a lot of 'em began to talk it over. The upshot of it was that old Schmidt is goin' to give the logs, and they're all goin' to work tomorrow to hew them off and stake them down."

The next Monday morning Karl stopped at Miss Atworth's desk to say joyfully: "Oh, teacher, father was so pleased! He is going to hire another hand and let me keep on till the end of the term."

"Then I need never regret my sacrifice," thought the happy girl.

That celebration was the beginning of better times in Hardyville. When the doors were barred for vacation and the grass grew rank on the bare playground the new flag still floated.

AGED PEOPLE

Mrs. Sarah J. Windrom of Chicago, Grandniece of Alexander Hamilton, Who Signed the Declaration of Independence, Says:

"Vinol is a godsend to old people. I am 76 years old, but I have a hearty appetite, sleep soundly, and feel active and well to-day—thanks to Vinol. When I was young, cod liver oil was dispensed in a greasy, unpalatable form, and it fairly gagged me to get it down. Vinol is entirely different, very palatable and nourishing to impoverished blood. It is the finest tonic and strength creator I ever used."

Mrs. H. W. Avery, Norwich, N. Y., says: "At the age of eighty-nine I felt the need of a tonic, something to strengthen and build me up. For some time I have taken Vinol, and have found that it brings vigor and life to the aged as nothing else will."

The reason Vinol is so beneficial to old people is because it is composed of two world famed tonics—the medicinal elements of cod liver oil and iron. Vinol tones up the digestive organs, aids assimilation, makes rich red blood, and strengthens every organ in the body.

We will cheerfully return money to all those who try Vinol and receive no benefit. Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

AN EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN TO HELP FARMERS

For years the only connecting link between Southern farmers and manufacturers of fertilizer has been the dollar—the buying and selling of fertilizers.

During the present season however, the Bigbee Fertilizer Company of Montgomery made a strenuous and successful effort to get closer touch with every Southern farmer through an extensive advertising campaign, embodying valuable statistics and information covering the scientific and intelligent use of Fertilizers. This campaign is directly in line with the advanced teaching of the State Agriculture institutions and will undoubtedly be of incalculable value to every farmer.

There can be no doubt that the intelligent use of Fertilizers does add materially to the market value, not only of our great staples of Corn and Cotton, but every crop that the Southern farmer makes. Inasmuch as Bigbee's Fertilizers are made particularly for corn and cotton, and because they are manufactured only after practical experiments, to suit the peculiar needs of southern soils—there can be no doubt as to the logic of the Bigbee Company's claim that their fertilizers will pay farmers better than those which are simply made for general purposes.

The last report of the Commissioner of Agriculture brought out the fact that for the first time in the country's history the cotton crop exceeded every other crop in money value with the single exception of one—the corn crop; but the cotton crop is confined to eleven states and corn is grown broadcast. While this is true, the truth remains that many of our farmers are not farming as they should. They are not using the right fertilizers nor are they getting the most out of their land, by deep plowing and proper rotation of crops. This should be remedied. The fertilizer question can be settled by the use of Bigbee's high grade Fertilizers and the State Experiment Stations stand ready to advise every farmer in any way needed to the end that he can get every dollar that his land is capable of producing. Bigbee's Fertilizers can be obtained from your local dealer.

TRUE WOMANLY BEAUTY.

No woman can be truly beautiful who has a yellow complexion caused by a torpid liver. To be beautiful a woman must have good health, and this can be accomplished by occasionally using St. Joseph's Liver Regulator (either liquid or powders, as you like best.) It keeps the bowels open, passing off the poisonous, effete matter, and in this way purifies the blood and assists in clearing the complexion. All women should occasionally use St. Joseph's Liver Regulator. Liquid 50 cents a bottle; powders, 25 cents a box.

Manna.

The manna of commerce comes chiefly from Sicily. It is a sweet substance obtained from a small tree known as the manna ash. This tree can be grown as far north as England, but in that country it yields no manna and is cultivated for ornament only. The manna is formed from the sap. The trees are ready to be tapped at the age of eight years, when the stems have a diameter of about three inches.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Careful Woodcutting.
The quantity and quality of the product from the farm wood lot can be improved by simple methods easy of application, says the American Cultivator. If a growth of young trees is starting no stock should be allowed to graze in the wood lot. When cutting is done care should be taken to thin out the undesirable growth.

Instead of selecting the best trees and those which produce wood which splits easily, the crooked, scarred and broken topped trees should be taken and those which are crowding the good trees or are overtopped by them. The desirable growth cannot be taken all at once, but should be removed in several rather light thinnings. Attention should be given not only to the quality of the trees left, but to their ability to properly shade the ground. Open topped trees like birches and poplars require a lighter thinning than beech and hard woods. It is simply a matter of a little good judgment in the amount of thinning.

A Great Jersey Cow.

The Jersey cow Adelaide of Beechlands last year (360 days) produced 15,572.1 pounds of milk containing 849.62 pounds of fat. The test was made under the supervision of the Oregon experiment station.

Her average percentage of fat for the year was 5.456, and the fat is equivalent to 900 pounds 8.9 ounces of butter and 85 per cent fat. Just think of it—15,572 pounds of milk in the year, averaging 5.456 per cent fat! It takes a Jersey cow, and a good one, to exhibit such a combination. If we should compute butter as was done in the dairy demonstration test at the St. Louis exposition, the overrun for this grade of milk being 1.182, we would credit Adelaide of Beechlands with 1,004 pounds of butter 83 per cent fat.—National Stockman and Farmer.

Crowding an Acre.

A Kansas farmer is carrying on an interesting experiment on his own account to test the possibilities of an acre, says the American Cultivator. The record began Sept. 10, the first crop being winter spinach. It is figured that the crop will be out of the way in the spring in time to set out plants grown in the hotbeds and greenhouses.

The plan is by careful study to keep the grounds occupied the longest possible period with paying crops. A record will be kept of the labor cost, and the results are likely to be of interest as showing something of the method that will need to be practiced in future times when land becomes scarce and high.

Roots For Stock Feeding.

A good root cellar would prove an excellent investment on many farms. With the era of corn silage we have come to underestimate the value of roots. The increasing cost of grain, with the consequent difficulty of feeding it at a profit, makes it important to provide all possible substitutes which can be used without detracting from results. In the feeding of swine, colts and horses particularly much can be saved by a liberal use of roots. The storage problem is often one of the troublesome ones, but a good root cellar quickly dispels this. Where potatoes are grown the same cellar will do.—Farm and Fireside.

Milking a Cow on Either Side.

Cows are always milked from the off or right side because they have been taught that way. A cow can be milked from either side if she is brought up right, but the lessons must begin at the earliest handling of the heifer. Milk first from one side and then the other, and in a short time the heifer will not mind. It often comes handy to milk from the left side, and

How to Cure Your Nervous Break-Down

One often to be considered as a nervous person is the one who has a nervous break-down. This is a condition of the system that controls the organs of respiration, circulation, digestion and elimination. When you are weak, nervous, irritable, sick, it is often because you lack nerve energy, and the process of rebuilding and sustaining life is interfered with. Miles' Nerve has helped thousands of such people, and will believe it if not entirely true. Try it.

The nerve system gave away early, and left me on the verge of insanity. I tried all kinds of medicine, but got no permanent relief. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nerve in a few days and in a week I was much better, and I continued to improve until I was cured. I am now a healthy man, and never miss the opportunity to recommend this medicine to anyone who has a nervous break-down.

Dr. Miles' Nerve is a pure remedy for constipation, nervousness, indigestion, and all other ailments of the nervous system. It is a pleasant to take, and gives it to the system with splendid results. It is sold by all druggists at 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Dr. Miles' Nerve, 202 E. High, Minneapolis, Minn. will send a sample to anyone who has a nervous break-down, and will give it a fair trial.

The Farm Workshop.
One of the best lines of equipment which any farm can have is a workshop well supplied with tools and machinery for needed repairs. Breakage and loss of bolts and nuts are a constant occurrence, and there is consequently much loss of time from having the needed things at hand with which to make repairs. Such a workshop may well include a forge and a blacksmith's tools for doing the simpler kinds of ironwork.

Pastures For Pigs.
Good pastures were provided all year at the Mississippi experiment station, thus insuring large, strong litters of pigs and a healthy herd; also cheap pork.—New England Homestead.

Grit For Poultry.
Grit must be hard and sharp to do the work of properly grinding up food in the crop. Gravel, as a substitute, is not rough enough, and crushed oyster shell is too soft.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The Stool of Repentance.
The player in this game being cast around the room, a stool is placed in the center, which one of the players volunteers to occupy while certain charges are made against him.

One person, acting as president, then goes round the room inquiring of each player what charges he or she has to make against the culprit, who is humbly sitting on the stool of repentance. All the accusations are whispered into the president's ear, who will do well, if the party is a large one, to be supplied with paper and pencil to write down the accusations and the names of the accusers. All having made their charges, the president says: "Prisoner on the stool of repentance, you are accused of being too good natured, of smiling when you should look stern. Can you tell me the name of the person who makes this serious charge against you?"

Should the prisoner guess right, the accuser has to pay a forfeit and take his place on the stool of repentance. It sometimes happens that if the prisoner guesses rightly on the first charge he may wish to hear the rest, but if they are read to him he must guess each accuser's name or pay a forfeit each time he misses. If he cannot guess any one of the names of his accusers he has to pay six forfeits and sit on the stool of repentance a second time.

Blind Man's Buff With Spoons.
A variation of blind man's buff may be played in this fashion: Get a lighted candlestick, a handkerchief and two tablespoons. Blindfold one of the party, give him the spoons, one in each hand, and place him in the middle of a large ring of chairs on which the rest of the party are seated and tell him that he must try to blow out the light as it is passed quickly from hand to hand by the others.

The blind man will find this a difficult task to accomplish, and even when he has done so his troubles are not over. He must then try to guess who the person is who was holding the light when it was blown out. But he is not allowed to feel the person, as in ordinary blind man's buff; that would be far too easy. He can only feel with the spoons.

WORN OUT
That's the way you feel about the lungs when you have a hacking cough. It's foolishness to let it go on and trust to luck to get over it, when Ballard's Horehound Syrup will stop the cough and heal the lungs. Price 25c, 50c, and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

The Rat and the Snake.
A traveler in the desert once saw a number of rats cutting off branches of cacti with their sharp teeth and then carrying the branches to the entrance of their hole.

In a short time they had made a complete circle of cactus branches around the hole, and the only way to get in was by jumping over the branches.

Soon after the work had been finished a rat came scampering up, looking very much alarmed, and it and the other rats all jumped over the cactus branches and went into their hole.

The reason for their excitement was soon seen, for in a very little while a snake came creeping up, intending to enter the hole and secure a rat for his dinner. When it got to the cactus branches, however, the snake stopped. The cactus spikes pricked. Mr. Snake could not get by at all, and so finally he went away, leaving the rats laughing at him and quite safe in their hole.

Conundrums.
When is an artist a dangerous person? When his designs are bad.

What motive led to the laying down of railways? The loco-motive.

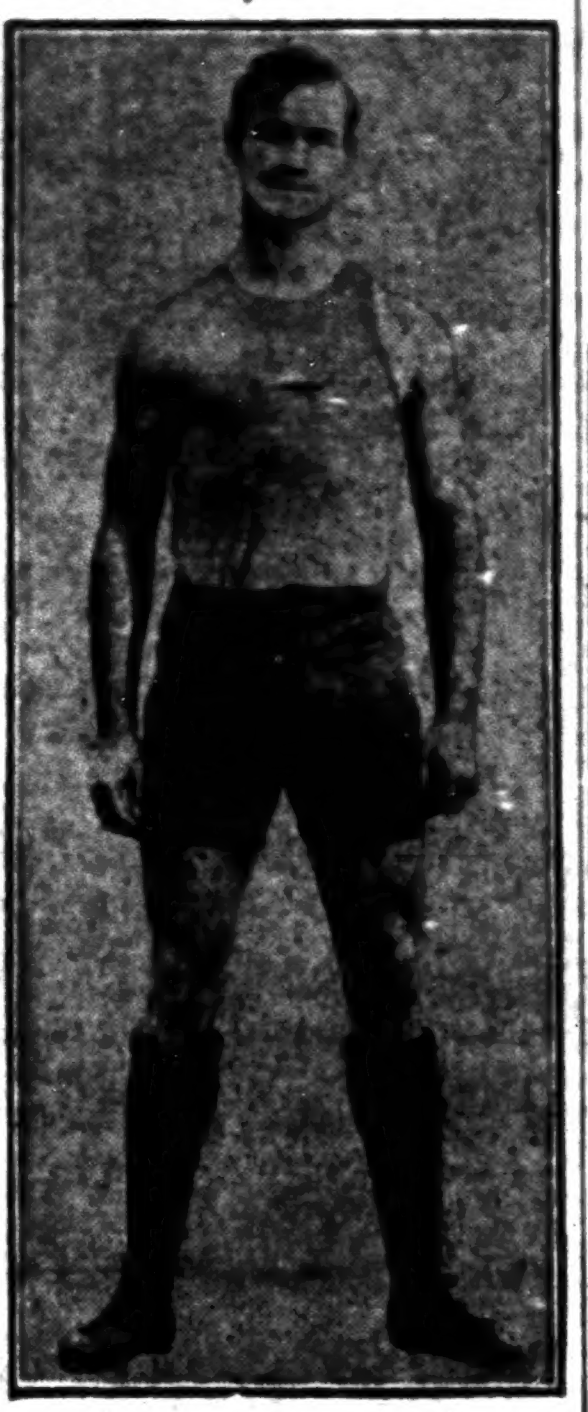

Define matchless misery. Having a cigar and nothing to light it with.

What bridge has no human being ever crossed? The bridge of his own nose.

What English words have all the vowels and in their proper order? Facetiously (a e i o u y), astemiously (a e i o u y).

Why is a poor singer like a counter-felter? He is an utterer of bad notes.

BABY HANDS

CAPTAIN RYAN OF COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY BASKET BALL TEAM.

ber of victories for the St. Bartholomew A. C. of New York. The most notable of these was the Junior National A. U. shot put championship in St. Louis.

During his freshman year at Columbia Ryan showed his versatility by making the football, basket ball and track teams. The following year when Columbia abandoned football Ryan sought new fields to conquer and went out for the crew and wrestling team, making both.

"Cyclone" Thompson's Offer to Nelson.
Johnny Thompson, the "Sycamore cyclone," known in boxing circles to be one of the toughest lightweights that ever donned a glove, came out recently with an offer to give Battling Nelson $5,000 if the Dane can stop him inside of forty-five rounds. Thompson says it is his own money and that if Nelson will accept the proposition he will post the coin thirty days before the battle.

But that is not all. Thompson takes Packey McFarland and Fred Welsh into consideration when talking fight and finance and says he will wager $5,000 with either of them on the result of a battle of from twenty-five to forty-five rounds.

Thompson is smarting under the defeat sustained at the hands of Peter Sullivan recently and says it should not count against him, as Sullivan is admittedly a welterweight. Besides, he says he whipped Sullivan several times and that he was robbed of the decision in the Pocatello encounter.

Thompson has been a sort of bug-bear to the leading lightweights. None of them wanted to meet him before Sullivan gained a decision over him, and now of course they have an excuse which is merely the fate of a loser.

Jockey Powers to Ride in France.
Jockey Vincent Powers has signed a one year contract to ride for Baron Leopold Rothschild in France next season at a salary of $15,000. There is also a clause in the boy's contract that if he remains in France Rothschild is to have the privilege of renewing first call on his services for three years.

In view of the fact that Powers has been finding it a hard task to make 100 pounds lately it is conceded that his contract is the best since the days of Tod Sloan, for whose services Lord Beresford is said to have paid a year's retainer of $25,000. It is the intention of Powers and his father to leave for France at the end of the California season. The boy at present is under contract to Barney Schreiber, who pays him $1,000 a month for the winter season.

Powers rode more winners in 1908 than any other jockey on the American and Canadian tracks. He is alert at the post, but his best quality is riding strong finishes.

Cornell's football schedule will be greatly strengthened next fall by the game with Harvard, and it is cause for congratulation that the meeting has been arranged. It will come at a time when both eleven are working up to their top form and should not only furnish an interesting struggle, but a good line for comparison as to the relative strength of the various teams. It will be the first time that Cornell and Harvard have met on the gridiron, although relations between the two institutions have been friendly for years in baseball and rowing.

BIG AUTO MEET BEGINS TODAY.

FAMOUS DRIVERS IN MARDI GRAS CARNIVAL IN NEW ORLEANS—THREE DAYS OF TRACK RACING

New Orleans, Feb. 20.—For three days, beginning today, the Mardi Gras will be "speed mad." The automobile races, intended at first to be merely an incident of the Mardi Gras season, are now the first topic in public interest, even among the least sportsly inclined of the city's people.

The promoters of the motor races declare that the speed carnival is the greatest in the history of the United States.

One of the most interesting features of the races will be the speed contest for women, in which Mrs. Joan Newton Cuneo and Miss Alice Porter, two of the best known of America's women autoists, are entered. It is the first time that women have entered in a speed contest on a circular track, and the race will probably be one of the most popular events on the program.

George Robertson, winner of the Vanderbilt cup, Fairmount Park and Brighton races of last fall, and Fred J. Wagner, the well-known referee and starter, arrived yesterday for the contests. Previous arrivals are Lewis Strang, Ralph dePalma, Robert Burnham, Louis Chevrolet, Jimmy Ryall, Arthur W. Greiner, "Kid" Etheridge, E. F. Scheider, L. A. Dabrow and Mrs. Joan Newton Cuneo.

These drivers and many amateurs will run Saturday, Sunday and Monday under the auspices of the New Orleans Automobile Club, of which T. C. Campbell and Homer George are the officers in charge of the meet. David Pasadena and a party of amateurs from Cincinnati arrived last night and will compete in the amateur events.

Southern Rivers to be Surveyed.
Washington, Feb. 20.—The river and harbor bill, which was reported to the house yesterday, carried no big appropriations, but was confined exclusively to new surveys and small appropriations for projects already begun.

The survey authorized in Georgia for the Coconino, Ocmulgee and Altamaha rivers. The survey will probably look to the development of these three rivers as one project. A survey of St. Mary's river is authorized, and a survey of Sapelo sound. The report of the army engineers on these projects will be the basis for future appropriations to complete the work.

Physician's Prescriptions Barred.
Topeka, Kan., Feb. 20.—If Governor Stubbs signs the anti-liquor bill passed by both the house and the senate, Kansas will have an absolute prohibition law, which even prohibits physicians from prescribing liquor. The senate yesterday accepted the house amendment barring physician's prescriptions.

Governor Stubbs is said to favor the bill.

Strenuous Day in Congress.
Washington, Feb. 20.—Not during the present session of congress has such a large amount of legislative business been done by the senate as was accomplished yesterday. The army bill, carrying appropriations amounting to $102,638,050, and the pension bill, with appropriations aggregating $160,869,000, of which $160,000,000 was for pensions, and $869,000 for fees, etc., were passed. Forty-five other bills, forty of which had previously been favorably acted upon by the house, were passed.

Big Reduction in Print Paper.
Washington, Feb. 20.—A reduction on news print paper from $6 a ton to $2 a ton; the placing of ground wood on the free list, and the establishment of one-twelfth cent per pound on mechanically ground wood pulp are the recommendation of the select committee on pulp and paper investigation, which made its report to the house yesterday. The report states that it presents the unanimous report of the entire committee.

Chicago Saloons Open on Sunday.
Chicago, Feb. 20.—The crusade to close Chicago saloons on Sunday received a severe setback yesterday when the supreme court at Springfield handed down a decision holding that it has not the power to compel Mayor Busse to close the grogshops on the first day of the week.

President-Elect Buys Powerful Horse.
Washington, Feb. 20.—President-elect Taft has purchased from Tate Sterrett, of the Passlawn farm, Hot Springs, Va., a stalwart horse of good pedigree, for his personal use, after he takes up his residence in the white house. The animal is a powerful blood bay gelding with black points, 6 years of age. He is of the hunter type, 17 hands high, and 1,250 pounds in weight.

Fatten Your Soil— You Fatten Your Pocketbook

Plough deep and fertilize freely and you will make two dollars instead of one at harvest time. The biggest crops in every section of the U. S. have proven this, but you must use the right fertilizers. Some land requires more phosphoric acid, another a greater percentage of nitrogen, or potash, to make it fertile, and you can't make big crops unless you make your land fertile—unless you give it these plant foods in proportions that exactly fill its needs. Avoid money waste or guesswork from now on by using only

GOULDING'S Fertilizers

For over 50 years they have been the backbone of the biggest crop yields in the South and abroad. Goulding's Fertilizers are especially adapted to the growing of corn and cotton.

They are compounded to suit the special individual needs of various soils in Southern States. Whatever fertilizer your land requires, Goulding's has a special kind to suit your land and fatten your pocketbook by doubling your crops.

People feel their corns ache and their bones rheumatic when rainy weather is at hand because of the dampness of the atmosphere, which affects its pressure upon the body and causes a temporary disturbance of the system. All general disturbances of the body manifest themselves in those parts which are in a morbid state, as in a corn, a rheumatic bone or a decayed tooth.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

of the Night No how, and Some New Not.

All the sporting men of Clanton looking forward to Friday night when the great wrestling match between Sam Barson, the "Young Turk" champion lightweight wrestler of the South, and Bob Reilly, champion of Indiana, is to come off at Hayes' warehouse in Clanton. "Young Turk" has been a regular attraction of Clanton for some time and has quite a reputation as a wrestler. A big crowd is expected from Birmingham to witness the match, and a bigger crowd will be furnished by our local sports.

Search has come in very late and we are enjoying the first of Spring: "loveliest season of the year." Everyone is busy—farmers are preparing for another not with too much cotton to get us hope; gardens are being in shape for the household, and all are anticipating the coming summer.

Merchants are getting in the stock of spring goods, some have to market, and others are on the way; but one and all are determined to have the best line you ever laid eyes on. The drug stores are already thinking of ice cream, and the very next thing will be hearing of all-day singings, "dinner on the ground" for the spring time's coming. "Annie," and with its advent, everything takes on new life, and man and woman make up the odds to have a good time.

A shoemaker was arrested for being drunk and brought before the magistrate.
"Which wife," asked a bystander, "will he be obliged to take?"
Smith, always ready at a joke, replied, "He is a cobbler, and he must stick to his last."

From the Moonshiners District.

In the heart of the "moonshine district" of Alabama in Chilton county on the banks of the Coosa river, Deputy Marshall, Friday, yesterday effected the arrest of Wesley Jones a white man, bringing him with illicit distilling. Wesley Jones was brought to Montgomery yesterday in custody conveyed before Judge John H. Moore, United States Commissioner. He made bond of $500 and was released, pending a preliminary hearing the latter part of the week. It is alleged, operated just across the county line from home, in Coosa county. THE MAN ON THE CORNER

All the sporting men of Clanton are looking forward to Friday night when the great wrestling match between Sam Barson, the "Young Turk" champion lightweight wresler of the South, and Bob Reilly, champion of Indiana, is to come off
at Hayes' warehouse in Clanton.
The "Young Turk" has been a resident of Clanton for some time, and has quite a reputation as a fighter. A big crowd is expected from Birmingham to witness the match, and a bigger crowd will be furnished by our local sports.

March has come in very lament and we are enjoying the first days of Spring: "loveliest season of the year." Everyone is busy—farmers are preparing for another crop, not with too much cotton in mind, let us hope; gardens are being put in shape for the household needs, and all are anticipating the coming summer.

Merchants are getting in their stocks of spring goods, some have gone to market, and others are on the way; but one and all are determined to have the best line you ever laid eyes on. The drug stores are already thinking of ice-cream, and the very next thing we can hear of is all-day singings,
"dinner on the ground."
For the spring time's coming, let's have a new life, and let and womankind make up their minds to have a good time.

A shoemaker was arrested for gambling and brought before the magistrate.
"Which wife," asked a bystand-er, "will he be obliged to take?"
Smith, always ready at a joke, said, "He is a cobbler, and of course must stick to his last."

From the Moonshiners

and conveyed before Judge John A.

er. He made bond of $300 and was released, pending a preliminary hearing the latter part of the Jones, it is alleged, operated a still just across the county line from his home in Coosa county. The still was found there, a small plant rested in connection with its operation.—Montgomery Advertiser.

Editor Banner—Please allow me
a small space in the dear old Banner to say a few words in reply to a piece that was in last week's paper. The name that was signed to the piece was Blue Eyed Billy, but I am sure that was not the right name. He was writing about dances and was running the show down. I know dancing is not a fine thing, but I don't know as it is any disgrace to dance. I do not care very much about dancing myself, but let everybody do to suit themselves. If the boys and girls want to dance, let them have their way, and if some of them think debating societies are better than dancing, let them go on and have their dances. A SARDIS BOY.

Old Negro Woman Killed.

On Friday afternoon last an unfortunate accident occurred on the railroad track between Clanton and Lomax. Matilda Young, an old Negro woman, who this month would have reached the century mark, was walking along the track
after a visit to her son at Clanton, when she was struck by a freight train and killed. Her son had given her money to pay railroad fare, but the old woman, who was remarkably spry considering her great age, preferred to walk, and it is supposed the infirmities of old age prevented her from hearing the approach of the train.

Left ear smooth crop. Bell tied on with a rope. Probably found call. Will pay for her delivery to

GOV. PATTERSON ON STAND.

SUNDAY REST OF THE COOPER-SHARP TRIAL AFTER TEN DAYS' TESTIMONY AND SIX WEEKS' TRIAL.

Nashville, Mar. 1.—Sunday was a busy day for counsel on both sides in the Cooper-Sharp trial for the slaying of former Senator E. W. Carmack. The adjournment at noon Saturday over until Monday was welcomed by everyone. It concluded the sixth week of the trial and the tenth day of actual testimony.

The state has offered testimony to show that Senator Carmack received threats that unless he omitted Colonel Cooper's name from the columns of "The Tennessean," either he or Cooper would have to die. Its witnesses told how the senator, while in the act of speaking to his friend and neighbor, Mrs. Eastman, was startled by hearing Colonel Cooper say:

"No there you are; we have the drop on you."

Two facts stood out strongly in the Cooper-Sharp trial for the murder of former United States Senator E. W. Carmack. One was the calling by the defense of Governor M. R. Patterson. The other was the failure of the state to cross-examine him.

Patrick Still Fights for Freedom.

New York, Mar. 1.—Before the appellate division of the supreme court today appeared Albert T. Patrick, the lawyer convicted of the murder by poison of Millionaire William Marsh Rice, on a writ of habeas corpus. His appearance before the state court is a continuation of his fight for liberty, which failed in the United States supreme court.

Patrick asserts that his conviction was procured by fraud and collusion of "dozens of persons of vast influence, power and wealth." His petition for freedom is opposed by the city, county and state authorities.

Editors Honor Poe Today.

London, March 1.—At the annual dinner tonight of the Author's club of this city, the principal literary organization of the British metropolis, the chief theme of the speakers will be the life and works of Edgar Allan Poe, the American poet whose centenary was celebrated in January in the land of his birth.

The list of patrons of the dinner includes Joseph Chamberlain, Mrs. Humphrey Ward, Justin McCarthy, Lord Fairfax, Lady Essex, Mrs. Cornwallis-West and William Archer.

Honors to Battleship Ohio.

Port Monroe, Va., Mar. 1.—The battleship Ohio sailed for New York. The third squadron, which met the returning battleships one thousand miles at sea, will sail tomorrow for Guantanamo, whence it probably will go on a West Indian cruise.

Child Burned to Death Playing With Match.

Villa Rica, Ga., Mar. 1.—The little 3-year-old son of John Hardy, residing at the sulphur mines, was burned to death Friday afternoon. The child was playing with some matches and struck one, which caught his clothing on fire.

Congress Rushing Through Work.

Washington, Mar. 1.—The sixtieth congress will come to an end next Thursday noon, with the inauguration of Taft and Sherman. Until that time business in both houses will be in a hurry-burly condition, with conference reports on appropriation bills the principal order of business.

Child Labor Convention Called.

Baton Rouge, La., Mar. 1.—The call of Governor Sanders, of Louisiana, for a southern states' child labor conference, to be held in New Orleans, Mar. 23, 24 and 25, has brought favorable responses from the governors of Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi and North Carolina, who have forwarded a list of delegates appointed by them to attend.

Graft Case Jury Disagree.

Pittsburg, Pa., Mar. 1.—The jury in the graft case, in which Councilmen J. C. Wason, William Brand and John F. Klein are charged with conspiracy, reported Saturday that it had been unable to agree on a verdict, and was locked up until court convenes Monday morning.

Insurance Man's Body Found.

Rome, Ga., Mar. 1.—The body of J. C. Cockrell, the Rome insurance man, who disappeared on January 26, was found Sunday afternoon floating in the Klovah river at the foot of Fifth avenue.

Compromise Prohibition Bill.

Columbia, S. C., Mar. 1.—The house Saturday concurred in all amendments to the prohibition bill, thus accepting the local option compromise proposed by the senate.

VIRGINIA SENATORS DRIVEN.

THOUSANDS PAID FOR THE DEFEAT OF PROHIBITION IN WEST VIRGINIA SENATE.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 27.—The senate committee, appointed to consider charges that $118,000 had been used last year to defeat the prohibition amendment to the constitution and that $1,000,000 had been or could be raised this year for the same purpose, made its report yesterday.

The report declares that some of those who posed as ardent temperance workers were playing Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

It alleged that a member of the judiciary committee was offered $3,000 to kill the prohibition amendment in committee and $5,000 for his vote on the floor of the senate.

The committee intimates that the house was less virtuous than the senate, and that members of the lower body openly solicited money for their votes. The report mentions no names in connection with the charges.

Rev. "Billy" Sunday Horsemanship.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 27.—Rev. William A. Sunday, better known as "Billy" Sunday, a former baseball player, who is now an evangelist, was horsemanship last night at the Sunday Tabernacle, where, in the presence of 8,000 persons, he was conducting the opening meeting of a religious revival meeting.

A powerful man, who later said his name was Sherman Potts, sprang forward and struck Sunday several blows with a buggy whip.

Sunday leaped from the platform, and dashed his assailant to the floor in the center aisle.

Sunday said he suffered several painful bruises from the buggy whip. The prisoner said that his home was near Lovington, Ill.

The police say that Potts is a religious fanatic.

Ninth Day Cooper-Sharp Trial.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 27.—The ninth day of actual testimony in the Cooper-Sharp trial was marked by lengthy and bitter argument between opposing counsel, and closed with a decided advantage for the defense.

In the question of Major Vettes' testimony, Judge Hart excluded the jury and permitted the state to examine the major for the court's benefit. He admitted all that the state said he would; that Carmack laughed at the idea of trouble; said he had done nothing to provoke it and that he wanted a revolver simply to satisfy his friends. The counsel on both sides argued and the court held with the defense.

New York Jews Organize.

New York, Feb. 27.—Delegates representing the hundreds of thousands of persons of Jewish faith in New York will meet tonight in the building of the United Hebrew Charities to advance the project of an organization that will look after their interests.

The call for the meeting speaks of "the need for the unification of the various elements of the Jewish population of New York, which has reached the aggregate of almost 1,000,000 persons, and of bringing about harmony and a proper sense of solidarity in place of the deplorable conditions which now exist."

Southern Golf Association Meet.

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 27.—The directors of the Southern Golf Association assembled in Birmingham yesterday afternoon. Memphis chosen as the place for holding this year's championship tournament.

Atlanta selected for 1910, and Birmingham for 1911. Pensacola admitted to membership, the entrance fee having been received.

Game Warden Killed.

New Orleans, Feb. 27.—Details of the assassination of Charles L. Jordan, superintendent of the famous country estate, near Hammond, La., of Alfred Hennen Morris, of New York, were brought.

Jordan was shot from ambush some time Wednesday night. It is thought that the killing resulted from his efforts to protect the game of Morris retreat from indiscriminate poaching.

Near Bear Dealers Get the Limit.

Atlanta, Feb. 27.—Thirty days in the city workhouse, a fine of $500 and a bond of $1,000 was the triple sentence imposed by Recorder Broyles yesterday morning on F. P. Whitley, who runs a near beer saloon at 135 Peters street.

The sentences were the extreme limit of the law.

Washington, Feb. 26.—The production of more than 36,500,000 gallons of turpentine and more than 4,000,000 barrels of resin, with a valuation of more than $14,900,000 for the turpentine and nearly $18,000,000 for the resin, summarizes the output of the naval stores industry for 1908, according to the preliminary report of the United States forest service just completed. Florida leads the list with 17,000,300 gallons of turpentine in 1908.

Oil Trust Wins Against U. S.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—From Judge Landis' fine of $25,240,000, to a possible maximum fine of $720,000, as a far cry, but that is admitted to be the meaning of a ruling made by Judge Anderson, in the trial of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, for alleged rebating yesterday. The ruling was informal, and made for the purpose of expediting the hearing, and although the government has the privilege of presenting further arguments, it is practically certain that there will be no change in the ruling when it is formally entered.

Piedmont Power Company for Atlanta.

Atlanta, Feb. 26.—A resolution bearing the unanimous approval of the committee on electric lights, telegraphs and telephones, will go to the general council next Monday afternoon, granting a franchise to the Piedmont Power Company, a $3,000,000 concern, which will furnish Atlanta with electric power.

The company is backed by ample capital, and its stockholders and board of directors include some of the leading financiers and capitalists of the city.

House Snubs Roosevelt.

Washington, Feb. 26.—By an overwhelming vote, and without party distinctions, the house of representatives yesterday sustained the committee on appropriations in again reporting a provision in the sundry civil appropriation bill, restricting the operations of the secret service detectives to the treasury department.

COL. COOPER ON RACK.

FORCED TO ADMIT SHORTAGE AS CHANCERY CLERK OF $100,000 MIXED UP WITH POLK WHO ROBBED TENNESSEE.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 25.—After a day replete with exciting incidents and interesting developments, the session of the Cooper-Sharp trial for the murder of former Senator Carmack closed with the aged defendant, Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, still on the stand.

Almost the first thing the state did on cross-examination was to announce that it would try to prove that Colonel Cooper was a defaulter to the extent of over $100,000 while clerk and master of chancery in Maury county.

The state won a partial victory and straightway sprang another surprise. It resurrected some old legislative records concerning an investigation into the defalcation of State Treasurer M. T. Polk in the early '80s. They offered to prove that thousands of dollars of the state's money was invested by Polk with Colonel Duncan B. Cooper and others in a Mexican silver mine scheme, a Walnut Log scheme in North Carolina and a scheme to buy The Nashville American.

Colonel Cooper admitted that there were irregularities in his office of clerk and master in chancery, but said they were due to bad management and poor bookkeeping and that every dollar was made good.

SEVEN KILLED IN WRECK

R. M. DAVIS, mail clerk, Philadelphia.
WILHELM, mail weigher, Newcastile, Del.

The injured:
Miss Ashansophios, Memphis, Tenn., left shoulder bruised.
Lewis Brockway, of the Princeton Company, internal injuries.
Princess Trizio, educated, was burned to death. She had been exhibited at Keith's theater, Philadelphia, and was being taken to the folk. The horse was 20 years old and had been shown all over the world by her owner, W. Harris. In Europe she was a favorite with vaudeville audiences.

Mining Engineers Meet
New Haven, Conn., Feb. 23.—The American Institute of Mining Engineers, the society which comprises the membership most of the mining and geological experts of the United States, will begin its meeting in this field hall this evening. The opening topic of the convention will be the Conservation of Natural Resources. A paper on this subject will be read by Dr. James Douglas of New York and Joseph A. Holmes, chief of the technology branch of the United States geologic survey, who is a member of the national conservation commission in its relation to natural resources.

THE HOUSEWIFE
Meat Fowl on Toast.
There are few things so simple as to make a good dinner. The housewife who is not a good cook, but who is a good housewife, will find that the best way to make a good dinner is to make it simple. The best way to make a good dinner is to make it simple. The best way to make a good dinner is to make it simple.

Repairing Window Shades.

The roller should then be put back on the roller with the worn edge at the top. The roller should be neatly hemmed and fitted up with a stick. There are many windows in every home where the curtains are never pulled all the way down to the bottom and the worn part in this case hardly ever shows.

Correct Method of Darning.
Many people leave a small loop of the thread at each end when darning a sock to allow for the shrinking of the sock when the stocking is washed. Run the darning cotton or half an inch beyond the hole on each side, cover the hole with threads and run closely together and not too tight over the darning ball. Run these threads in the regular darning style. Now run the needle around the darn with the darning cotton, and the stocking will draw and tear about the mend.

Mulled Buttermilk.
A quart of buttermilk, one round tablespoonful of flour, two rounded spoonfuls of granulated sugar, the buttermilk into an enameled pan and put on the range to boil. Break an egg into a bowl and add the flour, stirring until light and foamy, add the buttermilk, then the sugar, stirring until thick, stir rapidly to prevent curdling. Boil up once, remove from fire and serve hot or cold, as preferred.

Rubber Shod Rocking Chair.
Western inventor has devised a rubber shoe or tread, which may be applied to the rockers of a chair, to render the motion of the chair smooth and noiseless and prevent creeping and damage to the floor and walls.

NOISELESS ROCKERS.
A new apartment or to the furniture which the rocker may come in. The shoes may be applied to rockers irrespective of their width and each shoe is formed with a super at the rear end, which during backward movement of chair will engage the floor and prevent overturning. — Scientific American.

The Sewing Machine Needle.
Be sure that your sewing machine is not blunt if you want to trouble in the start. Especially stitching silks it is necessary to pay particular notice that the needle is sharp, and it is better to change with a new one and take care if you don't want to ruin a new piece of fabric. It is just as well for the needle to be rusty, and experienced seamstress will tell you to economize in needles.

Frogs' Legs Fried.
Green marsh frogs furnish the best of food, as they are more tender and less of the strong, muddy taste. They are generally liked fried. Cut the feet and truss them by the stump along the skin of the other leg. Put them, with salt, in a steamer or in a stew pan, and then drain and roll in flour, beaten egg and in fine bread crumbs. Fry to a light brown in hot oil. Serve with fried parsley.

Sweeten the Sickroom.
Keep a sickroom sweet and fresh with a small dish with boiling water and a few drops of oil of eucalyptus. Let this stand in the room half an hour. Doing this about daily will be found refreshing to the sick one and at the same time will remove all unpleasant odors.

Cough Medicine.
Four tablespoonfuls of flaxseed oil, a quart of water, strain and add a few drops of rock candy, half a pound of more of brown sugar and a few drops of lemon juice. Boil again, and drink freely. If this remedy is given when the cough first appears it will afford immediate relief.

FOR THE CHILDREN
Why We Need Blankets.
The blankets that we sleep under at night are thicker and heavier and warmer than the clothing we wear during the day. They must be so to insure our comfort. Why?
If we lie down on a couch to take a nap in our day clothing we are almost sure to take cold unless we add some sort of covering. Why? There are among the thousands and one "common things" that everybody knows without stopping to think about the reason, but there is a reason for everything, and we ought to find it out.
In this case the reason may be found in the circulation of the blood. The warmth of the body depends on the circulation being vigorous, and when we are lying down the heart's action is much quieter than when we are sitting up or moving, the beats being about ten less a minute.
If the beats are ten less each minute they are 400 less in one hour, and in eight hours, an average night's sleep, they are 4,800 less, or, in round numbers, they are 5,000 less. As the heart sends out six ounces of blood at each beat, it sends out or lifts about 30,000 ounces less during eight hours' sleep than it lifts during the same time when we are up. That makes quite a difference in the circulation and therefore in the amount of heat produced in the body. So we must have heavier clothing when we sleep.

American History Game.
Here is a game in which all the members of the family may take part. It is hardly fair that boys and girls should contend with grown people in games of an ordinary kind, but in this one the chances are that the boys and girls would have the advantage, for the reason that they are studying history, while the grown people stopped that long ago.

Any number of persons may play. Having seated themselves around the sitting room table or with books in the lap on which to write and appointed a timekeeper, who shall act as leader and judge, they take the letter A and write in five minutes' time all the names of men prominent in American history that they can remember, beginning with that letter.

The leader gives notice when the time is up, and the player having the largest list of names has the number 5 put to his credit. Every word that a player misspells takes one from his score, but not from his list.

The letter B is taken next, and so on as far down the alphabet as may be desired. At the end of the game the player having the highest score is declared the winner.

Skillful Hindoo Juggling.
The Hindoo jugglers and acrobats are the most skillful in the world, and we are always hearing new stories of them. One of the latest stories is about a performer who went through many wonderful feats perched on top of a single bamboo stick about fifteen feet in height. The top of the stick was tied to a girdle around his waist, and a leg rest was provided by a cushion a few feet down the pole. Perched on this slender stick, he hopped and danced around in the liveliest way, accompanied by the tapping of a drum. It would be considered a skillful feat to walk about with ease on a pair of stilts fifteen feet in height, but this Hindoo showed a marvelous power of equilibrium on a single stick. He did other things even more wonderful. For example, he balanced a light stick on his nose and a heavy one on his chin and then threw the heavy one into the air with his head and caught it on the end of the light one. While balancing the two sticks thus, end on end, he made one revolve in one direction and the other in another direction.

An Unexpected Reward.
Some people never perform an act of kindness without hoping to receive a reward. Often such people are disappointed, much after the fashion of the two boys in the following story: An old lady was counting her money and while doing so dropped a coin. It fell into a wood box full of wood and shavings. She was almost frantic at her loss, being a miserly woman. Seeing two boys playing near her home, she called to them.
"If you find my piece of money I will give you a cent."
The boys began hunting eagerly for the lost coin. At the end of an hour they gave a shout of delight, for the piece of money had been discovered. The old lady grasped her precious coin and, saying that they had earned their reward, went to a shelf, took down a bottle which had contained some perfume and gave each boy a scent of the lingering odor.

Conundrums.
When is a man hospitable and at the same time a cheat? When he takes you in.
Name that from which if the whole be taken some will remain. The word is whole some.

What four letters of the alphabet express the feelings of an envious person? I-N-Y-U (I envy you).
What is the difference between a hungry man and a glutton? One longs to eat; the other eats too long.

Nonsense Verses.
The boy stood on the burning deck
Because he was afraid.
He couldn't swim to save his neck,
And that was why he starved.

There was a little rabbit
Who had a foolish habit
Of standing on his head to speak a piece
Till his teacher said, "Now, humpty."
Such conduct isn't funny,
And really these performances must cease!" — Philadelphia Ledger.

Doctor Told This Mother That Vinol is a Fine Remedy—Mrs. Fagg Tells How Her Daughter Was Restored To Health by Vinol

"Our little daughter, six years of age, after a severe attack of the measles, which developed into pneumonia, was left pitifully thin, weak and emaciated. She had no appetite, and her stomach was so weak it could not retain food. She lay in this condition for weeks, nothing the doctor prescribed did a bit of good, and we were beginning to think she would never recover.
"At this time we commenced to give her Vinol, and the effect was marvelous. The doctor was amazed at her progress, and when we told him we were giving her Vinol, he replied, 'It is a fine remedy, keep it up.' We did so and she recovered her health and strength months before the doctor said she would."—Mrs. J. W. Fagg, Portland, Me.

Vinol is a real cod liver preparation, containing in a highly concentrated form, all of the body building, strength-creating and curative elements of cod liver oil and tonic iron added. It is delicious to take and children love it.

Every mother who has a weak, delicate or ailing child, should try Vinol on our offer to return her money if it fails to give satisfaction. Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

HE HATED LONG PRAYERS.
And Well He Might After His Agonizing Experience.

"It happened," said the colonel, "that there were two colored preachers inhabiting cells in the penitentiary at Frankfort at the same time. If I remember aright, both were sentenced for polygamy, but old Sam was a Methodist parson, while old Jake was of the Baptist faith. It seems that Sam had done something to greatly offend the warden, and the punishment decided on was an old fashioned lashing. Some weeks after the affair came off the Rev. Sam, whom I had known from boyhood, was telling me about it.
"I didn't mind de whippin' so much, Mars Jack, if it hadn't been for de way old Jake acted. You see, de warden he said to me: 'Sam, I's gwine to whip you and 'low de whippin' will do you a whole heap uv good. I's gwine to let old Jake pray for you, and de blows will continue to fall on your black hide while Jake's prair' is a-go'n' on. When he comes to a final stop den de punishment will likewise end.'
"Land sakes, Mars Jack, I knowed it was all up wid me den, for dat ignorant old nigger never did know when it was time to get up off'n his knees! De fac' dat a po' human hein' was in distress wasn't gwine to make a bit uv difference wid him. Well, sir, it was jes' like I suspected it'd be. Dey brought me out, and old Jake, de old villun, started in, and as fast as he prayed de warden come down on me wid a whip dat cut like a knife. I never did want to hear a prair' come to an end so bad in my life, but it weren't any use. Every time I thought he was mos' through old Jake took a fresh hold, and down come de licks harder'n ever. Shorly it seemed to me like he prayed a month, and Mars Jack, I wants to tell you right now dat I am sot against long prair's for de rest uv my life!" — Washington Post.

A Bad Change.
While holding a term of court at Augusta once Judge Walton sentenced a man to seven years in prison for a grave crime. The respondent's counsel asked for a mitigation of the sentence on the ground that the prisoner's health was very poor. "Your honor," said he, "I am satisfied that my client cannot live out half that term, and I beg of you to change the sentence." "Well, under these circumstances," said the judge, "I will change the sentence. I will make it for life instead of seven years." The respondent chose to abide by the original sentence, which the judge permitted him to elect.—Argonaut.

Fine Old Spanish Emeralds.
"Fine old Spanish emeralds" is a phrase which means something quite different from what it seems to imply. There never was an emerald mined in Spain, but after the conquest of Peru the conquerors brought home great quantities of loot, of which emeralds formed an important part. In this way the finest emeralds came into possession of the old Spanish families, and as very few had been seen in Europe previous to that time all the best stones soon became classed as fine old Spanish emeralds. Today the expression still applies to the best emeralds of any source.

ROTTEN COTTON GLOVES.
The Origin of a One Time Popular Slang Phrase.

The origin of "rotten cotton gloves," a phrase which for some years belonged to the slang of England and America, is worth relating. At a time when John le Hay was playing at the Prince of Wales he was "commanded" to give his ventriloquist performance at a birthday entertainment at Sandringham.

His two figures, the usual squeaky old lady and the usual rude old man, had been newly dressed for the occasion, but their clothes might not suffer too keenly by comparison with the rich surroundings. But when Mr. le Hay had placed them in position and was about to begin his "show" he found to his disgust that his customer had forgotten to change the old man's dirty cotton gloves for a pair of new kids.

The tone of shabbiness this gave to the male figure was too conspicuous to be ignored by poor Mr. le Hay, and in an eternal half minute his quick wit found a way out of the trouble for him.

"A nice thing," remarked the male doll, looking around at the royal audience with alarm, "bringing me to a swell house like this in these terrible gloves!"

This caused so much amusement that the ventriloquist decided to make more of the "whence," and the badly behaved old gentleman's incessant grumble throughout the entertainment, "rotten cotton gloves," proved one of the chief successes of the evening.

The "line" was in all Mr. le Hay's subsequent performances in America as well as in England, and if, say, a man had had a bad deal in Wall street or in Throgmorton avenue it was the usual thing to say that he had a "rotten cotton deal."—London M. A. P.

The appointment of Hon. John D. McNeel as private secretary to Governor Comer is a pleasure to his many friends in Clanton, where a few years ago he resided, and was principal of the high school.

ALREADY candidates for the State campaign next year are looming up.

Hon. Reuben F. Kolb, the "Genial" Reuben, it is claimed, will again become a candidate for Commissioner of Agriculture, an office he has twice filled with commendable efficiency.

Frank N. Julian, Secretary of State, is mentioned as a probable candidate for the Railroad Commission, and an excellent member he would surely make.

Washington is gay with the throngs assembled for the inauguration of William H. Taft as President. Pennsylvania avenue is as brightly lighted as the "Great White Way," and the happy throng which laughed its way along it for hours, reveling in the brightness and gaiety, proclaimed the approach of the day when a new President of the United States would rule over the people of this country. From the capitol to the white house the avenue was festooned with arches of light which gave it the appearance of a vast hall a mile and a quarter in length and about 125 feet in width.

Accommodations for fully 50,000 people have been provided upon the stands erected from a point just above the white house along Pennsylvania avenue to the capitol. Every precaution has been taken to make the stands secure and provide for the comfort of those who occupy them.

For the convenience of the thousands of sight-seers the various places of historic interest in and about the city have been marked by suitable tablets.

The weather promises to be favorable and everything looks well for the inauguration.

The matter of gathering statistics from the manufacturers of cotton in the United States, first brought to the attention of Congress by Representative Heflin of Alabama, is now up to the President. The joint resolution combining views of Representative Heflin and Representative Lever of South Carolina, as passed by the House, has now passed the Senate, and as soon as the President signs it, will be the law.

Mr. Heflin, speaking of the resolution, says: "This law puts the producer on the same footing with manufacturers and will enable him to conduct his business intelligently."

Preparations are being quietly, yet carefully made, for the state Sunday school convention to meet in Montgomery Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 27, 28 and 29.

The plans are being made for fifteen hundred delegates; among these will be the leaders of Sunday school thought and activity from probably every county in the State. It will be practically impossible to attend the convention and not get fired up with Sunday school information, inspiration and enthusiasm.

JAPANESE NEWSPAPERS

Copies Received by Navy Recruiting Office Showing Fleet's Visit

The recent satisfactory settlement of the Japanese-California questions will perhaps lead interest in the following clippings from special editions of Japanese newspapers published in honor of the recent visit to Japanese waters of our battleship fleet.

Practically every Japanese newspaper published an extra, special edition, filled from first to last with expressions of good will and esteem, not only for our sailors but also for the United States. The special guides for our sailors, the special entertainments in their honor, the spontaneous cheering whenever a body of our bluejackets appeared—all these would certainly seem to indicate that a deep-rooted feeling of respect and admiration is held by Japan for the United States.

The "Japan Advertiser," published in Yokohama, published a daily fleet supplement during the fleet's stay.

Under the heading "All Japan greets the Squadron," this paper gives the words of welcome from Japan's greatest men to the naval visitors, sincerity being their inspiration. Governors of provinces, members of the house of peers, mayors of cities—all join in the chorus of welcome.

Prince Ito, Japan's greatest statesman, now practically ruler of Korea, says: "The whole people of Japan unite in extending their warmest welcome to their guests upon the arrival of their ships in our harbor. The visit of these good ships and men to our empire is regarded as an additional token of the unbroken friendship existing between the two nations since the arrival of Admiral Perry."

Articles giving in detail the program for the public and private entertainments of officers and enlisted men, guides to the interesting parts of the city and surrounding country, articles on Jujitsu, the Japanese theatre, etc.—everything in fact that could go to make a valuable and interesting guide to Japan and keepsake of the visit, is added to the full to show that the newspapers as well as the "keys of the cities" were delivered to our fleet to be used to the fullest extent during its visit to Japan.

MADE TRIP AROUND THE HORN WITH BATTLESHIP FLEET

At 4 p. m., December 29, the fleet got under way, passed through the Dragon's Mouth and left the island stern. New Year's Day found us 500 miles east of the Orinoco river. On the evening of the 4th while the band was resting after rendering a popular air, a commotion was heard in the region of the hawse pipes, and amid a blare of trumpets, a strange green creature came over the bow as if from the deep. In a deep sepulchral voice he called, what ship is that? and the answer came, the U. S. S. Alabama. He then responded, I come from his majesty, Neptuneus Rex, heaven to. I desire a word with you. He was then invited on the forward bridge for an interview with the captain. As he stepped into the light there was revealed the form of a man, rather aged in appearance, and although his hair, which hung down over his shoulder, was jet black, his beard was silvery gray, reaching below his belt, which held a wrapper of greenish color and rubberish composition about his gown. On his head stood a tall conical cap of the same material. His feet, wonders of imagination, were of great size, having three toes each, which were webbed together.

In a loud voice he informed us he had a summons for each and every one from his royal master. These were distributed among the crew, and the substance of the summons was, Greeting—Being a landlubber and daring to enter our Aquauas and Equinoxial regions without due and submissive ceremony, you are hereby ordered and directed to appear in person before my most august presence in Lat. 00 degrees 00 minutes, Long. 37 degrees west, on Jan. 5, 1908, to explain your most contumacious conduct and to accept most heartily and with good grace the pains and penalties of the awful tortures that will be inflicted upon you to the end that you may become an honored Shellback—Neptuneus Rex. After some more words of wisdom this interesting stranger departed as he came, in a blare of trumpets. The following day, which broke forth in sunshine, had many interesting things in store. True to his word, sent by his trusty messenger, Neptuneus Rex came on board at 1:30 p. m., bringing with him his royal staff, his wife and child, Dr. Dippy and his assistant, Judge Prudence; his astronomer, secretary, two barbers, a squad of policemen and the bearers of his royal carriage.

The carriage was awaiting them on the foredeck and in this his serene majesty was carried about the ship, followed by his royal procession and headed by the band, which played Hail the King and Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean. In their quaint submarine costumes and long flowing yellow hair, they presented a very strange spectacle. Dr. Dippy, in his high plug hat, the judge in his serious demeanor, and the barbers with blood spattered over them from head to foot, made many shudder at the thoughts of the possibilities. A large canvas awning was triced up on the lee side of the forward turret in a manner that it would hold considerable water. In front of this a rude platform was hurriedly built, on the rear of which was set a chair, which tilted over backward into the tank, which was being rapidly filled with salt water. The serene monarch and his staff now repaired to the top of the turret, where the secretary called out the names of men, after whom the policemen were sent. These most unfortunate landlubbers were thrust upon the platform, where the judge read out their punishments.

Most of them were given the rule, which consisted of taking a pill of putty, laundry soap and cayenne pepper, a preventive of harm from monsters of the deep and a sure grower of the shellback, so much needed by the inhabitants of the deep. Then his nose was pinched with a pair of pliers and his back sounded with a wooden mallet. After this they were placed in the chair and lathered by one barber with a very black liquid composition and shaved by the other with a wooden razor of the most terrible size and dullness. At the close of this act a tripper was released, tilting the chair backwards and precipitating its occupants into the tank, where a dozen brawny aquatics gave him a thorough soaking. After this the poor landlubber, now an honored shellback, was allowed to depart in peace. At 4 p. m. there were about 22 officers and 600 enlisted men who had been initiated into the traditional brotherhood of the deep. To these Father Neptuneus issued a magnificent certificate, declaring them to have been properly introduced and presented. Attached to these were the signatures of Neptuneus Rex and Davy Jones, also the ship's seal.

On the morning of the 7th the Calcutta, a supply ship sighted what appeared to be several men on a raft about 10 miles off, and, going over to investigate, found a party of Indians on a fishing excursion, some 60 miles off the coast. All went well, and the rising of the sun on the 12th revealed Cape Frio, which was passed at 3:30 a. m., and the harbor of Rio de Janeiro was reached at 12:30 p. m. The fleet was met by the Brazilian cruisers Barrosa, Tamayo and Tupy, which escorted us to the anchorage. The harbor, a beautiful arena, with a mountain amphitheatre, lay before us, fortifications on every hand and Brazilian warships at anchor about them. Circling the water and built beneath the shadow of Mt. Corcovado are the domes and towers of the city. Along the water front and circling the harbor is the botanical gardens, said to be the finest in the world. Salutes were exchanged between the forts and the German cruiser, Bremer, anchored in the offing. The stay was very pleasant, large parties going ashore daily to visit the various points of interest and the many attractions.

JONAS WARNER of Tannerytown, being an enterprising Yankee boy, cast about for some way to increase his cash capital, which amounted to $2. For this sum he bought from old Mr. Higgins the exclusive privilege of gathering nuts on the southwest side of Sixpence hill. This transaction occurred about the middle of October.

Next morning Jonas was on the road at sunrise with a bundle of grain sacks, gun, sledge hammer and tin lard pail, containing his noonday meal. An unusually severe frost the night before had burst the chestnut burs, and the trees rained a spattering fusillade upon the dead leaves.

"I'll hide my nuts in the b'ar's den," thought Jonas as he sat at the roots of a gnarled oak eating the piece of pie that had been put into his pail first that it might be eaten last. "I'll hide 'em in the b'ar's den, and when I get 'em all picked I can come after 'em with the old express wagon."

So when he ceased work that afternoon he shouldered his spoils and toiled up the steep hillside to the b'ar's den.

The b'ar's den is a cave situated on the southwest slope of Sixpence hill. Here the ledge crops out in many places, leaving sharp acclivities of gray and moss grown rock. The largest of these ledges stands out like a gigantic cut into the heart of the hill. A gnarled grapevine clings tenaciously to the corpse of a strangled moose-wood near the verge and lowers itself in angular contortions far down along the face of the rock.

Under the ledge is the main entrance of the cave, shrouded by moss, birches, blackberry briars and an overhanging mass of rock. This opening is dark and uninviting as the shaft of a deserted mine.

The den itself is about twelve feet wide and twelve feet deep, but it is not high enough to allow a man to stand upright. Back of this recess is a passage large enough for a human being to squeeze through. If one did so he would find himself in a very narrow fissure, which soon becomes so high that its roof is invisible, even to one carrying a lighted torch or lantern.

This fissure turns around a corner and then becomes so narrow that its exploration is impracticable, except to raccoons or lesser creatures.

What lies beyond is not known. There is an opening at the top of the cave, and tradition says that this opening was the favorite entrance of the bear which gave the place its title.

Jonas Warner deposited his nuts as far back in the cave as he could crawl. He thought he had more than enough nuts to make up the sum he had invested in certain furs that Abijah Williams claimed. Abijah and Jonas were about the same age and had been great friends, but during the last six months they had had nothing to do with each other.

Their quarrel had been the result of Jonas' trading propensities. One day during the previous spring he had

A SMILE STOLE OVER THE FACE OF ABIJAH. He bought a package of furs from a French Canadian woodchopper at a great bargain. The Canadian left town quickly without explaining that he had found the furs on the public highway. They had been dropped there from the wagon in which Abijah Williams had been carrying them to sell in the village.

Abijah, who had trapped them during the preceding winter, took his loss much to heart. When he learned what had become of his missing property he sought redress of Jonas.

Jonas, however, had bought the furs honestly and on the French Canadian's assurance that he himself had trapped them. Therefore Jonas refused to give up the package unless Abijah would share the loss. As Abijah would not consent, they parted angrily. Jonas kept the skins, and Abijah threatened to deprive them. Meantime the police were being called by moths in the back room of the Warner homestead.

Thus the matter stood when Abijah, leaving squirrels on Sixpence hill, discovered Jonas' bag among the trees. With the police of a horn blower Abijah watched his former claimant as he hurried where Jonas deposited his booty.

Then a smile of satisfaction stole over the freckled face of Abijah Williams. He had determined to appropriate the nuts on account of his lost furs.

Next night he left the house as if to go coon hunting. It happened that Hiram Acton, Uncle Hosea Swale and Joe Chute called out the same evening to hunt coons on Sixpence hill. Chute was a French Canadian. They had a lantern, a gun and two dogs. By 9 o'clock they had started a coon.

Suddenly the barking of one of their hounds seemed high above them. It rang out full and musical. When the dog ceased the echoes went calling to and fro among the ledges and faintly falling away till silence again ruled the night. The three coon hunters stopped running and began to talk.

"Fellers," said Hiram, wiping the perspiration from his brow with the back of his hand, "we've lost him."

"What makes you think so?" panted Uncle Hosea.

"Think so? Why, I'm tellin' on ye I know it. The ragin' beast o' prey has took sanctuary in the b'ar's den. Ye might jest as well try to catch a pond shiner in a steel trap as expect to find a coon that gets into the b'ar's den."

"I told ye, didn't I," snarled Uncle Hosea, "twasn't no use in comin' off here arter coons? They allers manage to git into that pesky hole. Let's go hum."

"Waal, I ain't goin' back now," said Chute resolutely. "I got my mout' mad up for dat coon, 'n' I tell my woman I fetch one coon home to him. My woman—she's de bes' cook!"

"She won't cook no coon that ain't ketchin', I guess," said Acton.

"I told ye," exclaimed Chute, "up in Canaday I smoke out coons in place lak dat. Take some dead leaf 'n' strike a match, 'n' dat coon she come out pooty mighty quick, ya-as!"

"Chute, ye might jest as well try to drive a coon out o' Hoosac tunnel by lightnin' a match at one end on't," said Acton.

But Uncle Hosea Swale seemed to think the plan worth trying, and presently Chute was sent to light a fire at the upper opening, while the others stayed at the nearer entrance with the dogs. Chute was instructed to smother the fire with leaves and brush, so that its draft would be downward and through the cave and out of the lower entrance.

His companions heard the crackling of the brush as Chute went through it. Then all was silent save the moaning of wind in the treetops overhead. The solemnity of the night became almost oppressive.

"It's kinder fun'ral-like here, ain't it, Acton?" said Uncle Hosea in a low tone.

"Kinder, I wisht that Frenchman'd hurry up."

"I don't s'pose," Uncle Hosea went on, "that anybody ever explored this here cave?"

"What'd anybody want to explore it for?"

"Waal, curiosity, maybe. Ye remember ole Sam Ma'sh, don't ye?"

"Him that bruk his leg loggin' for Henry Brasquet? He said he heard it crack in three places. He was so scared that he insisted on bein' brought home on an ox sled. When they got him halfway home he jumped off'n the sled an' went back after his dinner pail. Yea, I remember ole Sam Ma'sh."

"Waal, he was a curli's sort of a critter. He'd tell the most sing'lar stories. He uster tell sometimes 'bout explorin' this here b'ar's den. He skart himself so tellin' it one night over to Bennett's huckin' that he didn't darsie to go hum alone."

"What did he see in there?" asked Acton, lighting his pipe and leaning back against a bowlder.

At this point Chute came back to report that the smudge was burning finely. He sat down, and Uncle Hosea went on with his story:

"Waal, nigh's I kin rec'lect it, ole Ma'sh said he got here 'n' crawled in with a knife in his teeth, leavin' his gun outside. He follered a kinder circootus crack for nigh forty feet 'n' then come to a place so small 't he couldn't git through it. So he held his lantern front of him 'n' looked in."

"'N', b' golly, he see a big chamber like holler'd out'n the stum, 'n' in the middle on't, on the floor, sat a human skull grimaln' at him with a shin bone between the teeth."

"Ole Ma'sh said the skull kinder luffed and most scared the life out of him, and he didn't know how quick he come away."

Hiram laughed nervously. Chute turned up the wick of the lantern without laughing at all. The three huddled together before the great black hole and talked fearfully of spooks and apparitions.

Their reminiscences were of old tales handed down in New England households from ancestors who lived in a wilderness peopled with a thousand terrors. No one but Chute owned to a belief in evil spirits, but the Canadian's superstition was contagious.

Half an hour after Uncle Hosea's story of "Sam Ma'sh" the three men were in such a quivering condition that a weird sound would have been enough to send them flying through the woods.

All this time the b'ar's den had another occupant besides the raccoon. Abijah Williams was there, filling his sacks with Jonas Warner's chestnuts. It was impossible for those outside to see his lantern light. And as stillness reigned inside the cave Abijah was unaware of the proximity of the coon hunters.

After he had filled his bags the stillness of the place began to affect him. He sat there questioning whether he was engaged in a brilliant act of retaliation or in a mean theft. For the first time since the trouble began about the pelt he reviewed the affair without prejudice. At last he resolved to go to Jonas in the morning and talk the whole thing over amicably.

He cupped the bags, replaced the nuts as he had found them and was about to leave the place when a volume of suffocating smoke suddenly issued from the interior of the cavern. He was astonished. Had the b'ar's den turned out to be a volcano? Was an earthquake shock about to crash him between those stupendous rocks? Abijah fled for his life.

As he crawled on his hands and knees toward the fissure to the outer part of the den he heard a scratching noise behind him. It was the raccoon, which was being driven toward the outer air by Chute's smudge.

The three hunters outside had just listened to a wild tale from Chute when the acute ears of Hiram detected a sound inside the b'ar's den.

"It's the coon!" cried he. "See! The smoke's comin' through! Let the dogs go!"

"What ails the dogs? They act so scared. I reckon Chute's story must 'a' frightened 'em," said Uncle Hosea.

"Le's git out dis!" came from the awed Chute. "Wen dogs is skard I don't want!"

"Look thar!" burst from the ashen lips of Hiram Acton. His face was of the color of birch bark as he pointed to the hole leading into the edge from the b'ar's den.

The three men stood gazing with dropped jaws, burning eyes and hair erect where two human hands stretched from the black hole and moved as if in dumb appeal.

Next instant the hands drew back convulsively, and a shriek so sharp, so piercing and unearthly rang from the b'ar's den that the echoes flung it back like a chorus of fiends. It was repeated as a white face, distorted by fear beyond recognition, appeared at the mouth of the passage.

The raccoon was trying to crawl over Abijah's back, and he believed that some fearful thing was upon him. The Canadian started with a yell that might have been heard a mile. He leaped five feet into the air and sped away in the darkness, crashing through the bushes.

Uncle Hosea shrieked, "Land o' the livin'!" in a shrill falsetto and flew after Chute.

Hiram Acton gave no cry, for his tongue clove to the roof of his mouth and refused to utter a sound. For a few hundred yards his track was visible by the receding light of his lantern that rose and fell like some singular kind of fireworks. Soon, however, the lantern smashed against an oak with a crash that showered the ground with shivered glass. But when Hiram stopped three miles from Sixpence hill he was still clinging to the wire ball, which was all that was left of the lantern.

Uncle Hosea was bedridden for several days. Joe Chute borrowed a team on the following Sunday and drove twenty miles to church for the first time in two years. Hiram Acton told a wonderful story of what he had seen after the flight of his two companions. According to this veracious narrative, Hiram had conversed coolly with a ghost "up'ards of nine feet high." But what the apparition had told him Hiram dared not tell.

The affair created a great stir in Tannerytown, and from that time forward Sixpence hill ceased to allure coon hunters.

Only two persons knew the facts of the case. On the day following his exploit Abijah told James Warner all about it, though he did not dwell on the fright he underwent when the coon crawled over him. The two boys kept the affair to themselves after shaking hands in renewed friendship.

As to the skins, they were found to have become entirely worthless pending the settlement of the dispute. But Jonas afterward fully compensated Abijah for his loss, as he was in duty bound to do.

GOULDING'S FERTILIZERS Will Double Your Crops

THE SEASON OF THE PROSPEROUS SOUTH.

During the past year Southern farmers have bought more improved farming machinery, more fertilizers and have given a closer study to scientific farming than ever before in the history of the south.

The point this story touches is the question of fertilizers. It is a known fact that many tons of fertilizers are bought that never return full value to the purchaser and the one reason for this is lack of forethought on the part of the farmer in buying.

Fertilizers, to be of value, must furnish the crops and land with plant food exactly suited to their needs. Most important elements are proper rotation of crops, and supplying the land with necessary humus to enable it to hold its moisture. The third is deep plowing so that the heavy rains peculiar to Southern states will not cream the soil and wash out the plant food that it contains—perhaps some of the same fertilizers that the farmer has spent his hard-earned money for.

The Goulding Fertilizer Company, of Pensacola, Fla., has just gotten out a series of very interesting advertisements which are being published broadcast on the subject of the intelligent use of fertilizers. These ads. are of great educational value and should be studied by every farmer.

The Goulding Fertilizer Company's plan of publicity is the following out of their policy of assisting the State Experiment Stations in their work of broadening the scope of Southern farmers.

For over half a century the Goulding Fertilizer Company has been making high grade fertilizers and their plant at Pensacola is devoted exclusively to manufacturing goods especially adapted to growing cotton and corn, the formulas being prepared to exactly suit the needs of Southern soils and the two great staples. Much trouble and money can be saved by using only Goulding's Fertilizers, which can be obtained from any local dealer or by writing to The Goulding Fertilizer Co., Pensacola, Fla.

This is the most dangerous time of the year to catch cold, and it is the hardest time to cure it. If you should take a cold, a few doses of Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup will set you right.

Its laxative principle cures the cold by driving it from the system by a gentle but natural action of the bowels. Children especially like Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup, as it tastes so good, nearly like maple sugar. It is sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

Dryden married Lady Elizabeth Howard, a shrew of marked ability. She complained that he showed her no attention and wished herself a book that she might enjoy more of his society. "Wish yourself an almanac, my dear. Then I could change you every year."

We may be alone in the opinion; but we hold that a pipe organ and fruit cake are two things that are greatly overestimated.—Aldrich (Critic).

His Name Was Sufficient.

San Malato, the famous Sicilian duelist, seemed to have stepped into our prosaic modern life straight from the pages of Brantome. His fame had done more than penetrate the four corners of Europe. It had reached his own home. Some misguided Sicilian bandits held up a coach one night and summoned its solitary traveler to come out. From the shadowy depths of the vehicle came two short sentences in a cold, staccato voice: "Spread out your cloaks. The mud must not spoil my boots when I descend." The cutthroats fled with the awe striking whisper of "San Malato" upon their quivering lips.—London Telegraph.

The Limit.

"What did the doctor say was the matter with you?"

"He said he didn't know."

"Well, what doctor are you going to next?"

"None. When a doctor dares to make such an admission as that, he must be about as high in his profession as he can get."—London Mail.

$500.00 More Every Year For Every Southern Farmer

Before the Southern Commercial Congress in Washington, November 1908, it was proven that the average farmer in the North Atlantic States during the last census year made $984. In the North Central $1,074. The average South Atlantic State farmer $484, and the South Central State farmer $536. Although the Southern farmer worked 155 acres (average) and the Northern only 144. The Northern farmer doubled his money by using the fertilizer that his land needed. He rotated his crops, plowed deep, helped his fertilizer to do the trick, and he made his soil fertile by using fertilizer exactly suited to its needs.

Farmers all over the state are making record yields from land formerly considered worthless by using Goulding's Fertilizers.

are compounded to suit the soil. They are tured only after careful chemical analysis of the consideration of the crops, and with due regard to the lessons taught by the experiment stations. Whatever plant food your land needs—nitrogen, Phosphoric Acid, Potash, etc.—Goulding's Fertilizers will supply in just the proportion. This is proven by breaking crops wherever Goulding's Fertilizers are used.

The executive committee of the Alabama Press Association held a meeting at Montgomery on Monday, and accepted the invitation of the hospitable people of Dothan to hold the annual convention of the Association at that place, June 16 and 17. After the convention a trip will be made to St. Andrew's Bay on the Florida coast. Dothan is a flourishing city and it is expected a most enjoyable time will be had.

The committee was entertained to an elegant luncheon by the Advertiser Company.

MRS. J. MARTIN NIX ENTERTAINS.

Mrs. Martin Nix was the hostess Thursday afternoon at a progressive domino whist party. It was one of the charming informal occasions which have been characteristic of the season. The color scheme, pink and white, was beautifully followed throughout the games and refreshments. Festoons of pink and white paper running from the chandelier to the four corners of the hall, formed the attractive decorations, where delicious punch was served throughout the afternoon. Pink and white carnations lent their delicate beauty and fragrance to the charming apartments in which the guests were seated.

The game proved most interesting, as several were fighting closely for first honors. When the signal was given that the game was over, it was found that Mrs. J. C. Jones and Mrs. H. F. Chandler stood first, losing one game each. On a draw Mrs. Jones was the lucky winner of a handsome hand-painted pitcher. Mrs. J. V. Higgins drew the consolation prize, a large bunch of pink and white carnations, tied with white ribbon. The dainty refreshments, as well as being beautiful in the delicate colors of pink and white, were thoroughly enjoyed.

The following are the happy participants of Mrs. Nix's charming hospitality: Mesdames J. C. Jones, J. V. Higgins, H. F. Chandler, W. H. Sartor, Crit Jones, W. M. Adams, W. D. Spigener, Carrie Mullins, N. S. Johnson, P. I. Hopkins, Glennie Dennis and Gamma Anderson.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 18, '05
Dear Sir—I take great pleasure in telling you how I am getting along. I am in splendid health and am having a good time. When I enlisted October 23, 1907, my weight was 150 pounds, and now is 180 pounds. I have had better health since I have been in the Navy than I ever had before, and also I have had a lot of experience with different climates and also with people in foreign countries; I have always been treated nicely everywhere I have been yet. I will just say this much to my friends: Boys, I think the Navy is the greatest place for a young fellow there is going, for he learns how to take care of himself, and really it makes a better man out of him. If he wants to marry when his time is out, why then he is fitted to be called husband by a classical young maid.

Well, I enlisted October 23d, 1907, at Birmingham, Ala., and up till now I am gladder of that day's work than any day's work I ever did. Well, I will close.

Respectfully yours,
W. C. M. RULLAND,
Seaman U. S. S. Mississippi.

MADE TRIP AROUND THE WORLD WITH BATTLESHIP FLANT.

On Jan. 22 a great review was held by President Pears, in which the Brazilian navy first passed in review, and at the President's yacht took station at the entrance of the fleet steamed out to sea, firing a 21 gun salute as each vessel passed the President. On the morning of the 24th a funeral was held on the Mailes. With flags half-mast, their engines stopped, the ships drifted quietly through the water as the body was committed to the deep. During the night of the 26th the steaming lights of four ships were observed on the horizon and the early morning light disclosed four cruisers painted black, flying the Argentine ensign. At 8 a.m., the flagship of the squadron, the San Martin, followed by the Belgrano, Buenos Ayres and Neve de Julio, passed to the right of the column and fired a salute of 21 guns, which was answered by the Connecticut. The next two days the fleet encountered a series of heavy fog banks, which kept the vessels using their steam whistles to denote their positions. On the 31st Cape Virgins, the eastern entrance to the Straits of Magellan, was sighted and the fleet was well inside the entrance by noon, where we anchored in Possession Bay, owing to a severe storm which made navigating the straits very dangerous.

The Seaman Gunner School U. S. Navy.

(BY R. K. L. SENON OF KNOXVILLE, TENNESSEE.)

Through the United States Navy is a great school where every officer and man is kept trained to the highest degree by constant drill, study and target practice of one kind or another, there are special courses of instruction through which the most efficient of the enlisted men are put to fit them for special duties and higher ratings.

Two large electrical schools are maintained in the Navy, one at New York and the other at Mare Island, California, for men who prove themselves likely and ambitious and who desire to qualify for the rating of electrician. In these schools the men are taught "the use of electricity on shipboard" from the care of bells and batteries to winding the largest armatures and operating and caring for the wireless telegraph.

A machinist's school is kept going all the year round at Norfolk navy yard to train men, who have completed one enlistment in the engine or fire room, to handle and repair the mighty engines that propel the ships and their auxiliary machinery. At several training stations the recruit (apprentice seaman) is taught, drilled and acclimated for weeks before he is sent to a sea-going ship, vered, more or less completely in handling of small arms and in seamanship, to say nothing of the tailor-made sea-going vernacular he has acquired from association with the older sailors, and with which he is prone to please and mystify the home folks when he writes home or goes on a furlough.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

The Clanton County Teachers' Institute met at Unity schoolhouse Feb. 26, at 10 o'clock with Supt. Moore in the chair. After a few songs Rev. A. L. Foshee conducted the devotional exercises.

Next was a song. B. J. Sessions gave the welcome address in a few words that assured the teachers and visitors that they were welcome to the homes and community. Prof. R. A. Ranco responded in his usual impressive way.

First subject was "Value of Thoroughness in School work." The teachers for this subject being absent, Prof. W. W. Monroe was asked to open the discussion. He took the subject and gave us many bright, thoughtful and needful points on thoroughness. Mrs. S. B. Groves filled her place on this subject the second day, with one among the most excellent papers it has ever been our pleasure to hear read.

The last subject before noon was "How to teach reading and the teacher's responsibility in teaching it." Miss Mamie Crew read a very fine paper on this subject. She showed by her work that she had given this subject considerable preparation.

The following teachers were enrolled: M. C. Crumpton, Miss Mamie Crew, J. C. Dennis, Jas. K. T. Daniel, H. L. Foshee, Miss Eva Honeycutt, Miss Inga Husby, Miss Jennie Heller, J. L. Johnson, Miss Nella Johnson, Miss Lottie Johnson, W. E. Kennedy, H. H. Mullins, John J. Mims, R. McPheters, T. B. McPheters, Geo. W. Mims, John Z. Mims, W. A. McClesse Jr., W. W. Monroe, J. W. Moore, J. M. Parrish, E. C. Popwell, Wm. E. Robinson, R. A. Ranco, Miss Allie Robbins, R. A. Smith, Wm. C. Scarbrough, Miss Ada B. Stanley, B. J. Sessions, J. L. Thomas, J. K. Thompson, Geo. R. Vansandt, R. E. Williams, Luther M. Yeargan, S. M. Pate, Willie M. Bean, Willie F. Bean, W. R. Baker, Misses Sederia Glass, Bessie Durbin, Dizzie Headley, G. R. Scott, Jos. H. Scott, G. L. Speer, W. H. Connell, Rev. N. L. Groves, Mrs. S. B. Groves, O. D. Samuels, Misses Bonnie Jenkins, Annie Cherry.

Dinner was next announced and out near the house there was a banquet fit for the gods. The community surely thought that we teachers were very hungry as there was a sufficient amount left on the table to feed twice as many.

At about one o'clock the institute met back and taken up regular order of program. The importance of celebrating the birthdays of great men, was handled with the wisdom of Solomon by Prof. J. K. Thompson.

The next subject was "The work the teacher should do outside the school room." Prof. M. C. Crumpton filled his place on the subject with a few intelligent remarks. There were brief remarks made by Miss Nella Johnson, Prof. Moore and others.

An interesting feature of the day was the bond of good fellowship existing between trustee, patron, teacher and pupil, each confident of a mutual support.

Rev. A. L. Foshee then took his subject, "Importance of co-operation of parents, teacher and pupil." He showed that without co-operation the best results could not be accomplished.

"Possibilities of the young teacher" was the last subject for the day. The teachers for this subject being present, Prof. W. A. McClesse opened the discussion with few remarks. Then came Prof. W. E. Kennedy, with his bosom vibrating with eloquence, and spoke at length showing that there were great possibilities in store for the young energetic teacher.

The institute convened at 9:30 o'clock. After several songs, Rev. Monroe Wood conducted the devotional exercises.

"The merits and demerits of our present adoption of text books" was first subject taken up. Rev. S. B. Groves took the subject; he took the books as follows: First: Arithmetic. He praises adv. for its metric system, extended mensuration, and supplementary work for advanced classes. Third: Histories. Alabama History, good on account of biographical arrangement. U. S. History superior in some points, especially in giving both North and South justice on special points. Fourth: Geographies. He says geographies are good. Their distinguished advantages being the not having so many complicated maps, and typography good. Fifth: Civil government and physiology good and modern. He said the present adoption as a whole was a distinctive advantage over last adoption.

Miss Lottie Johnson, G. L. Speer and J. L. Johnson, were appointed as committee on resolutions.

The closing subject of the institute was "Why should civil government be taught in our public schools?" Prof. R. A. Ranco presented this subject. He gave many valuable thoughts interspersed with spicy illustrations from a personal experience in teaching it. He showed that teaching the subject was important in teaching people how to vote, and enabled them to know more about how laws of our country are made, etc.

The following resolutions were read and adopted: We, your committee on resolutions, beg to submit the following report: Resolved, that we, the teachers of Clanton county institute assembled, do hereby tender our sincere thanks to the people of Unity community for their kind hospitality and many courtesies shown us during the institute. We feel that we are under many obligations to Prof. Sessions for his hearty welcome, and his kindness in providing a way for teachers to get to and from the railroad. We are convinced of the good work he is doing to promote the cause of education.

We wish to compliment Prof. Willie Culp and others for their excellent music rendered, which has added so much to the entertainment of the institute.

We wish to express our gratitude for the large attendance of teachers and for their interesting discussions upon the subjects of the program.

We wish to compliment Supt. J. W. Moore for his efforts in behalf of education, and attribute success of this institute largely to his personality and influence.

We feel that the cause of education in Clanton county has been promoted by this institute.

Respectfully submitted,
Miss LOTTIE JOHNSON

Death of Mrs. E. D. Lodge

On February 25, 1909, after having been a sufferer for several months of heart trouble, Linnie surrendered her body to the mastering disease and her spirit to the God who gave it. Sister Lodge was the wife of Mr. E. D. Lodge of Mississippi, and was brought to Alabama just a month prior to her death, where the tender hands of her aged father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. L. White, might assist in ministering to her wants. Sister Lodge has been a consistent member of the Congregational church since her girlhood days and has led a quiet social and Christian life, but God, in his own good will, saw fit after she had passed 28 summers, to beckon her away from earth and grant to her a home where there are neither pain, sickness or sorrow. When she viewed the dark vessel of death that was to anchor her soul on the other shore, her last sweet words were "God have mercy on me and bless my four little children and husband," who were standing with broken hearts at her bedside. A good woman has gone to her reward. Weep not, dear relatives and friends, for one day you will meet Linnie clad in the spotless robe of righteousness where there will be no more good byes.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it.

Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all. Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

WE FED THE STAFF.

Five Dinners For a Hungry Crowd on a Small Capital.

Years ago the late Senator E. W.
Carnack was editor of the Nashville Democrat, a paper that had a prominent life and shined out on Thursday eve.

When the staff came around on Thanksgiving afternoon Carnack met them with the announcement that the paper was dead and that they were all without jobs. This was sadder than it seems now, for the paper had not been paying salaries for some time.

"Boys," said Carnack, "it's all over.
The sheet is dead. But we shall not want for a Thanksgiving day dinner.
How much money have we?" A search of all pockets showed $4.75.

"Plenty," said Carnack. "Come with me."

They went to the best restaurant and sat down, and Carnack ordered a sumptuous dinner, with turkey and everything complete. After the dinner was over and the diners were smoking the best cigars the house had Carnack called the waiter in his grandest manner and said: "Boy, you have served us admirably. We are more than pleased. Here is a small sum to compensate you for your trouble and as a slight token of our gratification."

"Thank you, boss," grinned the waiter. "Thank you. But how about this year's check of $10.70 for that dinner you all just had?"

"Boy," exclaimed Carnack, "what is your status here? Are you a waiter or are you the financial manager of this concern?"

"Deed, boss, I'm only a waiter."

"Well, then," said Carnack, "don't trouble yourself about the financial affairs of the place. Leave that to the manager." And he stalked out, followed by the feasted staff.

But he paid when fortune smiled again.—Cleveland Leader.

First, out of man's need, sprang enterprise, alert, tireless and presently so forgetful of its origin as to push on where no need was. But at length enterprise was made conscious of its trousers and how by such force activity it was bagging these. And that was the beginning of gentility.—Puck.

more fully given to the gentiles. We have seen Peter and John in Samaria, working with Philip, and then on their way back to Jerusalem, preaching the gospel in many villages of the Samaria (viii, 25). Peter went about a good deal, in Jesus' name winning souls and building up the saints, and now we find him with the saints at Lydda. It may help some to be reminded that God calls all true believers saints. See Rom. 1, 7; 1 Cor.
1, 2 (omit the italics); Eph. 1, 1; Phil.
1, 1; Col. 1, 2, and note that the worst of sinners when they truly receive the Lord Jesus are by His blood equally washed and sanctified and justified (1 Cor. vi, 9-11; Heb. x, 10-14). The standing before God in Christ of all the redeemed is the same, for all are members of His body, a part of Himself. Down here in our daily life our walk should correspond: with our standing, but the experience of Christians is not always true Christian experience, so there is room for sanctification and growth in grace every day (John xvii, 17; 1 Pet. iii, 15).

Among the saints at Lydda was one who had been eight years in bed, sick of palsy, but the power of Christ, through Peter, gave him perfect health in a moment, and one result was that the whole town and neighborhood turned to the Lord. We trust that it was with them as with the Thomastons, who "turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God and to wait for His Son from heaven" (1 Thess. i, 9, 10). This incident and other miracles of healing by the apostles give rise to such questions as, Is the health of the body included in the atonement, and if so, why are not more believers healed in answer to prayer? It is made very plain that the great atonement of the Lord Jesus includes the body as well as the soul of every true believer, and more than that, the planet called earth on which we live, and in due time the whole earth, shall be filled with the glory of God and there will be no more curse nor sorrow nor crying nor death on the whole earth (Isa. xl, 9; Rev. xxi, 4; xx, 3). But the creation shall not have the benefit of the atonement till the coming of Christ with his saints, and the saints must wait for their redeemed bodies till the resurrection of the righteous at His coming to the air for His saints. These two events will bring to the saints and to the earth the full benefit of the indescribable sufferings of the Lord Jesus (Rom. viii, 18-23; Phil. iii, 20, 21).

But what about health now? The great thing now is to live in the love of God and the will of God, healing all suffering about methods of healing or modes of baptism and wholeheartedly seeking to hasten His kingdom by giving the gospel to every creature, that His church may be completed and that He may come again. Thus wholly occupied with Him and His affairs we can rely upon Him to include in "all these things" all the health necessary in His service to glorify Him (Matt. vi, 33). The remainder of our lesson refers to a disciple named Tabitha or Dorcas, who lived at Joppa, which was high to Lydda (verse 30). She manifested her faith by her works and by her self denying labors for others.
While we are saved wholly through the finished work of the Lord Jesus by faith alone without any works of ours, if it is a living, saving faith there will certainly be manifest in our lives the good works prepared beforehand for us to walk in (Rom. iv, 9; xii, 1, 2; Eph. ii, 8-10; Tit. ii, 8).

This disciple, full of works of faith and labors of love, because sick and died. She departed to be with Christ, which is very far better. She was absent from the body and present with the Lord. She had really gained (Phil.
i, 21, 23; 1 Cor. v, 9). It would be unscriptural to say that she had gone to her reward, for rewards are not given to the righteous at death, but at the coming of Christ, which is for the redeemed only (Rev. xxi, 12; Luke xiv, 14). She was in good health and resting from her labors in the presence of Him whom she so loved. Now, consider the conduct of these other disciples. Peter is sent for, and the weeping widows take pains to show him the coat and garments which Dorcas had made. Peter put them all off, and in answer to her prayer Dorcas comes back from the spirit world and re-enters the mortal body and is given back to her weeping friends. Well, that certainly proved, as did the healing of Aeneas, that Jesus was still alive, and the very name Jesus as when in His uprush on earth He healed the sick and raised the dead. The incident was also the means of leading many to believe in the Lord.

But consider whether these weeping disciples were thinking more of Dorcas' welfare or their own when they so desired to have her back on earth, and is not all mourning for those who are with Christ simply an indication of sorrow for ourselves? If to the believer "to die is gain," what was it to Dorcas or Lazarus to return?

The lesson committee seems to have been led to continue the studies concerning Peter for some weeks yet, reserving the conversion of Saul until we take up the story of the gospel more fully given to the gentiles. We have seen Peter and John in Samaria, working with Philip, and then on

Beat 3

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words to the citizens of Beat 3 in regard to stock law.

The law has been passed long enough for everybody to fence their pastures and take up their stock and some are moving out their fence and leaving their farms open to save time and labor, and to grow corn and cotton in the old fence corners instead of bushes and briars. This looks nice and economical. Everybody who is interested in good stock is proud to see the time come when they will only have to fence against their own stock. I am proud to see that most of the neighbors have taken up their stock but I see some cattle and piney woods rosters still going at large, yet everybody ought to take up all their stock now for spring has come and farmers are fixing their land to plant a new crop, and no one wants his stock to tramp his neighbor's fields after they have been plowed, and no one wants to have to pay his neighbor's stock to keep them out of his field. So let us fulfill the royal law, "Do unto your neighbors as you would have them do unto you," and we will have peace and harmony. Respectfully, J. M. CULP.

Alabama Normal College,
Livingston, Ala., March 11, 1909
The students of the Alabama Normal College have organized themselves into county clubs, each with a president and corresponding secretary, to write to the county papers. I am the only student from Chilton, so I will have to be both president and secretary. The object of these is first, to increase the number of students in the Alabama Normal College from each county;
second, for the members from each county to become more acquainted with each other.

This year thirty-six counties have been represented in this college, the total enrollment now being two hundred and eighty. Sumter county stands highest in number of students enrolled, Marengo next with sixteen, then Jefferson with fifteen. The enrollment up to this time has broken the record of former years. It is larger now at the end of six months than at the end of previous years, and the indications are that it will pass the three hundred mark by May 26th, when the school year ends and the summer term begins. Arrangements have been made with State Superintendent of Education for a special examination to be held in the college hall, May 20 and 21.

A few weeks ago President Taft passed through Livingston on his return from Panama. All the college students, the faculty and nearly all the town people went to the depot to see him, in spite of the rain and mud. He addressed a few words to the crowd from the platform of his car. The senior class presented him with a college pennant. We all came back feeling well paid for our muddy walk.

ROUTE 8 WILL NOT BE ESTAB- LISHED.

Clanton, March 15, 1909 Editor Banner—In regard to the proposed new Rural Route No. 8 from Clanton, I would thank you to publish the enclosed letter from the Department, addressed to Congressman, W. B. Craig, explaining why the Route will not be established. Very respectfully, FELIX O. DUDLEY, P. M.

Post Office Department, Office of the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General.
Washington, March 1, 1909
Honorable W. B. Craig, House of Representatives.

Sir:—Replying to your communication of the twenty-fifth ultimo, in regard to the establishment of proposed rural route No. 8 from Clanton, Alabama, reporting that you are in receipt of a letter from the postmaster at that place, stating that a creek which it was proposed to cross, might have imposed the inspector as requiring a bridge across it to make the route safe at all times, and advising the Department that this creek will be bridged within a short time, and asking to be informed as to the prospects for the establishment of this route, I have to state that a recent investigation of this petition disclosed that it was intended to lay out a route northwest, north and northeast of Clanton, passing the post office at Lomax on the L. & N. railroad. All of this territory is now reasonably well covered by routes from Clanton, the proposed route duplicating directly for about one-fifth of its length with these routes and crossing and paralleling them frequently. The very large majority of the patrons whom it was intended to serve are now within one mile or less of established service and scarcely any one of them is two miles from service.
It is beyond the scope of the Rural Delivery Service to afford direct mail service to all rural residents, and in view of the adverse circumstances mentioned, as well as the unbridged creek, the additional route from Clanton falls short of the requirements of the Department for the establishment of service and does not appear to be warranted by existing conditions.

Very respectfully,
P. V. DEGRAW,
4th Asst. Postmaster-General.

Editor Banner—Please allow me
a small space in your valuable paper to say a few words. The health of this community is very good,
and hope it will remain the same.
Hoping this will find every reader of the Banner enjoying life, for we know that life is not long here on this earth, and we should enjoy life the very best we can to do good and be good.

The concert at Shiloh school house was enjoyed fine by all. The school was taught by Miss Julia Parish. I will say to the children of Shiloh school that their recitations at the end of the school were sure fine, but boys and girls, do not let that stop you from studying your books. Keep your books lying close to your fireside, and when you come in from work, pick up your books and read just one lesson every time you come in the house.
It will not take but a few days to read through a small book, and by doing this, when the next school starts at your house, you will be ready to go on with some one that has done this. Try to get an education before it is too late. Boys, think of the men over our country that haven't an education, and you think of the boys that are growing up now that haven't an education.
We don't know how long we will live, but let's try to be somebody.
You know if the government stands there will have to be somebody to attend to business, and they will get large pay for this kind of work,
a lot more than we will get plowing. Just think if we make plowboys how bad we will need an education when we sell cotton, cotton seed or anything, we need an education. We do not need booklearning by itself, but we should cultivate a principle that will be suitable for all things. Learn to be honest at the beginning of your education, and then we will gain friends every day. If I am wrong about this, someone correct me.

500 APPLE AND PEACH TREES AT 5 CENTS.

I am closing out the balance of my stock of Apple and Peach Trees short on any trees—spring, summer or fall, it is a good time to buy them. Trees can safely be set out yet.

I will have a good stock of trees on hand next winter @ 13 to 50 cents. Save your trade for a home man whom you know, and at the same time save from 50 per cent to 75 per cent, difference in my prices and those of an agent.

Congress convened in special session Monday.

An extremely interesting edition was that of the Birmingham News of last Monday in celebration of its twenty-first birthday. To one who remembers the early days of The News in its humble home on First avenue, with its small force and cylinder press, the contrast with its present up-to-date building and complete modern plant is very gratifying. The News, under the management of Rufus N. Rhodes, has been a very considerable factor in the upbuilding of Birmingham, and we rejoice in its well-deserved prosperity.

Several communications are unavoidably crowded out of this week's issue, but they will appear next week.

It is nearly a year since the new regulations of the Post Office went into effect. We hope our subscribers will remember that, under these regulations, those who are in arrears more than one year cannot have the paper mailed to them. Kindly bear this in mind, pay up and we will all be happy.

In Alabama there are, according to the 1908 report, 211,000 white people studying the same verses in the Bible each Sunday in Sunday school. Back of all this there is of necessity a great organization.

BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT.

A breach of promise suit for a consideration of $1,100.00 has been instituted against Dr. J. Earl Gowen, the leading dentist of Clanton, by one of the most popular young ladies of Clanton's capital.

For some time past, friends of the couple in question, have quietly and faithfully endeavored to have the unfortunate affair settled amicably. All efforts, however, have proved unavailing. There seems to be no alternative, so a trial will be held before a special jury at the court house, on next Friday evening, March 19.

On account of the prominence of each of the principals in the suit, each development in the case is anxiously awaited by throngs of friends over the entire state. A large number of witnesses have already been summoned and able counsel has been retained by each side. It is therefore, a foregone conclusion that one of the most hotly contested legal battles will be fought in Clanton's court house, on next Friday evening, beginning at 8 o'clock.

It has been decided upon to charge an admittance fee at the door. This fund will be given to the L. A. S. of the Clanton Baptist church, to aid in erecting a pastor's home.

Admission fee, 25 cents; children under 12 years, 15 cents.

Be on hand promptly at 8 o'clock, Friday evening, March 19.

Keep Pure Bred Fowls.

It does not require any more house room to keep pure bred fowls than scrubs. It does not cost any more in the long run to feed them. It does not take any more time or labor, but the results are far in favor of standard poultry. The standard hen lays more eggs a year than mongrel hens. In dressing it will far exceed in weight, looks and quality.

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your dear old paper to say a few words in regard to our school which was taught at this place the past winter. I can bravely say that we have had the best school at this place the past winter that we have had in some time. We are very sorry that our teacher, Miss Lottie Johnson, has left us, but we hope to have her with us again this next summer to teach for us. Miss Lottie was good and kind in all of her work. She took great interest in teaching her pupils things that were not in the text books and of course we learned a great deal that was not in the text books. I am very sorry that we did not get to have our picnic at the close of the school, for Miss Lottie worked so faithful in training her pupils to entertain the patrons and friends. May God's richest blessings rest over and around her 'till we meet again. We miss her smiling face and those pupils and friends who left last Saturday for Newton. BEULA VANCE.

THE MURDER IN DRY VALLEY.

Preliminary Trial.

Seldom, if ever, has the capacity of Clanton's court house been taxed as it was last Saturday at the preliminary trial of Mrs. Hattie Pope, charged with the killing of her mother, Mrs. Margaret King. The court room was packed full, many ladies being present, who were provided with seats inside the bar, and listened with much interest to the proceedings which occupied the whole day.

W. M. Adams, county solicitor, conducted the prosecution, and J. Osmond Middleton represented the defendant.

Warren Wood, who had also been arrested, charged with being an accomplice in the crime, was soon set at liberty, there being no evidence against him.

Mrs. Pope, who protests her innocence, sat quietly throughout the proceedings, and listened attentively to the evidence. When her little eight year old son, Claud, was called as a witness for the prosecution, she showed some emotion. But the boy's evidence did not amount to much and he was quickly withdrawn.

The first witness called was G. R. Moore, a near-by neighbor of the deceased, and a member of the coroner's jury. He told of the grave that was dug near the house, that never was used for the purpose intended.

Miss Jessie Eddings, a young school girl, testified that the defendant, when told of the death of her mother, said that she knew in which room the body lay, but did not want to go and see her.

Dr. Samuel Wooley, the physician who made an examination of the body for the coroner's jury, gave evidence as to the position of the wounds, and told of a number of marks about the head, made apparently by a heavy instrument, and of the cut across the throat from ear to ear.

A heavy butcher knife was produced by Attorney Adams, supposed to have been the implement used in the crime, and found in the trunk of Mrs. Pope, together with some blood stained clothing.

Upon the application of Solicitor Adams, who stated that several important witnesses for the prosecution were yet to be examined, the case was continued until Wednesday.

The defense had no opportunity of presenting any testimony, the entire day being taken up by the prosecution.

WEDNESDAY.

On Wednesday morning the preliminary trial of Mrs. Hattie Pope was continued before Judge Reynolds, the court room again being well filled, as large a crowd as that of Saturday being present.

But two witnesses were examined, Morris Reynolds, who identified the bag of bloody clothing found in the trunk of Mrs. Pope. His testimony was to the effect that he had seen Mrs. Pope at the trunk on the same afternoon the murder was committed.

Mrs. Pope, mother of Woodson Pope, husband of the defendant, testified to the bad relations existing between mother and daughter—Mrs. King and Mrs. Pope, and said that at one time she had heard Mrs. Pope say "she wished her mother was dead and in hell or burning or rotten."

After consultation with his client, Attorney Middleton declined to offer any testimony for the defendant and Judge Reynolds committed her to jail to await the term of Circuit court in May.

Nietzsche and the Invalid.

An invalid lady who often met Nietzsche found him the gentlest, kindest and most sympathetic of men. He "implored her with tears in his eyes not to read his books." Such was his knowledge of women that he was thunderstruck to find shortly afterward that the lady at once proceeded to read them all. He was further stupefied by the discovery that, having read them, she was utterly unmoved by the philosopher's unanswerable demonstrations that feeble persons like herself had no right to live and that women were distinguished by this, that and the other objectionable attribute. It must have been a blow to him.—London News.

Tamberlik and the Birds.

A touching story is told of Tamberlik, the tenor singer. Passing through Madrid one bright spring morning, he visited the bird market and bought every bird in it. He ordered the cages to be carried into the plaza and opened. The sunny air was filled with a fluttering host, and from hundreds of tiny throats burst songs of delight. Tamberlik looked after them with tears of pleasure in his eyes, crying, "Go and be free, my brothers!"

Office Boy—Dat caller's got a funny name. Editor—Oh, he left his name. did he? Office Boy—Yeah. He said it was Immaterial.—Cleveland Leader.

Montevallo, Ala., March 13, '09. Editor Banner—Will you please allow some space in your paper, as the Age-Herald published a piece in regard to the death of Mrs. King? I was bred and born on the Eddies Eddings plantation, and am now going on fifty-five years old, and have lived here ever since except two years I spent in the west, and I want the affair published as it is in the case.

On the 4th of March, the news was spread between two and three o'clock all over the settlement that some one had murdered Mrs. King, and I was sent for to come, and I went, and on my arrival there I found a good many of my neighbors and Justice Shaw was immediately notified, as was also Mr. Riggins, and they came as quick as possible. After their arrival they quickly went to work and summoned a jury and on a close examination the decision was that Hattie Pope was guilty of the crime. And as for the grave being dug in the yard, that is a false report; the grave is two hundred yards in the woods, a little distance from the well from which the Pope family got water. I don't consider them in starving circumstances; while they were poor people, and had made a crop for Mr. George Moore and a good one.

Now, Bro. Editor, I don't propose to touch anybody's character, but I propose to state things as they are. Mrs. Pope left Mr. Pope twice and went to Birmingham, and the first time Mr. Pope went for her himself and the second time Mr. Woods went after her and she came back with him. I have this to say: that Mrs. Pope attended the Sunday school and the prayer meetings and protracted meetings and dances far and near, and would also give dances, and that is what we boys used to call all the gates. While we citizens regret the horrible crime, it could not be helped, but we want the affair published as it was.

Respectfully yours, JEFF EDDINGS.

There were a great many house tops blown off and most everybody's fence is blown down. It has stopped our corn planting for a while, at least. Mr. Dave Jones was severely wounded and also Mr. Adair's house was torn to pieces and he was severely wounded, and it is believed that he will not recover. Two negroes were badly hurt; also two girls, Misses Union Jones and Arta Belle Chandler, were badly wounded. It is believed they will recover soon.

Mrs. Granger has been very sick for some time. Miss Lizzie Chandler spent last week with her sister, Mrs. Evans, at Spurr, Ala.

Does Your Heart Beat

Yes. 100,000 times each day. Does it send out good blood or bad blood? You know, for good blood is good health; bad blood, bad health. And you know precisely what to take for bad blood—Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Doctors have endorsed it for 60 years.

One frequent cause of bad blood is a sluggish liver. This produces constipation. Pimples, eruptions are then absorbed into the blood. Keep the bowels open with Ayer's Pills.

Kissing the Book.
"Kissing the book" is a rather late development of the mere touching of the gospels with the fingers, which dates from the sixth century. It is likely that the kiss was originally intended not to increase the solemnity of the oath, but to signify reverence and affection for the book. The kiss appears to have come into fashion toward the end of the sixteenth century and would seem, from what George Fox says of it, to have been a Protestant innovation. According to him, the unreformed method was simply to hold the gospels with three fingers above the book, typifying the Trinity, and two fingers below, typifying the twofold destruction of body and soul that an oath taker invoked upon himself if he swore falsely.

Make Less Acres Pay You More Money

You must consider that, in the great variety of farm soils, one may contain almost enough nitrogen for the cotton crops—another will need more potash than phosphoric acid, another requires a greater percentage of phosphoric acid, also there's the individual plant food of the crops to consider. It is obvious that a general fertilizer will not do for all crops. If you want record yields you must get the fertilizer formula that contains the plant food your land requires are made especially for growing Cotton and Corn, and the different formulas are prepared only after most rigid soil tests, which absolutely insure every crop getting the plant food it requires in the exact proportions needed.

The largest yields of Cotton and Corn in this state have been due entirely to the use of Bigbee's high grade fertilizers and a little judgment in cultivation. Bigbee's are standard fertilizers, and judicious use of them will in a few seasons reduce work by increasing both quantity and quality of crops with a reduced acreage.

Bigbee's Fertilizers are sold by best merchants.

of the Signs He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

Clanton was all astir last Friday, the occasion being the hearing of the famous breach of promise suit of Miss Bettie Mullins, a young and popular young lady of Clanton, and Dr. J. Earl Gowan, a serious and errant flirt, the defendant.

There was a goodly crowd present on the honorable and learned judge, W. H. Sutor, looking on as an owl, announced the ready for business, and the suits, which had been doing musical stunts, subsided, and the audience listened with bated breath to the extraordinary evidence of the clerk of the court, E. B. Gowan.

He appeared to be familiar with his duty, and the same may be said of the sheriff, J. M. Morrison, although why both of them should be incessantly smiling when a serious case was being heard is hard to determine.

The jury was sworn in, laughing, they enjoyed the fun, some of the ladies and some gentlemen. A woman's rights are being recognized in Clanton.

Counsel, learned in the law, was Kanter, for the fair plaintiff, came into court loaded down with books of reference, aided by A. Curry, and Charley Reynolds for the defendant, who had assistance of W. M. Adams.

Learned counsel needed all the assistance they could get, and more the witnesses, on both sides, were innumerable, in fact they were nearly everyone in Clanton, and all enjoyed giving reliable testimony, such as is rare in any court room. But to attempt to reproduce that testimony would take all the space I have at my disposal.

The address of Counsel Reynolds was marked by the defendant was marked by the appreciation of the ludicrous, the very learned Abe Kanter plaintiff told such a tale of woe brought down the house.

Tom Woods acted as stenographer and what Tom don't know about this case he makes up in other ways.

Some of the most youthful witnesses declared they had known the defendant and plaintiff for sixty or seventy years, while the record of the false and faithless defendant was beyond belief.

The fair plaintiff thoroughly enjoyed the occasion, as did all the witnesses, and if it were possible to produce all the evidence, your reporter would fairly stand on end.

The verdict was received with applause, being in favor of the plaintiff, and notice was given that it was not paid within ten days, a fine would be imposed upon the defendant and his attorneys, amounting to absolute isolation in the streets of Clanton for ten days. An appeal, to keep the case with the popular idea, was made.

THE COLOR LINE DRAWN.

Editor Banner—Owing to the color line here, we wish to announce through your paper, for the benefit of all that we are not se-mixers, nor are we holding meetings.

When we began the meeting in a court house we left the matter a vote if the colored people would or would not be admitted, as a section of the court house was reserved for them for other purposes, and by the vote they were excluded, and we wish to say that we shall comply with this decision, and after a close of this meeting we are ready to hold a meeting for the colored people in their own meeting house, specially for them, and a mixed meeting.

CORRESPONDENCE.

EVANGELISTIC SERVICES.

For the past week we have been holding our services in the Chandler building and large crowds have been attending, and the interest has increased, and people begin to see we are preaching and teaching the "old time religion," not fighting churches, preachers or christians, but seeking to upbuild, strengthen and spiritualize. Not working in the interest of any particular church, but for the good of all. We are not "cranks" or "fanatics" on any certain doctrine or belief, but seeking to give the truth without compromise or catering to any "certain class," but reaching all alike with the gospel. We have no new church or nothing to join, but converts are advised to unite with any church they may choose, leaving that matter with them as a personal matter with them and God.

There is no "graft" connected with our work, as we do not solicit beg or take collections. Our work is maintained simply by free-will offerings; no other way. You are asked for nothing, but you have the privilege of aiding to the extent you may desire.

We desire to make it plain to the people that we are not connected with any organization or movement, while we are adherents to the Methodist church, both north and south and one of our workers is a member of the Christian church. We are all out for the good of every church.

We extend a special invitation to all christians of every name, sect and order to come and labor with us for the salvation of souls.

You may not agree with every interpretation of scripture we may give, but we can all agree that work is needed here, as well as everywhere, and let us unite to do service for God. Faithfully, W. R. QUINTON, WIFE and Co. WORKERS.

Dear Sir: I am in receipt of yours of the 8th, just received. I never heard of mother's death until yesterday. I don't believe that my sister is guilty. I can't come on account of illness and poverty struck. I can't come till fall. Won't you please make a close investigation. May be it is a game put up on Mrs. Pope's credit. Will you please try to see that some relative is at the trial? Keep me informed. Yours truly, HOMER W. KING.

Health of this community is fairly good.

I have noticed with gratification the stand taken by our county board of education in regard to the distribution of the poll tax fund.

We all realize the fact that the man who pays the poll tax is the one who should reap the benefit that is to be derived from it. I believe that I can safely say that there is not many fair minded men in Alabama, no matter of what party or race, who would sanction the idea of giving the negro an equal share of this fund which is almost entirely paid by the fathers and brothers of white school children. Now, I am not in any way prejudiced against the colored people of the state. I say give them what justly belongs to them. Give them that part of the poll tax that they pay and let them use it in instructing their young, but in the name of justice and fairness, give the white boys and girls the benefit of that part paid by the white race. Some say this deplorable state of affairs at the door of the Democratic party, others say that the Republican party is responsible for it, but however that may be, if there is a way to remedy it, it can only be done through our representatives in the State legislature and the thing for us to do is to send a man to the legislature that will make a strong fight for a change of this law.

There are other things that need to be regulated, but I shall not try to go into discussion of any other just now.

Wishing all the people of Chilton County much success and happiness, I will close.

Respectfully,

HOWARD ROPER.

BOY KIDNAPPED.

EIGHT-YEAR-BOY OF ATTORNEY WHITLA STOLEN FROM SCHOOL IN SHARON, PA.

Sharon, Pa., Mar. 19.—Ten thousand dollars' ransom is demanded for the return of William Whitla, Attorney James P. Whitla's eight-year-old son, who was spirited away from school by an unknown man, furnishing a mystery which the detectives of the country are being asked to solve. Accompanying the demand for ransom is a covert threat that the boy will be killed unless the money is produced.

Hundreds of telegrams and telephone messages have been sent to the police of various cities asking their assistance in the search for the boy and his abductors. The first fruit of those came when Chief of Police Crain, of this city, received word that a rig, in which the lad had been taken away, had been recovered at Warren, Ohio, with the child's hat on the seat of the buggy.

A stranger drove up to the Eastward school house, where young Whitla is a pupil, and told the janitor the lad was wanted at once at his father's office. When the janitor appeared with the boy, the stranger smiled and helped him up to the seat beside him. He then drove off in the direction of Mr. Whitla's office.

Later Mrs. Whitla received the following letter:

"We have your boy and will return him for $10,000. Will see your advertisement in the papers. Insert in Indianapolis News, Cleveland Press, Pittsburgh Dispatch, Youngstown Vindicator: 'A. A.—Will do as requested. J. P. W.' Dead boys are not desirable."

Coffee, hides and iron ore are on the free list; boots and shoes, leather goods, steel and iron products, lumber, wool shoddy and waste are materially reduced. Tea is taxed eight cents a pound.

An internal revenue tax on beer and whisky is not disturbed. The bill, it is estimated, will produce $200,000,000 revenue from customs.

The duty on refined sugar is reduced 5-100 of a cent a pound and on dextrin half a cent a pound. A reduction of one-half cent a pound is also made in the duty on starch. Zinc ore is assessed one cent per pound for the zinc contained. The tariff on pig iron is reduced from $4 to $2.50 per ton.

The principal increases are made in the duties on lemons, coconuts and substitutes for coffee, coal tar, dyes, gloves and coated papers and lithographic prints.

The inheritance tax provisions of the bill is similar to the New York state law. It provides a tax of 5 per cent on all inheritances over $500 that are collateral inheritances or in which strangers are the heirs.

In cases of direct inheritances the prescribed taxes are: On $10,000 to $100,000 one per cent; on $100,000 to $500,000 two per cent, and on those over $500,000, three per cent.

It is estimated that $20,000,000 annually will be derived from this tax.

TAFT URGED REVISION

EXTRA SESSION CALLED TO REVISE TARIFF LAWS, STATES PRESIDENT IN MESSAGE.

Washington, Mar. 17.—President Taft's message to congress follows: "To the Senate and House of Representatives:

"I have convened the congress in this extra session in order to enable it to give immediate consideration to the revision of the Dingley tariff act. Conditions affecting production, manufacture and business generally have so changed in the last twelve years as to require a readjustment and revision of the import duties imposed by that act. More than this, the present tariff act, with the other sources of government revenue, does not furnish income enough to pay the authorized expenditures. By July 1st next the excess of expenses over the receipts for the current fiscal year will equal $100,000,000.

"The successful party pledged revision. The country, and the business community especially, expect it.

"For these reasons I have deemed the present to be an extraordinary occasion, requiring the calling of an extra session.

"In my inaugural address I stated in a summary way the principles upon which in my judgment the revision of tariff should proceed, and indicated at least one new source of revenue that might be properly resorted to in order to avoid a future deficit. It is not necessary for us to repeat what I then said.

"I venture to suggest that the vital business interests of the country require that the attention of the congress in this session be chiefly devoted to the consideration of the new tariff bill, and that less time be given to other subjects of legislation in this session, the better for the country.

(Signed) "WM. H. TAFT."

Sheriff Catts is in receipt of a letter from Judge Pearson, stating that Judge Reynolds and County Solicitor, W. M. Adams, had called on him, requesting that he call a special term of Circuit court to try Mrs. Hattie Pope, who is in custody, charged with the killing of her mother, Mrs. King, they stating that the public good demanded that a special term be had. Sheriff Catts has notified Judge Pearson that he fails to understand what should prompt the unusual activity of the Probate Judge and the Solicitor, and that he can see no reason in the world for putting the county to this great expense.

We agree with Sheriff Catts that there is no necessity for the special term of court and the "public good" does not demand it. Why should there be such a rush to place this unfortunate woman on trial? It is only about six weeks until the regular term of the court. The testimony in the case is entirely circumstantial and it seems to us that justice, plain, simple justice demands that as much time as possible be given to ferret out the real perpetrator of the crime; that the case be tried with coolness, care and deliberation so that justice will not be lost in the heat of excitement which might attend a "special" trial. This unfortunate woman's condition is indeed pitiable, and The Banner is not in favor of rushing her to trial, but ask that she and her counsel be given time, plenty of time, that justice may be done.

An application was made on Saturday to Judge Reynolds by Mr. J. O. Middleton, attorney for Mrs. Hattie Pope, for the custody of the child of the latter, who is in jail at Clanton.

Judge Reynolds committed the child to the care of the East Lake Reformatory. In the meantime the child remains in the care of Sheriff Catts. An appeal was taken and bond fixed at $500. Messrs. E. M. Pinckard and J. H. Shepherd furnishing the bail.

HAPPY HEARTS.

BLOOD

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor. There is nothing else to live on or by. When strength is full and spirits high we are being refreshed—bone, muscle and brain, in body and mind—with continual flow of rich blood. This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take

Peplar Springs

Editor Banner—Please allow me a small space in your valuable paper to say a few words in regard to our school which closed March 18th.

We regret very much to see our school close, but can truly say, under the skillful management of Prof. J. H. Williams, it has been a grand success. We can compliment him as being an excellent teacher, who has taught us a real interesting school, and did everything possible to make the school a success. Hoping to have him with us again, I remain,

Boat Seven

A few words to those who favor stock law. We don't want any stock law in Boat seven. What will become of the poor farmers that have no land and have to rent land and have a few cattle and want to keep them? They will have to sell them and do the best they can. That doesn't give the poor man any chance at all that has no land. There are some farmers that have no land but have some cattle and would like to keep them, and how would they keep them if the stock law was here. Anybody that knows anything at all, knows that doesn't suit poor people and the poor farmer that rents land has a hard enough time. POOR ME.

Shouts.

It was a grand thing to be at the closing exercises of our school. There was not a great many out to see the sights. I will not undertake to tell all that taken place that day, but it will be long remembered by those that were present. I was as busy on my farm as anyone, but I do not regret the few hours I spent with the school that day. Oh, the great change that there is in teaching now and when I was a kid. When I went to school we had teachers that would sit by a red hot stove or a pine knot fire and when he would wake up and spit half a cupful of tobacco juice across the school room and hollow at some devilish boy that was crawling out from under a bench and tell him to get his lesson. Then he would go to the door and look at the sun and say recess. Then about two hours later he would wake up again and hol'er books that could be heard a quarter of a mile, but some of the boys would be so far from the schoolhouse that they could not hear him, and when he did come in it would take him the rest of the day to find his book. So you see the boy didn't learn anything that day. But it is not so this day and time. There has been some of the best work done at this school that has ever been done here. We want to thank Bro. Maness for what he has done for us in this school. BIG IKK.

Shouts

Sunday school is getting along very nicely here at Pleasant Grove, though I haven't been attending as I should this winter.

Our school which was taught by Rev. P. G. Maness, was out last Friday. He is a fine teacher. I hope he will get this school and be the teacher for many, many years to come.

I will say just a word about the little season of rain we have had, enough for some time I'm quite sure, but all for the best I hope. Oh, spring has come, sweet flowers will come and sit on God's foot stool and fill the earth with beauty and the air with a sweet smell. I must say something about the voice of the little birds that gives the world music. How can you say any other season is so sweet as spring. It gives more life to everything than any other season of the year. Oh, I'm afraid that this country is getting short of boys and girls. I believe that we need something more valuable and useful to cultivate our minds than marrying.

Mr. Ernest Williams has just arrived at Newton, to attend school.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating food, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

How to Cure Liver Trouble

New Blood Regular and Your Stomach Sound

There are two very different matters. One is a violent cathartic does not cure of constipation or the symptoms of regular movement. A cathartic is an emergency remedy, but not a treatment. If the bowels do not regularly there is a reason. It is not the mere clogging up, but the removal of a dose of salts or that drowsy, tired feeling, with a coated tongue, the dull head pains, the stomach, the salivary glands, the bowels and bowels and bowels. It is a time to take a mild cathartic will act on the bowels gently, cleaning and strengthening the liver and aid the stomach in digesting the food.

Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin does this. Take a few doses and see how quickly the drowsy feeling leaves, how the bowels move back, with an appetite and perfect digestion. You soon feel like your old self. It is a gentle, pleasant, and smooth, and is very pleasant to take. Wm. Block, Mich., says: "I was troubled with indigestion and liver trouble. I have used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and I now feel as strong as I ever was." Wm. Block, Mich., says: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best remedy I ever used for indigestion or constipation." R. H. Brown, Addison, Ind., writes: "I was troubled with indigestion and liver trouble. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gave me relief. All druggists sell it at $1.00 per bottle. ORIENTAL SERVANTS.

All Around Ability of the Indispensable "Boy" to India.

In three days of hard waiting about the laundry domestic, assistant wages and small returns it is nothing to recall the efficiency and subordinate service of the oriental servant.

In India the indispensable "boy" does everything—being a general name regardless of age or native dignity—receiving in remuneration the equivalent of $12 to $14 a month at the most. He buys your railroad tickets, checks your baggage, settles the claims of luggage coolies, gives your tips and shows away the hordes of beggars, telegraphs to hotels for your rooms and takes care of them when you get there, makes the bed, brings the afternoon tea, stands behind your chair at table and serves you, brings your account when you leave and wrangles for you over its inevitable extortions.

At the dark bungalows he forages for your meals and, if necessary, cooks them. He produces washmen, sewing men and all sorts of dealers in everything on demand. He makes up your bed on sleeping cars and—places your supply of ice and soda. He runs your errands, cleans your boots and hats, dries your stockings and mends your clothes.

When you walk abroad, he attends you and directs you to the bazaar where you will be robbed least, receiving his commission later from an appreciative proprietor.

For every rupee entrusted to him for general expenditure he renders an account, and though he doubtless robs you gently he does not let others do it (and it is distinctly advantageous to be robbed by one person rather than a score).

He is silent and noiseless, suits him whenever you speak to him and never enters your presence with his shoes on or his turban off.

And finally, his multifarious day ended, he wraps himself in his shawl and sleeps across your threshold.—New York Tribune.

SIMPSON'S PLUCK.

An Inventor's Worry but Successful Fight Against Great Odds.

Charles Goodyear is not the only inventor who might turn his face to the wall to the saying of the tardy repetition of his efforts. "I die happy—others can get rich."

Goodyear's efforts to introduce the use of vulcanized rubber were no more tragic than the stories of a dozen other inventors. There was a man named Simpson in Missouri who discovered that gutta serena was a nonconductor of electricity. He borrowed money of one Ames Kendall to make his application for a patent. It was rejected over and over, rich companies fighting his claim. But he had "pluck," he never weakened. It was just after the civil war that he made his last fight. He had no money—not a dollar—but he started from St. Louis for Washington about.

He would not beg, but made his way half across the continent by sawing wood, hoeing corn or doing any work that came to hand. In one place he robbed a scarecrow of a pair of pants and a hat, leaving his own more ragged garments in their place. In Pittsburgh he had to work as a truck driver till he could earn enough to repair his shoes and take him on his way. And all the time he believed stubbornly in himself and in his invention. His own words were:

"When I came over the tops of the Alleghenies I saw the sun rising, and I knelt down and thanked God for my life and asked him to let me get my patent. He promised me on the spot, and I never had a moment's doubt after that."

Arriving in Washington, he got a living as a day laborer on the stone foundation of the patent office, and from that vantage ground he fought his claim through the office and the courts and got his patent. The Western Union Telegraph company gave him $100,000 down for the privilege of using it.—Exchange.

A Religious Author's Statement.

Rev. Joseph H. Fesperman, Salisbury, N. C., who is the author of several books, writes: "For several years I was afflicted with kidney trouble and last winter I was suddenly stricken with a severe pain in my kidneys and was confined to bed eight days unable to get up without assistance. My urine contained a thick white sediment and I passed same frequently day and night. I commenced taking Foley's Kidney Remedy, and the pain gradually abated and finally ceased and my urine became normal. I cheerfully recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy." Upchurch Drug Co.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XIII.—First Quarter, For March 28, 1908.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Prov. xiii, 20-25. Memory Verses, 25, 26—Golden Text, Prov. xiii, 25—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright 1907, by American Bible Association.]

It would seem from the frequent use of this portion and its v and xviii that there are but few passages which touch the sin of drunkenness. I would respectfully suggest to the teachers that they might with profit use or bring into these favorite selections of the committee such portions as Gen. ix, 20-27; Lev. x, 1-11; Num. vi, 1-8; Judg. xiii, Jer. xxiv, Hab. ii, 1 Cor. vi, 9-20; Eph. v, 14-27, and others with their contexts. Even these eight portions would cover two years' lessons if the committee should ever have their attention called to them and feel led to adopt them. But I am finding no fault with repetition of the same passage, for I was taught at normal school, over forty years ago, the necessity of "iteration and reiteration" to impress truth upon the mind. Isa. xlviii, 12, teaches us that it must ever be "precept upon precept, line upon line." We have three times in the Scriptures the story of King Hezekiah and of the conversion of Saul and of Tarsus and how tremendous the importance of our Lord's sevenfold "He that hath an ear let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

In connection with the "woe" of our lesson, what about the six woes of Isa. v, the eight woes of Matt. xxiii and the three woes of Rev. viii, 13; ix, 12? All the woes of earth are as nothing compared with the woes of eternal torment, and as I read the woes of Rev. ix and note verses 20, 21, I learn therefrom that God is so unwilling that men should perish that He will in those two woes give men a taste of hell on earth, that they may perchance repent and escape the torment of the lost in hell. See Job xxxiii, 29, 30. The more often I read the description of the drunkard in verses 29, 30, of our lesson the more clearly I see there as the sinner's substitute Him in whom alone is salvation, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, with whom the rulers contended and against whom they babbled, whose wounds were all without cause on His part and whose eyes must have been red with weeping after the strong crying and tears of Gethsemane. He was made sin for us; in our stead He suffered, bearing our sins in His own body, and apart from His atonement there is no deliverance from the wrath to come nor from the power of sin in this life for any sinner, whether he be drunkard, profane, gambler, moral church member or any other kind of sinner.

The "look not" of verse 31 sends us to the "Look unto Me and be ye saved" of Isa. xlv, 22, and the "Behold the Lamb of God" of John i, 29. If we are to be saved from looking in a wrong direction it must be by looking steadfastly in a right direction, and that is the thought in the "looking unto" of Heb. xii, 2. It is such a steadfast beholding of one person that all else is lost sight of. As the eye effecteth the heart and the heart is prone to follow the eyes (Jam. iii, 51; Job xxxi, 7), it is easy to see how necessary it is to look in a right direction. Ps. xxvii, 4, is such a helpful word in this connection, "One thing have I desired of the Lord; that will I seek after, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord and to inquire in His temple." See also II Cor. iii, 18, "Beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, we are changed into the same image from glory to glory as by the Spirit of the Lord." Tell the poor sinner of the love of God, the love that came from heaven to Bethlehem, Nazareth, Gethsemane and Golgotha for us all that we might not perish, and if such love does not break the hardest heart nothing else will. Such love known and believed leads one to say from the heart, "Thy love is better than wine," "We will remember thy love more than wine" (Song i, 2, 4). Anything but the love of God presented to the sinner will only illustrate the truth of the last two verses of our lesson and show the utter indifference of the dead soul to whatever may come and the incorrigible nature of the carnal mind, which is enmity against God. The case may look as hopeless as the dead and corrupting body of Lazarus or the dry bones in the valley of vision or the hard heart of a blaspheming Saul of Tarsus, but see in each of these how easily God wrought.

As workers with God we must cease from our own wisdom (Prov. xiii, 6) and let Him who is the wisdom of God do it all. We know nothing and can do nothing except as the Spirit of God shall teach us and work in us. Further back in our lesson chapter (verse 20, 21) we read of the cure poverty of the drunkard and glutton and are warned against winebibbers and riotous eaters of flesh, and here again by contrast we think of the durable riches and righteousness of Him who said, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His blood ye have no life in you" (Prov. viii, 12; John vi, 53, 54). When the last hour or moment in these mortal bodies comes to those who know and are in the love of God the next step is with Christ in paradise, but to the unconverted sinner it will be as our Lord taught in Luke xvi, 26, 28.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

A runaway horse belonging to Bert Gandy started off, Monday afternoon, and the buggy coming with the verandah posts out, the Clanton Feed company used the downfall of the verandah side and the store adjoining. One was hurt, but Bass Jones, a billy goat in a box—the box smashed and Billy came out and gave a derisive "baa," and scampered off down the street.

"These are fine peaches," said I, "where did you get them?" For answer I was told "Bass Jones and I were raised and canned in Clanton, too." A home product. Looking at the label on the can I saw "Packed by R. P. Kendrick, Clanton, Ala." They were certainly as fine as a canned peach as I ever met with. I don't know how Kendrick comes out on them, the next time I see him I am going to put the question to him. I told me as if there might be money in raising and canning peaches. And I believe in patronizing home folks anyway, more especially when you get as good as you do abroad. And these peaches were really fine.

WRESTLING MATCH

Shandler Building, Friday Night, April 2.

All Clanton and vicinity is interested in the championship light-weight wrestling contest which takes place Friday night, April 2, between Sam Barson, the Southern light-weight wrestling champion, and the Russian Lion, the acknowledged light-weight wrestling champion of the world. Barson has been hard at work recently and announces that he is in perfect trim for this big battle. The local lad for years been ambitious to gain the title of light-weight champion of the world. At various times he has been near his goal, but some hard accident or other has prevented him. He has seen past champions hard fought to win their honors and he believes that he will be able to overthrow the Russian, though he states the Russian is a strong wrestler and one who understands the points of the game from A to Z.

The Russian Lion is a protégé of former heavy-weight champion of the world. The match between the heavy-weight champion, the Russian Lion, and Frank Gotch of America has already gone down as one of the greatest contests of all time and but for the work of Gotch, the Russian Lion would have been the victor. The Russian Lion probably gave him the victory by the strong man. The young Russian Lion wrestles along the lines as his famous namesake. He is aggressive and starts to fight immediately upon getting on the mat. He usually throws his opponent inside of twenty minutes. Figures that he can do the same as easily with Sam Barson.

Sam Barson is just as scientific as the Russian Lion. He has been at wrestling game even longer than the Lion and knows what tactics to pursue to overthrow the Russian. Sam believes that if he can win his own for thirty minutes, he is able to outwrestle the Russian. The fall in spite of the effort of his opponent. The result of the match will be watched with interest in many of the largest cities of the country. The course of the Russian Lion through America has been one huge triumph. He has been touring the country and winning from three to five light-weight matches in one evening. It is believed here that he can do it up in the same length of time that it usually requires. White side are on the Lion to win, local backers of Barson are not so sure at all in taking bets.

A preliminary to the big match between Sam Barson and Shorty of Birmingham, but two falls of three for a side bet. All love sport will have their opportunity at the big wrestling Friday night.

Goulding's Fertilizers Will Double Your Crops

$500.00

More Every Year For Every Southern Farmer

Before the Southern Commercial Congress in Washington, November 1908, it was proven that the average farmer in the North Atlantic States during the last census year made $984. In the North Central $1,074. The average South Atlantic State farmer $484, and the South Central State farmer $536. Although the Southern farmer worked 155 acres (average) and the Northerner only 144. The Northern farmer doubled his money by using the fertilizer that his land needed. He rotated his crops, plowed deep, helped his fertilizer to do the trick, and he made his soil fertile by using fertilizer exactly suited to its needs. Farmers all over the state are making record yields from land formerly considered worthless by using Goulding's Fertilizers.

GOULDING'S Fertilizers

are compounded to suit the soil. They are manufactured only after careful chemical analysis of the soil, consideration of the crops, and with due regard to the lessons taught by the experiment stations. Whatever plant food your land needs—Nitrogen, Phosphoric Acid, Potash, etc.—Goulding's Fertilizers will supply in just the right proportion. This is proven by record breaking crops wherever Goulding's Fertilizers are used.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Ammonia in the Laundry.

No housewife ever should be without a bottle of ammonia in her kitchen and laundry, for ammonia cleans almost everything that it touches. Spots on towels will disappear if a little ammonia is put into enough water to make the article in. They should be left in this water for an hour or two before washing them.

A cupful of ammonia should be put into the water in which the clothes are to be soaked overnight, and the clothes will be easily washed, and when dried they will be as white and clear as could be desired.

Stuffed For Fish.

An excellent stuffing for baked fish is made by soaking the crusts of dry bread in cold water; then squeeze as dry as possible. To this add the grated interior, a high seasoning of salt, pepper and sage. Chop a large onion fine and fry in a little dripping until lightly colored. Mix it with the bread crumbs. Add six tablespoons of melted beef suet, turning the mixture over and over so that the fat may be well distributed through it. Do not have the dressing wet or soggy when putting it into the fish.

Baked Bean Soup.

Put three cups of the cold beans into six cups of water and half a small onion cut in slices and two stalks of celery cut in small pieces. Cook half an hour and rub through a strainer to make a pulp. Add one and one-half cups of canned tomatoes soaked ten minutes and strained and season with salt and pepper. Add two level table-spoonfuls each of butter and four rubbed together until smooth. Cook five minutes and serve with croutons.

Keep the Kettle Clean.

Always empty the water out of the teakettle after using it and fill again with fresh water when the kettle is needed, always rinsing it out first. It is not healthy or sanitary to use water that has been standing in the kettle from one meal to another, for the water is stale from standing so long, and even if it has been boiled germs have collected in it. This also will keep a sediment from forming on the bottom of the kettle.

Attachment For Beds.

No cribs are required in households which are equipped with one of the bed frames recently invented by two Connecticut men. The gate is of metal and is composed of crossbars pivoted at their points of intersection so that the whole can be stretched out to the length of a bed or folded up in a small compass at the head or foot. In the center is a vertical bar to hold the gate against outward movement.

To Clean Wall Paper.

The best way to clean wall paper is to first brush the walls thoroughly by means of a duster tied over a long handled broom. Wipe with clean cloths until all the dust has been removed. Cut a loaf of stale bread in four pieces and with this lightly wipe the paper, beginning at the top of the wall and rubbing downward, never up or across. This cleans wall paper satisfactorily.

An Idea In Fastenings.

In buttoning little girls' dresses sew the buttons on the wrong side of the upper piece and make the buttonholes in the under piece so as to button wrong side out. In this way the catching and breaking of the little one's hair are avoided, and one cause of annoyance and ill temper is removed.

Remedy For Chills.

Those afflicted with chills may find a very good remedy in the following: Tannic acid, thirty grains; carbolic acid, thirty grains; tincture of iodine, thirty drops, and simple ointment enough to make two ounces. It should be applied night and morning.

A Clean Fire for Grilling Purposes.

Can be obtained by sprinkling over it a little powdered niter. This is used by all first class chefs and grill cooks.

SICK ALL WINTER

Suffered from Bad Stomach and Severe Cough—Doctored Without Benefit—Vermont Man was Finally Restored to Health by Vinol.

"About a year ago I began to run down in health, lost appetite and flesh and suffered from indigestion. All the winter I had a severe cough. I doctored with all my best and finally my druggist suggested that I try Vinol. I did so and soon began to feel better. My stomach grew stronger, my food no longer distressed me, my cough disappeared. I began to gain in flesh and soon felt like a new man. I did not believe that any remedy could make such a change in a person." Edw. R. Wooster, Rutland, Vt.

Vinol contains tonic iron and all of the medicinal body-building elements of cod liver oil, does not taste of the oil and is everywhere recognized as the greatest body builder and strength creator known for feeble old people, delicate children, weak run-down persons, after sickness and for chronic colds, hacking coughs and bronchitis.

Try it. If it does no good your money will be returned on demand. That's your guarantee but we know it will benefit any such case. Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

The farmers are getting along nicely with their work. Some have planted corn and are ready to plant cotton. Gardens are very sorry. Health good except a few cases of grippe.

Mr. Cherry's school was out Friday last, and we all regretted to see him leave; two girls look very sad since the last day.

We are expecting good roads in this community as we have two ladies wanting to be overseers. Success to them, hope they will work them good.

Guess log rollings are over; they have been all the go this winter. Guess there will be plenty of cotton made this year; expecting 10 cents per pound.

A few words to Blue Eyed Billy. Most all he wrote was true but I don't think any of it was any disgrace. I acknowledge to the truth, we have dances, serenades, law suits, road working, log rollings, fuses and debates, concerts and Sunday school and a good meeting once a month, and if the Billy will tell the truth about his community he will have all such things. I think we have a good community as there is anywhere. As for dances we have as good ones as can be. If he would visit our Sunday school he would say we had a good one. He has an invitation to this community as we can beat him in anything—in dancing or debating—and satisfy him that we have as good community as he has.

The smiling face of Mr. Keener Roper is sadly missed by his many friends.

Rev. F. A. Gibson filled his regular appointment at this place Sunday and preached an excellent sermon, which was enjoyed by all present.

Farmers of this place are getting along with their work as well as could be expected.

The birthday dinner given by Miss Minnie Mims Sunday was enjoyed fine by all that were present.

Miss Annis Parrish looked sad Sunday. I wonder what was the matter. Well as I have no good news to write, I will ring off.

Alcohol to Children

Ask your doctor how often he prescribes an alcoholic stimulant for children. He will probably say, "Very, very often." Children do not need stimulating. Ask him how often he prescribes a tonic for them. He will probably answer, "Very, very frequently." Then ask him what Ayer's non-alcoholic Sarsaparilla is a tonic for the blood. Follow his advice. On Friday last Mrs. Hattie Pope was removed to Montgomery, Sheriff Catts escorting her to her new abode, where she will remain until Circuit court meets in Clanton on May 10.

The removal was occasioned at the instance of Dr. Bush, State jail and prison inspector, who says that the Clanton jail is in an unsanitary condition and not fit for the occupation of women.

This is rather rough on our new jail which we had thought to be a model of perfection.

It is very necessary to again call the attention of some of our subscribers to the rules of the post office department which went into force a year ago. Under these rules subscribers who are more than one year in arrears cannot be supplied with the paper through the mails. We should be very sorry to have to drop any name from our list, but we cannot go against the rules of the post office department.

"Mr. Editor," said a patron one day, "how is it that you never call on me to pay for your paper?"

"Oh," said the man of types, "we never ask a gentleman for money."

"Indeed!" the patron replied. "How do you manage to get along when they don't pay?"

"Why," said Mr. Editor, "after a certain time we conclude he is not a gentleman, and we ask him." —London Mail.

13,408,841 bales was the cotton crop of 1908 according to the first report of the census bureau, of which Alabama was credited with 1,358,339.

The report includes 244,970 lint-ers and counts round as half bales. The final 1907 crop report was 11,335,834 running bales, equivalent to 11,375,461 five hundred pound bales with 27,592 ginneries operating.

Included in the 1908 figures are 98,085 bales, which the ginneries estimated they would turn out after the time of the March canvass. Round bales included in today's report are 242,305 for 1908 and 198,549 for 1907.

Sea Island bales included are 93,848 for 1908 and 86,895 for 1907.

WRECK AT CALERA.

An open switch at Calera last Friday night, into which No. 4 ran, caused the worst wreck which has occurred there for a number of years. The train was running at a high rate of speed when she ran into the open switch about one mile south of Calera, which it was found had been meddled with, evidently with the intention of wrecking the train. The switch light was out.

As the engine entered the siding, the tender and baggage and postal cars left their trucks and were thrown along the main line. The engineer, Duncan, put on the air brakes before his engine went over, from underneath which he afterwards crawled, unhurt. The fireman, Wes Herring, had both legs broken below the knee and his left arm below the elbow. The baggage master and postal clerk both received slight injuries, but fortunately all the passengers escaped unhurt. It was a miracle there were no lives lost.

The wrecking train was hurried from Birmingham and the track cleared in about two hours. So far the miscreants who broke the switch have not been discovered.

April 6th a Big Day in Birmingham.

Birmingham and Alabama will, on next Tuesday, April 6th, celebrate the opening of the city's new two million dollar Terminal Station, the largest and most beautiful in the South. The business men who have recently formed the Business Men's League for the purpose of boosting Birmingham, have decided to make this the occasion for a gathering of all the friends of the city.

They have not only provided appropriate exercises for the grand opening, but are going to make it worth the time of any person within miles around to take advantage of the reduced railroad rates and spend a day of pleasure and sight-seeing in the leading city of the State.

There will be a round of fun and surprises from the time the morning trains pull in until late at night. The exercises in the train shed will include speeches by prominent business men of Birmingham and a number of the leading railroad men of the country. Special arrangements are being made, a platform will be erected and the large crowd will be well accommodated.

A POISON EPISODE.

When a Famous Chemist Was Challenged in Court by a Judge.

There was a famous poisoning case in England many years ago in which the strong point of the defense was to show that the accused, who was an expert chemist, could not have used a poison which could be so easily found after it had been taken into the human system. Sir Robert Christensen, professor in Edinburgh university, a famous expert on toxicology, whose works are still standard on that subject, was put on the stand to prove this point. When he declared that a chemist would certainly use some poison which would leave no trace, the prosecuting attorney asked him if he meant to say that there were such poisons.

Sir Robert replied in the affirmative. The prosecutor asked, "Name them!" "No!" shouted the judge. "I forbid you to answer that question!"

In spite of the protests of the prosecutor the judge would not allow the expert publicly to give the name of a poison which would leave no trace, and the question remained unanswered.

Now comes the curious part of the story. During the next two years Sir Robert received more than 4,000 letters from all parts of the world asking, begging, offering to buy, the name of the untraceable poison alluded to in his testimony. Many of these he kept as curiosities, showing them to his friends as evidence of the depravity of human nature. Some of the excuses for wanting the name of the poison were very ingenious. One man was writing a novel based on a poison plot and wanted to make use of the untraceable poison idea. He did not want to give the name of the poison in his book, but just wanted to have it by him in case any scientific critic should deny the possibility of such poisons, when he could send him the name in a private letter and quote the "distinguished authority" from whom it came, etc. Several persons professed to be studying chemistry and asked for the information on the ground of professional courtesy. To all such Sir Robert would send the advice to pursue their studies and they would soon know as much about it as he did. Many offered large sums of money for the secret, usually pretending they had but still larger amounts that they could find it out in a given time and were willing to share their profits liberally with Sir Robert.

The thing which most impressed Sir Robert was the number of persons all over the world who seemed desirous of possessing the secret of an agent that would kill, but leave no trace, and the amazing falsehoods to which they would subscribe their names in order to obtain the information. It is said that whatever poison Sir Robert had in mind at the trial he never mentioned it, not even to his classes, so strongly was he impressed with the danger of letting such a thing become matter of public knowledge.

A CARD FROM MR. ADAMS.

Clanton, March 30, 1909. Editor Banner—Your editorial comment in your issue of last Thursday, March 25, on the case of the State of Alabama against Mrs. Hattie I. Pope, charged with murdering her mother, Mrs. King, might deserve, at my hands, some pointed corrections, and, but for the fact that some untoward contingency detrimental to any possible defense Mrs. Pope may have, might spring from a discussion of the matter in the public print, I would make an unqualified reply. The defendant has received and will continue to receive "plain, simple justice."

An application was filed by me, as county solicitor, to commit Claude Pope to the Alabama Industrial School, and no initial application was filed before Probate Judge Reynolds, by Mrs. Pope for the custody of the child.

The statute requires me to try all such cases as the two above in the courts and not in the public print, and I shall desist from future comment in the press on the subject, unless circumstances not controllable by me require it.

Respectfully, WM. M. ADAMS.

This terrible calamity often happens because a careless boatman ignores the river's warnings—growing ripples and faster current. Nature's warnings are kind. That dull pain or ache in the back warns you that the kidneys need attention if you would escape fatal maladies—dropsy, diabetes or Bright's disease. Take Electric Bitters at once and see backache fly and all your best feelings return. "After long suffering from weak kidneys and lame back, one $1.00 bottle cured me," writes J. R. Blacksheep, of Belk Team. Only 50c at Upchurch Drug Co.

Plancher, Ala., March 27, 1909.

Editor Banner—Here I come again asking for space in your splendid paper. It is somewhat embarrassing to write a few words on a subject and send it to a paper and then have to write again to defend your views against the comment of the editor. But it seems that I am unavoidably the victim of that sort of circumstance.

Now, I sent a letter to the Banner and the Union last week in which I commented on the poll tax question, and the editor of the Union gave evidence of such a degree of criticism that I am obliged to come again and make my position so simple and plain that even the editor of the Union, who seemed to think my intelligence was slightly below the average, can muster up sufficient intelligence to understand my position.

The thing that I regret most is that The Union gave so much evidence of surprise at my compliment (I claim to be a Democrat you know) to or my appreciation of the good work undertaken by the county board of education which is a Republican body. Now, let me say to the Union that I have always considered myself broad enough to look above the slop of political doggerel and recognize the acts of justice or patriotism of all men without any thought as to the political views of those who do them. And you seem to be surprised at there being one Democrat in old Clanton who would endeavor to be honest and true to his people, you surely don't know much about the people of old Clanton any way or you would know that there are men in both parties who recognize and appreciate the honesty and high character of men who have different political views.

You remember that I said in that other letter that we should send a man to the Legislature who would make a strong fight for a change of the present poll tax law, and in the editor's comment we found a remark in regard to the fight made by Mr. Middleton against the law.

Let me say here, with due regard to Middleton whom I admire, that we all know it impossible for him to make a strong fight against this law. We know that in every State in our great nation there is a majority that is either Democratic or Republican and in every State where the Democrats are in power the Republicans cannot legislate and in every state where the Republicans are in power the Democrats cannot legislate, so is it any wonder that with only one colleague Mr. Middleton's efforts are so fruitless? You know too that if the Legislature was Republican and Mr. Middleton was a Democrat the position would be just as bad. I tell you when the people send an honest Democrat to the Legislature from Clanton county then we can expect some results and not before.

In conclusion I want to say that I am in no way prejudiced against the honest Republicans of our county. I respect their views as much as I respect my own and I know that there are many Republicans in the county who can appreciate and respect honesty and friendship even though it comes from a Democrat, because I number among my dearest and closest friends, aye, even next to my father and brothers, many who are Republicans. Hoping that all who read this will understand me and that I will not be forced to write again, and wishing everybody much success, I will close.

Respectfully, HOWARD ROPER.

Health of our community is very good.

Our Sunday school is doing fairly well, considering so many rainy Sundays.

Prof. David Cherry's school closed Friday. We are glad we had Prof. Cherry with us for the past five months and we feel like he has done everything in his power to make the school a success. We believe he will do a good part by any community where the people will co-operate and help him.

Miss Fannie Deason is with Mrs. Mattie Drasor, where she will make her future home. We are glad to have her with us.

Some of our young people attended preaching at Adams last Sunday and report a nice time.

A Church Wedding.

By OLIVE MAUDE FEW.

Copyright, 1921, by American Press Association.

THE senior minister from Hillsboro rose to his feet. At once something in his manner held the regard of every member of that large, black coated audience. He coughed slightly behind his two extended forefingers. The attention of every minister was riveted.

"Dear brethren"—his voice was low and purring, yet it carried to the farthest alcoves—"dear brethren of this conference of the Methodist church in Canada, assembled here in this city, I find it is my painful duty to lay before you a certain matter—a certain matter regarding my junior colleague, whom it is your intention to ordain tomorrow."

The young Rev. Allan Grey, seated halfway down the aisle, straightened to his post and waited. "And, brethren," went on the inexpressible voice, "it is only the great love I bear this grand old Methodist church that compels me to make mention of this grievous thing."

"As you are all aware, a young minister during the time of his probation does not marry. And I am sorry to say that it is commonly reported at Hillsboro that my young colleague was secretly married a short time ago."

The young minister referred to was about to spring to his feet when an old clergyman sitting beside him laid a hand firmly but kindly on his shoulder. Much against his inclination he yielded to the look in the older man's face and remained sitting.

"I have expected that the young man himself would acquaint you with the fact," continued that even voice, "but since he still passes himself as a single man duty compels me to speak."

He paused, looking at the reverend gray haired president.

At last, potting his glance, that gentleman rose hastily to his feet, as though his mind had been on other things. He took his glasses from the front of his coat and polished and adjusted them carefully. "And what says the young brother from Hillsboro?" He put the question in an indulgent tone.

The young Rev. Allan Grey remained sitting, silent, his face white, his eyes bent on the seat in front of him. The audience waited, breathless. An impatient cough was strangled in the gallery.

The shrewd old benevolent face of the president crinkled into a reminiscent smile. "Well, well," he chuckled softly; then he sobered to a kindly earnestness. "Now, brethren, you have heard, and you are all aware that at our discretion we may overlook this misdemeanor and still receive the young brother into the conference. Since the years of his probation were so nearly finished I should strongly advise that we be kindly lenient with him. Brethren, what say you?"

The senior minister from Hillsboro was instantly on his feet. He held out a long arm. Again the attention of every man was riveted. "Brethren, I had hoped to be spared any further that he doesn't give her any money with which to buy her books and clothing. Of course his idea is that she earns them in some way. The young woman dreams much better than my own wife and daughter.

"And now I come to a most painful part. One of the leading members of my church, a man of high standing in the neighborhood, openly and upon all occasions speaks the praises of this young woman. And in some mysterious manner it has come to be generally understood that this man is the means of the young woman's support."

He paused. The president was about to speak when the speaker again resumed:

"My wife and my junior colleague were one day walking in the meadows bordering a grove on the outskirts of our village. They were quietly examining some wild flowering shrubs when this member of my church spoke of and this young woman came from the depths of the woods toward the clearing. They were both greatly agitated. The man came out alone and made his way toward home. The girl, after walking about for some time, left the grove by another way. My young colleague, I know, will not deny this statement. He saw it with his own eyes."

"And now, my dear brethren, you see that I have no positive knowledge. As I said before, because of the great love I bear this grand old Methodist church I have laid this matter before you just as I have heard it on my circuit. If you receive the man into this conference, you receive the woman. As he has married during the years of his probation you may at your discretion reject him. Thus, brethren, I leave it in your hands to deal with him according to your judgment." He laid down and the president arose.

The vestibule door opened and a bearded lay member came in and was seated.

The president reluctantly rose to his feet. "Brethren, you have heard what has been said concerning the junior minister from Hillsboro. The matter is open for discussion."

The bearded lay brother was on his feet. "I was sorry not to be in time to hear the business of the morning, but about our junior minister at Hillsboro I have something to say. I see by the first draft of the stationing committee that our senior minister has been promoted to another and better circuit, which I am sure he well deserves."

"Now, our young minister is also popular with us, and we wished to give him a call to come back as our senior pastor. But he is a conscientious young fellow and forbade us doing so. He said it didn't seem to be quite loyal to his senior colleague. But now since the senior's promotion I feel at liberty to let you know our wishes."

He took his seat, very obviously well pleased with what he had said.

"My dear brother," inquired the president in an even tone of voice, "are you aware that your junior minister is married?"

The delegate addressed smiled broadly. "No, sir," he said respectfully, "I was not aware of it, although I had heard something to that effect. And I may say that nothing could give me more pleasure. The young lady is certainly worthy to be even a minister's wife. I think her one of the grandest of her sex." Again he sat down, thoroughly well pleased with himself.

The president, the entire audience, turned their eyes toward the senior minister from Hillsboro.

He rose to his feet. The silence was intense. "Brethren, this lay brother is the leading member in my church of whom I spoke." He sat down. A profound sigh swept across those intent faces like the passing of a breath of summer wind.

The vestry door shut with an imperative click. A pair of white canvas shoes twinkled across the green carpeted aisle. Beside the steps leading to the platform stood a young woman in all the sweet, crisp freshness of a perfectly laundered, white summer gown. She wore a white hat and gloves to match. To the masculine eye she appeared a young woman superbly dressed, while the feminine eye would at once have known that it was not linen—it was "shrunken cotton." But to all eyes she was good to look upon.

This sudden vision paused at the foot of the steps, uncertainly for a moment, then ascended the platform and faced that ministerial congress.

"It's not true at all," she said, turning toward the president. "He isn't married—not at all. I can easily prove that, and you can't reject him when he isn't married, can you? Oh, I know what his calling means to him! I never intended to ruin his life. I didn't know. You see, I'm not the least bit good. I'm always doing mischievous, funny things and just enjoying myself. I never can be so very serious, but I do like to be good—one feels so much better. And it seemed so easy when he said he'd help me and would not let me be frivolous—and I thought I could do it—and I promised—and oh, he's so grand! He just made me go into the magistrate's to get the license. You see, that wretched law has been passed that compels the—the lady to go along to get the license. He said he just wanted to swoop down from conference and carry me off to the minister's without any botheration about the license. And somebody saw us standing before the magistrate, and they thought we were getting married. But, you see, we were not, and so you can't reject him, can you? Oh, I know what his calling means to him!" She twisted her fingers impatiently.

"And then when he was gone to conference, the minister's wife came over and talked to me, and of course I could see then how I was just spoiling his life. I'm really not religious. I only just want to be good. I told her just the same as I told him. I couldn't make religion the way they do at revival meetings—I couldn't do it that way, but she said—oh, well, that doesn't make any difference," she broke off wearily. "I wrote him a letter, saying I was gone away forever because I couldn't bear to spoil his life and that he would never see me again. Oh, he's driven away out to Hillsboro every night to find me, but he never did, because I was here in this city, and I came here. I was up there in the gallery. I wanted to see him—the last—to—well, I was up there, and I heard all that was said. And you saw for yourself he wouldn't deny the marriage, although he never admitted it. Now, did he? Because, well—I think he thought that if you rejected him that way, why, I—I—well, anyway, we're not married, and you can't reject him, can you?" She turned an impatient, pleading face toward the president.

The young Rev. Allan Grey sped down the aisle toward her. She pointed, her face toward the president, listening toward the coming of his feet, red and white chasing across her face like cloud shadows.

He sprang on to the platform and sang a protective arm about her waist. They looked into each other's eyes, and all that vast audience was forgotten.

The bearded lay member from Hillsboro stepped to the platform and raised his hand.

"Oh, you mustn't," said she, stepping forward.

He waved her back.

"It isn't necessary," said the president; "we know a good woman when

ALL THAT VAST AUDIENCE WAS FORGOTTEN.

we see her, much more so when we hear her talk."

But he waved him aside also. "Gentlemen," he said in his business tone, "I have just been told of what was said before my entrance this morning, and I want to tell you that I went into that woods that afternoon with a rope in my pocket to hang myself—God forgive me!—and this young woman was there gathering botanical specimens, although I didn't see her." He paused.

"They use a long knife in order to take the plant up, roots all intact. Well, gentlemen, that knife saved my life, for she cut the rope."

"And, gentlemen, that young woman talked to me in a way that put more manhood into me than all the sermons I ever listened to from either of our ministers and— Cheers interrupted his further speech. "Well, I guess it isn't necessary for me to say anything more," he laughed, stepping down from the platform.

Another lay member took his place. "I'm from Middleton, and I had no idea what young woman was referred to until she appeared before us. And I want to say that after school hours she coached part of the entrance class from the Middleton public school. There got to be considerable rivalry in the class, and my daughter, with quite a few others, hired this young woman to help them. And she did it well, too; not one of them failed."

Another cheer broke from the audience as the gentleman stepped down.

The president rose, polished and adjusted his glasses and gazed at the pair before him.

"Young man, produce that license." With it in his hand he faced his conference. "Brethren, shall we make them man and wife?"

"Yes!" burst forth in one ecstatic shout as they rose to their feet as one man.

The president's glasses became very dim, for he whipped them off his nose and gave them another vigorous polishing.

Then began that solemn ceremony, and when he said, "Who giveth this woman?"

"We do!" cried they like a sudden burst of triumphal song.

And they twain became one.

How to Cure Indigestion

Well Known Family Physician Gives Good Advice

"When a person cannot eat ordinary food without discomfort afterward, when he has heartburn, sick headache, gas on the stomach, water brash, belches up sour food, and this condition has continued for a week or more, it certainly is time to do something and do it quickly. That's what a popular physician recently said to the writer. 'First, thing you know you'll have dyspepsia if you don't,' said he.

The quickest and best way to regain your normal condition is to step into the drug store and buy a 50c bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It gives natural, daily movements to the bowels, and that is usually where more than half the trouble lies. Then it aids digestion, sweetens the stomach, acts on the liver and is a general system tonic.

Postmaster Ridgill, of Bruceville, Tex., had such a severe attack of dyspepsia that his stomach, liver and bowels seemed almost paralyzed, but a few doses of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin relieved him and today he is well as ever. Maude Hall, Alpena, Mich., says that one bottle cured her of a very severe case of indigestion. A. L. Esch, Chief of Police, New Philadelphia, Ohio, says: 'I find Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin the best remedy for indigestion I ever used. I would not be without it.' Rev. A. J. Fletcher, Rutherford, Tenn., is now 90, and yet it cured him of stomach trouble of 60 years' standing. Mrs. Mattie Crouch, Tiptonville, Tenn., cured her five months' old baby of indigestion with it, so you see that while it is so effective it will cure cases of long standing of dyspepsia and constipation in old people, it is perfectly safe for babies, and it is pleasant to take, and does not pain or grip.

All Grocers sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Syrup Pepsin Co., 217 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill., are glad to send a free sample to any one who has not used it and will give it a fair trial.

Editor Banner.—In the article I handed you last week, relative to our work, I made a mistake and said, "all converts are advised to unite with any church by free-will offering." I desire to say this is a mistake and should have read "all converts are advised to unite with any church they may choose."

I wish to say to all people of Clanton and vicinity our meeting will continue all the week. Service every night at 8 p.m., and each afternoon at 2:30. The attendance is increasing every night, and at every afternoon service, and we are looking for a good revival before the meeting closes. We ask you to come and labor with us. Last Sunday night the court house was filled to the limit, many people standing, and many turned away on account of no room. You are welcome.

Heart Troubles

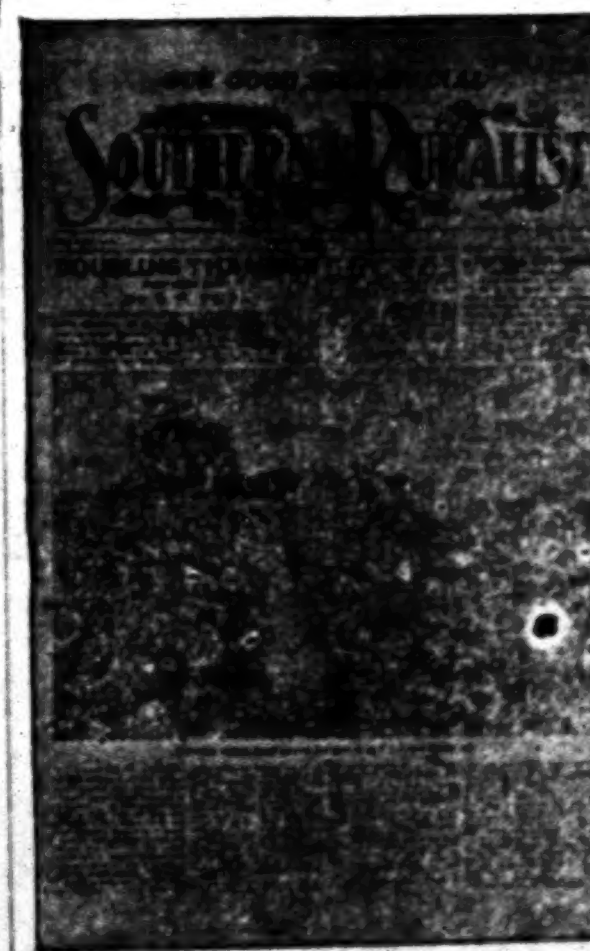

The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes, stomach or other organs. It often happens that a person is born with a weak heart. Then again disease, fevers, over-exertion, anxiety, nervousness, rheumatism, etc. weaken the heart. The result is shortness of breath, palpitation, pain in the heart or in some of the nerves of the chest or abdomen. The heart should be strengthened with a tonic and for this nothing equals Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

"I had LaGrippe last fall and, though in a mild form, I was weak, tired, feeling, and short of breath could hardly go about, and a good deal of the time sort of an asthmatic breathing, and extremely nervous. I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and now I feel so much better in every way. I am so thankful that I began taking this medicine and shall not hesitate to tell others how much good it has done for me."—J. J. NORTON, Freeville, New York.

The speaker meekly bowed his head, while his junior colleague was forcibly held down in his seat by the old gentleman beside him.

"Brother," said the president sternly, "we do not deal with rumor and innuendo. Be plain and brief."

The minister from Hillsboro sighed audibly and raised his head. "Brethren, I will endeavor to spare you as much as possible. Make One Acre Give a Two-Acre Yield

The experiment station in this state has proven that most farm lands will double their yield per acre through the use of proper fertilizers and simple, common sense farming. (Proper rotation of crops.)
 Most fertilizer failures are due to poor fertilizers and guess-work in buying. Your soil may need more nitrogen, or phosphoric acid, or more potash, and simply dumping fertilizer on it won't restore these elements. You must enrich the soil with the fertilizers teeming with the plant food that your soil needs and in the correct proportion of phosphoric acid, potash, nitrogen, etc.

BIGBEE'S High Grade Fertilizers

are compounded after rigid soil tests to meet the exact conditions of Southern farm lands. No matter what elements your soil requires there is a brand of Bigbee's High Grade Fertilizers to furnish them in the exact proportion needed. They are especially adapted to cotton, tobacco, corn, etc. Through judicious use of Bigbee's Fertilizers former barren acreage all over the state is now yielding bumper crops of the South's great staples—an eloquent testimonial to their worth.

Bigbee's High Grade Fertilizers
 are especially adapted to growing Cotton, Tobacco and Corn.

THE TRI-WEEKLY ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

together with the superb FREE OFFERS of PARIS MODES, a woman's magazine; or THE SOUTHERN RURALIST; a splendid agricultural paper; or TALKS FROM FARMERS TO FARMERS, an epitome of farm wisdom, worth its weight in gold. All for only $1.75

The Tri-Weekly Constitution Monday, Wednesday, Friday, three times a week. The newest, best, One Dollar a Year brightest, and biggest Southern Newspaper.

 Almost a Daily, yet at the price of a Weekly.
 The Weekly Constitution—once a week, with each of the above (except that The Weekly Constitution is substituted for the Tri-Weekly)—all for one year for only $1.40
 The Tri-Weekly Constitution presents at one sweeping view the whole area of events. The news of the country, state, nation, and the world is given in each complete issue. Each week the departments of Farm and Farmers, Woman's Kingdom, Great Agricultural South, Farmers' Union, Rural Free Delivery, Poultry and others of wide interest, edited by experts, appeal directly to those addressed.
 The Weekly Constitution contains all these special features and the difference between it and The Tri-Weekly is that the one is issued once a week (on Monday only) and the other three times a week—Monday, Wednesday and Friday.
 If you want the Constitution alone, without any clubbing offers, you can get the Tri-Weekly Constitution at $1 per year, or The Weekly at 50c per year, by addressing The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. One sample copy sent free on request, giving with it six of your neighbors.

THE CONSTITUTION IS THE PAPER FOR RURAL FREE DELIVERY ROUTES

A club of 40 or 50 or more will keep an R. F. D. route above the minimum average required for daily mail service. It is the great news purveyor of the whole Southland, as good in the gulf states as on the Atlantic seaboard.
 Clubbed with The Atlanta Constitution, we have the superb FREE OFFERS shown from which you may make your choice of one:
 (1) Talks From Farmers to Farmers, a symposium of Southern farm knowledge that should be in the hands of every practical farmer, young or old. The articles have all appeared in Tri-Weekly Constitution under same title and made one of the greatest features of this splendid farmers' paper. It will be mailed to you immediately upon receipt of order.
 (2) The Southern Ruralist, one of the best agricultural papers in the south. It is a semi-monthly edited by a farmer on his own farm, and is intensely practical and helpful.
 (3) Paris Modes, a woman's magazine, monthly. There are fashions in it, as the title indicates, and they are right up to date. Do not think they are all of the sylph-like, hipless, clothes-pin styles of the extreme devotees of the changeable flirt called "Fashion." They are all pretty and becoming and up to date, so that the ladies may feel well-dressed and in the style who follow them. But you get more than mere fashions. There are stories, poems, storyettes, incidents of travel, seasonal articles for entertainments, home keeping, cookery, care of the person, sanitation and hygiene, plant culture and all the rest that go to make up a monthly feast for the busy woman who reads as she works, who relaxes from one task and finds charm in the ever-varying features of woman's work that is said to be never done.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson 1—Second Quarter, For April 4, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES

Text of the Lesson, Acts 2: 1-4—Memory Verses, 12-15—Golden Text, Acts
 2: 25—Commentary Prepared by
 Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Copyright, 1909, by American Bible Association.
 This lesson really covers chapters 1 and 2 of Acts, for the whole of that portion is devoted to the record of Peter and Cornelius. It is the story of the reception of the first gentile household into this new company called the church, and Peter is the human instrument in connection with angelic ministry, a vision and a special message from the Spirit. As in the case of Philip and the eunuch, we see the special interest of heaven in a truly seeking soul. The last we heard of Philip he was at Caesarea, for that was his home seemingly (chapter viii, 40; xxi, 8), and we cannot but wonder why he was not used to help Cornelius, but it was neither he nor Paul, the special apostle to the gentiles, but Peter, whom the Lord chose for this service. As Peter was used to gather the first company of Jews, so he is used to gather the first gentile, for to him were given by our Lord the keys of the kingdom of heaven (Matt. xvi, 19). We know that the church is not the kingdom, but the present age is the "mystery of the kingdom," and the church must be gathered and this age close before the kingdom can come.
 Cornelius, the centurion, makes us think of the one who had such great faith and also the one who said at the crucifixion, "Truly this was the Son of God" (Matt. xvi, 16-17; xvii, 54). If any man could be saved by character, as we hear on all sides today, surely this man could, for consider what is said of him in verses 2, 7, 22, 30, 31, and yet Peter had to come and tell him words whereby he and his household could be saved (xi, 14). He had to tell him of the death and resurrection of Jesus of Nazareth and of forgiveness of sins through Him. If a man's own doings can save him, then there was no necessity for the sufferings of Jesus Christ as the sinners' substitute, but without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins, and there is no sacrifice but His by which sinners can be saved (Heb. ix, 22; Lev. xvii, 11; Heb. i, 3; Acts iv, 12).
 Cornelius was truly a devout man and lived up to the light he had, and to such God has respect and will somehow send them more light, even though He must needs employ angelic ministry.

One afternoon as he was fasting and praying a visitor unannounced stood before him clad in heavenly clothing and assured him that his prayer was heard and his aims remembered before God and that a man in Joppa for whom he should send would tell him what he needed to know (verses 2 to 6 and 30 to 33). Immediately he sent two of his servants and a soldier to find Peter. Notice in this connection that the Lord in heaven knows where we sojourn, who owns the house, the owner's occupation and all other details of our life, for all things are naked and open to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do. The servants being on the road, Peter needed to be prepared to receive them and return with them, for he still considered it unlawful to come unto or keep company with one of another nation (verse 23). See, then, how God prepared him. He was very hungry and would have eaten if anything had been ready, but while they made ready for him he fell into a trance. Many a housewife would be glad oftentimes if some of the hungry, complaining household would do likewise. Note carefully the vision in verses 11-16 and see, if you have anointed eyes, the church gathered from Jews and gentiles.
 We are all unclean, but the church must be gathered from such (1 Cor.
 vi, 9-11). As the sheet was let down from heaven, all must be born from above. The sheet was held in heaven.
 We are kept by the power of God and in due time shall be as a church caught up to heaven. The fine linen suggested by the sheet speaks always of righteousness—His, not ours, but ours in Him. In the seven passages where we read of "heaven opened" it is always to reveal something concerning Christ and His redeemed. While Peter considered the meaning of the vision the men from Caesarea were at the door inquiring for him, and the Spirit having said, "Behold, three men seek thee; arise, therefore, and get thee down and go with them, doubting nothing, for I have sent them" (verses 19, 20), all was clear and plain for Peter.

Having lodged the strangers overnight, on the morning Peter and six of the brethren (xi, 12), a party of ten, started for Caesarea. Cornelius had called together his kinsmen and near friends and awaited the arrival of Peter. Having received him all too reverently and told him all, he added,
 "Now, therefore, are we all here present before God to hear all things that are commanded thee of God" (verse 33). What a perfect attitude for a congregation to be in, and hear the Lord speak! If it will always call Peter began to tell of Jesus of Nazareth, His life and death and resurrection, and of peace through His blood by the forgiveness of sins, and that all the prophets had borne witness to Him, and while he was speaking the Holy Ghost fell on all who heard, and they spoke with tongues and magnified God. Then Peter baptized them and received them into the visible church.

The earliest date which any university puts forth is that which Cambridge makes that it was founded about 635. Its continuous history dates, however, from 1100. Oxford dates back to an academy mentioned as ancient in 802; the schools were founded by King Alfred about 870, and King Henry III. granted the charter in 1249. Bologna dates from 1110. THE BURNING OF AN EASTER CHERUB

By EMMA ARCHER OSBORNE

Copyright, 1924, by Emma A. Osborn

THE beauties of a perfect Easter Sunday morning were being ignominiously drenched in the vicinity of Madison square, New York city.

Simultaneously the puffing, middle aged, well groomed, frunk coated, silk hat Mr. Rodney Alexander Tichenor and the small, wasplike eight-year-old Mary Burns lunged for the same uptown street car.

"Fares, fares!" called the conductor, elbowing his way toward them.

Mary Burns went on a wild excursion into the fingers of her gloves for car fare. By the time she had wriggled a coin to the surface Tichenor had handed the conductor a dime.

"I paid you fare, little girl," he told her pleasantly.

She held her nickel reflectively for a moment, then slipped it back into her

"I PAID YOUR FARE, LITTLE GIRL."

Little fist, the sudden and unexpected pleasure of being 5 cents richer than she had anticipated beaming from every lineament.

Presently, with feminine instinct, it occurred to her that so nice and so generous a man was worth while visiting with.

"I'm going away up to Fifth avenue," she ventured when Tichenor a moments later dropped into the vacant seat beside her.

"uh?" she went on. "I ain't been there alone before, but I won't get lost, will I?"

"It's not," reassuringly.

"I'm going to see a nitty big girl going to get married thith week. A awful nitty girl!"

"d?" Tichenor shifted his posture and looked at her questioningly.

"He also was acquainted with a very nice young woman living at 42nd street. She was to be married in a week."

"What?" continued the talkative and womanly Tichenor, regarding the little girl with interest.

"For her new shoes that were stickier tight out into the aisle. 'And played up like a feller she's going for a nitty, not a bit!'"

"For low unfortunate!" exclaimed Tichenor with an unconscious wince.

"Int it, though?" acquiesced Mary Burns.

"The girl feels the bad that's coming up there to give her these. Probing a side pocket of her coat and showing a fat little parcel done up in a piece of dirty newspaper, and of you!" commented Tichenor ally.

"PRIZ, I dunno," she replied quickly. "Fois always giving me lots of things. Best love her like everything. So both."

"She should be very happy in—" But she ain't." Interrupted the ardent friend of the Fifth avenue bride.

"She cryth and cryth and cryth for thith time!"

"Grain?"

"Secoo, ain't it?" agreed Mary Burns. "Vikes another feller, and her maw's Secoo, her marry the old duffer 'cause she's the stuckup child and his for his party."

"Figs—ah!" commenced Tichenor, noting the growing interest of their fellow passengers.

"For thith—huh?" rattled on the child. "And for be—"

"For he made a noise away down in his coat and quile loud.

"Secoo got the 'contumptions?' she asked him, with apparent alarm.

"Figs, no."

"Secoo, vell," she resumed, satisfied of her meddling companion's health. "If I Secoo Katherine!"

"Secoo" admonished Tichenor suddenly sharper than he realized. "Some Secoo," he added gently, seeing he had startled the child. "It ain't quite the Secoo to mention people's names in cars, you know." And he patted her hand tenderly and tried to

from the enormous bunch of them in the valley which she lifted from the box.

"Nothing from Sam—not a flower," she sighed. "Last year he sent me a big pink azalea," shaking her head sadly.

She crossed the room and seated herself before an ornate rococo desk and picked up the photograph of a man. Leaning forward on her elbows, she commenced to talk to it.

"I suppose you are right about it," she said. "But I'd rather have—Sam Burns. I'd rather receive merely a withered, dried up flower from you than all the lilies, the roses, the orchids and things in New York from the rest of them! Oh, Sam, why didn't you come or write or—"

A sudden choke came into her voice. Unable to restrain the tears longer, her head went down on her arms, and she burst out crying. She sobbed out loud, so audibly, in fact, that her father had entered the room and was lifting her up to him before she was aware that he was near.

"What's all this about?" he asked, tenderly brushing back the silky, dark curls from her forehead.

Then his gaze caught the photograph, now all blistered with tears.

"Say, little girl," exclaimed John Abbott, with a catch of surprise, as he held her tighter and rocked her to and fro as he used to do when she was a baby, "you—you just go on and cry! Cry it out! Cry as hard as you want to! It'll do you good!" His face settled into a lowering frown.

When the tempest cleared her father led her to a divan and drew her down beside him.

"So," he said, looking steadily at her, "it's Sam, after all."

"Yes," she answered dependently. "But what's the use? It's all over now."

"Why?"

"Why?" she repeated. "Why? Because it's too late, with the wedding arranged for Wednesday and—and the way Sam has acted!"

"What has he done that is so reprehensible? I always regarded him as a pretty decent sort of fellow."

"After mother talked to him the way she did he never came to the house again—never even so much as wrote me!"

"What did your mother say to him?"

"Oh, so many distressing things," she replied vaguely. "And when Sam suggested writing to you she told him it was absolutely useless; that you agreed with her completely on the matter."

"She did, did she?"

"Then, of course, Sam felt hurt. Oh, father!"

"And who rang in this Tichenor, a man as old as I am? I wish I had come home sooner."

"Oh," resignedly, "mother managed it!"

"Why didn't you mention some of these things to me in your letters?"

"I couldn't, father. I simply couldn't trouble you with my affairs when you were in the midst of all that worry about the mines. It was good of Mr. Tichenor to help you out with money, wasn't it?"

"Help—me—out—with—money!" roared John Abbott, jumping to his feet with more alacrity than he had exhibited for many years. "Money? What in— He checked himself from uttering a strong mining camp expletive. "Well! What do you mean?"

"Didn't Mr. Tichenor lend you a large sum of money to tide over financial difficulties this winter?" she asked in wide eyed amazement at her father's perturbation. "Mother said he did."

"Good Lord, no!" he shouted, striding about the room as red faced and angry as Katherine had ever seen him. "It's a monstrous, inhuman lie!" he went on stormily, looking and acting very much like a very large volcano.

"WHAT WILL YOU DO ABOUT IT?"

cane. Then anger commenced to settle into disappointment and disappointment into dejection.

She went to her father and leaned her head against his shoulder. Each understood the sorrow of the other, and they exchanged mute comfort.

An hour later three persons were assembled in the library of the Abbott mansion. Two were very miserable (Katherine and John Abbott), but the third (Mary Burns) was roaming around in an extremely happy state of mind, examining everything within reach and eating bonbons as fast as she could stuff them down.

Glances directed toward Mary Burns were frequent and anything but approving.

"What will you do about it?" asked John Abbott.

"Oh," cried the unhappy Katherine, "I scarcely know. I should like to shake that little rat good and hard!" referring to the disinterested visitor.

She did nothing of the sort, however.

When Mary Burns a moment later came and perched herself on the arm of Katherine's chair and commenced to snarl and hiss her, the conversation was tenderly reciprocated.

"If you hurry up and write them over again I'll take them back and give them to Sam. I can read writing now, and I don't want them any more," the occupant of the chair's arm suggested to Katherine Abbott obligingly.

A crumpled piece of newspaper lay on the floor with a piece of dirty string. Half a dozen small worn, mused and mud-bored letters lay in Katherine's lap. They were her letters to Sam Burns. They had been intercepting by his ambitious sister Mary and used by her as a very delightful means in her endeavors to fathom the intricacies of orthography in script.

"And you say Sam never received these—never saw them?" asked Katherine again.

"Nope!" one cheek swollen to enormous proportions by the inside application of a candied peach and her face in the vicinity of her mouth all chocolate colored.

WHAT THEY SAW.

"But don't you know it is very naughty to take people's letters?"

"Uh—huh! Some people," modifying the situation. "But Sam he don't care what I do. He loves me tho. I gueth he wouldn't think it was naughty—I gueth he wouldn't," seeming to reflect for the first time on what she had done. "Anyway, I'll give them to him if you'll make them all over again—nitty and clean. Will you?"

"Talk about nitty!" exclaimed John Abbott, raising his hands summarily.

"I gueth I'd better be going home," suggested Mary Burns, with dawning apprehension.

"You certainly are going home," nodded Katherine Abbott, "and I am going with you! You have run away, and I can imagine how your people are hunting the city for you even now. Besides," she added, turning to her father, "no matter what mother shall say, I must see Sam!"

"Yes, go," replied Abbott. "I'd rather you would. It will be better to have this letter affair understood. And, daughter, looking at her knowingly, 'if you and Sam—my girl, I'll stand by you and Sam to the end of everything!'"

Some one arrived just then, and Jacques appeared and announced Sam Burns. Mary Burns had inadvertently mentioned her destination to her father, and a brief interview with that personage had apprised the Burnses where Mary might be found. Sam Burns had come to reclaim the lost.

Presently, when John Abbott saw Burns staring at those grimy letters on the library table, he discreetly withdrew, taking along with him the object upon whom censure was liable to fall in warrantable measure. He escorted her into the music room and drew the portieres together behind him.

Mary Burns was enthusiastically introducing John Abbott to the melodies of a five finger exercise when Tichenor entered.

"O-o-o!" she squealed, jumping down from the piano bench and running to him. "If here ain't that nitty man! I know him!"

"Mr. Abbott," said Tichenor, taking Abbott's extended hand and drawing the elish Mary to his side. "I should like to see you and Mrs. Abbott alone for a few minutes."

"Mrs. Abbott is at church."

"Then you," he replied. "This cherub, patting Mary Burns on the head as he seated himself, "who happened to be a fellow passenger on a street car with me this morning, accidentally conveyed a bit of information which will enable me—which makes it my duty—"

"Abbott," straightening with determination, "by the innocent prattle of this child I have learned that Katherine does not love me and that she does love some one else."

"It isn't right, it isn't fair," he went on, "to wreck that dear girl's life! I love her—but—"

He broke off and bowed his head for a moment. Then he rose and went toward Abbott. "What can we do?"

During the few seconds that the two men stood confronting each other in their heart reaching perplexities Mary Burns was testing her bopping abilities by leaping from one figure to another in the oriental rugs. As she heard the portieres which separated her from the library she noticed the drawing cords of the heavy hangings. Grabbing both ends, she ran back quickly.

Instantaneously, silently, the curtains parted. Surprised at her achievement, the stood speechless. Abbott and Tichenor stood silent also, for they were amazed at what they saw.

GO UP AHEAD.

Then See That You Stay There—You Can if You Work Hard.

Thirty years ago in a poor schoolhouse in a back district a boy at the foot of the class unexpectedly spelled a word that had passed down the entire class.

"Go up ahead," said the master, "and see that you stay there. You can if you work hard."

The boy hung his head. But the next day he did not miss a day in spelling. The brighter scholars every word in the lesson, hoping there might be a chance to get ahead, but there was not a single one. Dave stayed at the head. He had been an indifferent speller before, but now he knew every word.

"Dave, how do you get your lesson so well now?" said the master.

"I learn every word in the lesson and get my mother to hear me at night, then I go over them in the morning before I come to school, and I go over them at my seat before the class is called up."

"Good boy, Dave," said the master. "That's the way to have success; always work that way and you'll do."

Dave is today the manager of a big lumber company, and he attributes his start to the words:

"Go up ahead and see that you stay there. You can if you work hard."

Women Inclined To Constipation

Great Care Should Be Taken Not to Use Violent Cathartics

Women, owing to their peculiar functions, are more or less liable to constipation, and many of them owe their continued ill health to the pills habit. A well known physician says the majority of cases of foul breath, bad complexion, disordered stomach, sick headache and female weakness to constipation and the constant use of violent cathartics to overcome it.

We believe women will be glad to learn of a safe reliable bowel and stomach remedy that is pleasant to take and that the first few doses will certainly produce natural daily movements without pain or gripe and in a short time establish a permanent cure. It is so effective it has cured cases of 60 years' standing and yet so mild and safe thousands of mothers give it to their babies. Jennie Gresham, Nashville, Tenn., says: "I suffered almost death with torpid liver and indigestion and Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gave me quick relief." Sister M. Berchmans, of Mt. St. Mary's Academy, Oklahoma City, says: "We have found Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin satisfactory as a gentle laxative and stomach tonic."

Mrs. Myrtle Mather, Chicago, says: "My daughter was troubled since birth with constipation and sick headache. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin cured her."

Mrs. W. M. Powers, New Philadelphia, Ohio, says: "It is the best remedy for constipation and stomach trouble I have ever used."

Mrs. R. H. Brown, Abilene, Okla., says it gave her prompt relief from constipation and torpid liver. Mrs. Isabella Wheeler, Freeport, Ind., says: "Twenty-three years ago I was taken with stomach trouble. Three years ago I had become so weak I could hardly walk. I took Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and today am as well as ever." Druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

We are glad to send a free sample to any one who has not used it and will give it a fair trial. Address: Pepsin Syrup Co., 244 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Fatten Your Soil— You Fatten Your Pocketbook

Plough deep and fertilize freely and you will make two dollars instead of one at harvest time. The biggest crops in every section of the U. S. have proven this, but you must use the right fertilizers. Some land requires more phosphoric acid, another a greater percentage of nitrogen, or potash, to make it fertile, and you can't make big crops unless you make your land fertile—unless you give it these plant foods in proportions that exactly fill its needs. Avoid money waste or guesswork from now on by using only

GOULDING'S Fertilizers

For over 50 years they have been the backbone of the biggest crop yields in the South and abroad. Goulding's Fertilizers are especially adapted to the growing of corn and cotton.

They are compounded to suit the special individual needs of various soils in Southern States. Whatever fertilizer your land requires, Goulding's has a special kind to suit your land and fatten your pocketbook by doubling your crops.

Make Less Acres Pay You More Money

You must consider that, in the great variety of farm soils, one may contain almost enough nitrogen for the cotton crop—another will need more potash than phosphoric acid, another requires a greater percentage of phosphoric acid, also there's the individual plant food of the crops to consider. It is obvious that a general fertilizer will not do for all crops. If you want record yields you must get the fertilizer formula that contains the plant food your land requires are made especially for growing Cotton and Corn, and the different formulas are prepared only after most rigid soil tests, which absolutely insure every crop getting the plant food it requires in the exact proportions needed.

The largest yields of Cotton and Corn in this state have been due entirely to the use of Bigbee's high grade fertilizers and a little judgment in cultivation. Bigbee's are standard fertilizers, and judicious use of them will in a few seasons reduce work by increasing both quantity and quality of crops with a reduced acreage.
 Bigbee's Fertilizers are sold by best merchants.

Lesson II.—Second Quarter, For April 11, 1929.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xii, 1-19.
 Memory Verse, 7—Golden Text, Ps. xlii, 7.—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1928, by American Free Association.]
 We have yet another lesson on Peter before we take up the story of Saul of Tarsus or the option of an Easter lesson from I Cor. xv, but as we desire to miss nothing from the Acts and as the regular lesson is a manifestation of the power of the risen Christ we take the regular order. We have seen thus far in this book that all the teaching has been concerning a crucified and risen Christ and that the thousands saved—the lame man, and the palsied man healed, and the dead raised—were all in the name and by the power of the risen and glorified Redeemer. From the time of the entrance of sin into the world up to the present time and on to the end of this age the opposition of the devil, the god of this world, is very manifest. Peter felt it keenly and therefore wrote, "Your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion walketh about, seeking whom he may devour, whom resist, steadfast in the faith" (I Pet. v, 8, 9). In this lesson the devil's instrument is one of the Herods, a decidedly bad lot, on whose history it would not be wise to waste time. He is permitted to vex the church, to kill James, the brother of John, and to imprison Peter. But in the end of the chapter he is taken from the earth, and there is nothing for him but the blackness of darkness forever. James, whom he killed, being the Lord's own, found himself instantly in glory, absent from the body, present with the Lord. Peter was kept in prison, guarded always by four soldiers, and it was Herod's intention to have him brought out and slain after Easter. This would have been a great gain for Peter, but it was not in the Lord's plan, as we shall see. Although Peter must have had poor fare and hard lodgings, we see him sleeping, probably as peacefully as in the trance of our last lesson, ready to be slain if that was the Lord's way for him.
 Somewhere in the city, in the house of Mary, the sister of Barnabas, the mother of John Mark, many were gathered together, making instant and earnest prayer to God for him (verses 5, margin, and 12), and their prayers were heard and about to be answered, though they hardly expected it, for had they not been persistently asking, day and night, and how could he be delivered? Well might our Lord say to us most of the time, "O ye of little faith!" Let us see God answering prayer, and may our faith be strengthened. One of those angels who excel in strength is sent to Peter as he sleeps in the prison, securely guarded by the two soldiers, to whom he is chained, and by the guard before the door. But the stone walls and the iron gates or doors are nothing to these messengers from the throne of God, and without disturbing one of the guards Peter's chains fall off, and he is told to arise, gird himself, bind on his sandals, cast his garments about him and follow his friend. Peter did as he was told, not thinking it a reality, but that he was enjoying a vision. No one spoke to them as they passed the wards, and the iron gate of its own accord opened to them (doubtless more angelic ministry), and, passing through one street, the angel left him, and Peter found himself alone and soon realized that it was no vision, but that an angel had in reality delivered him from Herod and from all the expectation of the Jews. The expectation of the people perishes, the counsel of the ungodly comes to naught, but the purpose of the Lord stands.
 A light shone in the prison, the glory of the Lord shone upon the shepherds, a light from heaven shone upon Saul, for all is light and glory in heaven, and messengers from there carry light and glory with them. When we steadfastly behold the face of Him who is the brightness of the Father's glory we, too, will unconsciously carry some of the reflection of that light, a sweet savor of Christ. As to the guards being undisturbed, there must have been a deep sleep from the Lord upon them, as in I Sam. xxi, 12; Gen. ii, 21. All the wisdom and power of man are as nothing to Him of whom it is written, "By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath of His mouth" (Ps. xxxiii, 6).
 When Peter found that he was really free he went at once to the house of Mary and began to knock and continued knocking till he gained admission. Had they been expecting the answer they would have had some one on the lookout for Peter to open quickly when he came. But they said that he was mad because he said he was at the gate, and when he knocked that it was so they said it was his angel. And all this time Peter was knocking. The answer to their prayer could scarcely get to them when he came. What do you think of them? Having communicated them to all James and the brethren, he departed and abode at Clanton, but whether with the contention of last lesson or with Philip we can only conjecture.

Monday night the wind blew a March hurricane, blowing down trees and chimneys in this neighborhood and doing great damage in other places.

The biggest deal in cotton for several years occurred in Selma, Tuesday, when 3,000 bales were sold at 10 cents per pound.

The Birmingham Age-Herald has commenced the erection of a handsome new building, which will be a credit to that city, and the interior arrangements are a model of convenience for the publication of an up-to-date newspaper.

Trouble in the East the Turks are in revolt and there's no telling what the Turkey will do once they are started.

Hon. W. B. CRAIG, our excellent representative in Congress, made a capital speech in the interests of the people, on the Payne tariff bill, finishing up as follows:

That free list is wonderfully and fearfully made, and will, no doubt, be a great consolation to the misguided American citizen who voted the Republican ticket last fall upon the idea that by so doing he would help to reduce his living expenses. If, after this bill becomes a law, he becomes worried because his socks cost him 20 per cent more than they used to, he can console himself with the thought that arsenic is on the free list. If he takes enough of the latter, the lack of the former will be immaterial.

He need not worry because lemons are taxed out of all reason, for on the free list are aspic and nutmegs, either one of which will effectually kill an appetite for lemons, or anything else. (Laughter and applause.)

His coffee will cost him more than it does now, but he will rejoice to find that asafetida is on the free list. (Laughter and applause.)

Lead pencils for the school children will be higher, but why worry about that when no tax is required on balm of Gilead?

Ladies' gloves will cost more, but leeches can be imported free, if any should be needed to supply the place of those who manufacture the gloves.

Tea and cocoa will be almost prohibitive in price, but manna, which has been free since the day when the children of Israel wandered in the wilderness, is still on the free list, thanks to a generous Republican party. (Applause on the Democratic side.)

Fret not, dear people, because soap is going to cost 5 cents per pound more than it does now, for on the free list are ashes and lye, which the Republican party seems to think are good enough for the poor man's toilet.

Perfumery and cologne are raised in price, but rags are still upon the free list. A few years more of so-called "Republican prosperity," such as we have had for the past two years, and rags will be the most prominent article in the wardrobe of all but the protected classes and their satellites. (Applause on the Democratic side.)

If woolen and cotton goods are still sky high, that is nothing, for kindling wood is on the free list; and if any voter wants tea for breakfast and cannot have it because of the exorbitant tax levied by this bill, he may turn to the free list and find there, to his utterable joy, that tobacco stems and seaweeds have been magnanimously freed of import taxes by the great Republican party. (Applause on the Democratic side.)

Mr. Chairman, that this bill will enrich the wealthy at the expense of the poor no sane man can doubt, and it seems to me that the one idea kept steadily in view by the Ways and Means Committee, in framing this bill was that—

To him that hath shall be given, and from him that doth not shall be taken away even that which he doth need to live.

(Great applause on the Democratic side.)

IN MEMORY.
On April 9, the home of Mr. I. E. Sims was saddened when the death angel visited there and claimed their darling baby Lillian. She was only six months old, and such a sweet little child, made home so happy. Oh, so hard to give her up, but weep not, dear parents, as those who have no hope, Lillian is to-day a shining angel in heaven, she can't come back to you but you can go to her. Jesus said "Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Dearest Lillian has left us here, this loss we deeply feel, but 'tis God that has bereft us, he can all our sorrows heal. Yet again we can meet her when the days of life have fled and in heaven with joy to greet those who no farewell tears are shed. Oh may we realize that it was for a good purpose or else she would not have been taken, for He is a wise and just God and doeth all things well. May we take this as a light to our pathway through life, and when the time comes for us to lay down our troubles and sorrows here and cross the dark chilly waves of death that we, too, can close our eyes peacefully and happy as did this sweet little child.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. John Kicker; the remains were laid to rest in the Marble cemetery there to await the resurrection day. May the comforting spirit of the Heavenly Father be with the bereaved parents.

ALABAMA STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The State Sunday School Convention which will meet in Montgomery, April 27-28-29, is near at hand, and plans are being perfected to accommodate the vast throng who will attend.

Special rates. The railroads of the State have granted a rate of 3 cents per mile plus 25 cents for round trip tickets, which is only a fraction over half price. Tickets on sale April 25 and forenoon of April 27. Returning, tickets will be good until midnight Friday, April 30.

Delegates. All white Sunday schools of all denominations in the State are requested to send at least three delegates besides the pastor and superintendent. All ministers of the Gospel and superintendents are delegates by virtue of their office. When delegates are elected, names should be sent at once to Mr. R. O. Blakey, 26 Dexter Ave., Montgomery, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, who will provide homes.

Entertainment. All trains will be met in Montgomery by "The White Cap Committee" and delegates will be taken to headquarters. After registering, each delegate will be given a beautiful badge and assigned to homes at such rates as may be desired, at from $1.00 per day up. This is the same plan that worked so satisfactorily last year.

County officers conference and lunch together at 12 o'clock (noon) Thursday, 29th. All officers of the County and State Sunday School Association are requested to be present at this lunch. Mr. Marion Lawrence will be in charge of this conference.

New Harmony

Editor Banner—I wish for space to say a few words in regard to Miss Annie Cherry's school which has just closed at this place. I want to say that she was liked by both patrons and pupils as well as any community could like a teacher, she has been so kind and good to all. She did all that lay in her power for the upbuilding of education at New Harmony. All of the children have been sad since she left us, but she will take up her school July 5. She has made a host of friends and we hope to see the time when she will be back again. We all wish her much success in all her efforts. It seems that the bright sunshine came as she came to this community and we all hope they both will remain.

Now a few words about stock law. I don't think that all are going to like it. I heard one of my friends say that his cows were in jail and the grass in the woods, and that his stock could not get even water. Just look around and see the grass in the woods and the pastures bare, you will want no stock law.

FARMING IN JAPAN.

By Frank G. Carpenter, in Birmingham Age-Herald.

During the past two months I have been traveling through the farming districts of Japan. They should be an object lesson to the United States. The country is kept like a garden, and it is as fat as the valley of the Nile. A great part of it, however, is covered with forests, much of it is mountainous, and, all told, the cultivated parts are half as big as the State of Ohio. Nevertheless, this small area is now feeding more than 50,000,000 people, or more than one half as many as we have in the United States. It produces every year 100,000,000 bushels of rice, barley and wheat; 250,000,000 bushels of rice, and nearly 100,000,000 pounds of tobacco. It grows 56,000,000 pounds of tea, 10,000,000 bushels of silk cocoons, as well as buckwheat, millet, beans, indigo, cotton and hemp. The rice crop alone is worth $200,000,000 per annum.

I can give you no idea of the intensive cultivation which is going on here. The whole country is divided up into patches, ranging in size from that of a bed quilt to tracts of an acre or so, and every bit of it is as clean of weeds as a government flower bed. There are no fences, and one looks over a crazy quilt, made up of patches of many colored crops, bound together with the green grass which forms the boundaries of the fields. The Japanese farms are, on the average, not more than two acres in size, and only 15 per cent of all the holdings are of more than four acres.

The ownership is widely scattered. There are, altogether, about 8,000,000 families engaged in agriculture, and many of these have their whole living from two acres of ground. Others have small tracts of their own and rent more. As it is to-day, only about one-half of the land is worked by the owners. The rest is farmed by tenants who pay a proportion of the crops or high money rents.

But come with me and take a look at the farming country. It is nothing like that of America. There are no barns nor hay stacks. There are no big fields and no cattle nor horses. The ordinary Japanese farmer would look upon a Pennsylvania bank barn as a temple, and worship in it if he saw it. He would look upon our sheep as so many wild animals, and a Percheron horse or a Shorthorn cow would be as much out of place on his little tract as the traditional bull in the china shop. This is so, notwithstanding there are something like 2,000,000 cattle and horses in Japan. Most of them, however, are used for freighting or draft animals to carry goods over the country. They are always kept up and one never sees them roaming about or feeding alone in the fields. The cart is the chief farm vehicle and it is more often hauled by men or bullocks than by horses.

On the other hand the American farmer would be lost if he came to Japan.

MADE TRIP AROUND THE WORLD WITH BATTLESHIP FLEET.

At 5:30 p.m. the fleet passed the Chilean ship, General Bagoenda, flying the President's flag, and after firing another salute of 21 guns, stood out to sea on our way to Callao, Peru.

On the morning of the 20th land was again sighted. The outlines of the high mountains could be seen marking the entrance to the harbor of Callao. With the Peruvian Cruiser Bolognesa leading, the fleet swung into exact column and glided swiftly into position. fired the customary salute and let go their anchors.

Years ago, about 1746, old Callao suffered from a severe earthquake, which buried 5,000 people, immersing the entire southwestern section of the city, throwing up in its stead further to the westward a great island of rock, barren of all vegetation without the exception of a few trees on the extreme eastern point, which form a cross. Gold, silver, nitre and copper are found here in abundance. The capacious harbor is filled with non-descript shipping, bearing the flags of all nations.

Six miles north east of Callao lies Lima, the capital of Peru. An English railroad operates between the two cities. Electric cars built in Philadelphia are used on all lines. Once in Lima the importance of the place is readily seen. In the heart of the city is situated the Plaza Mayor. To the north of this park stand the government buildings, and by their side the old Cathedral, with its two great towers crowned with the holy cross. This great building, constructed in the time of Pizarro, who laid its corner stone in the year 1540, speaks the history of invasions, conquests and rebellions which occurred during Pizarro's reign, and the invasions made by the Chileans, who carried away all the costly ornaments of gold and silver, stolen by that ambitious monarch who took them from the Inca temples years before. Nothing now remains to call to mind the expense at which the great cathedral was built, amounting to over three million dollars.

The great event of the week was the bull fight given in the fleet's honor. Six thousand men were invited and were met at the depot by six bands of music and four trains. Upon arrival at Lima they were escorted to the Plaza del Toro, where seats were reserved.

At 3:30 p.m., amid the strains of the Peruvian national air, President Pardo of Peru entered his box. As soon as he appeared the bluejackets were on their feet making the air ring with three cheers for the president, who, hat in hand, bowed to right and left.

The gates of the plaza were now opened, and headed by the matadors, the banderilleros, toreadors and picadors entered the arena. The matadors and banderilleros withdrew to their boxes at the side. The picadors, mounted on horses, took up their places before the president's box. Presently an attendant galloped across the plaza, saluted the President and informed the picadors the bull was ready to enter the arena.

The great crowd hushed its murmurings and all eyes were turned towards the gates. As the picadors advanced to the center of the ring the gates flew open, and a great, powerful black bull, with lowered horns, charged into the arena. Cheers rent the air.

The picadors loosed their great red cloaks and advanced to meet their charge. At the sight of the horse, the man and the red cloak, the bull charged first one and then another, the breathless stillness with which the crowds watched became painful until some daring feat of horsemanship of a picador invoked a deafening cheer.

The bull, maddened by his fruitless charges, blind with rage, grew more furious, and charging one picador with all the force and impact of his powerful body, caught the flank with one of his needle-like horns, tearing a great gaping wound in the animal's flesh, almost throwing both rider and horse.

The Almost Tragic Tale of An Easter Hat

By MARION C. SMITH

Copyright, 1935, by M. C. Smith

MRS. ARTHUR AVERY was in a bad humor. He glared suspiciously at his coffee, tasted it as if he suspected it of being poisoned, scowled viciously at his boiled egg and pushed it from him. "Hard as a brickbat," he snapped. "Can't you get a cook who can read the clock?" He was one of those men who are always in a bad humor when their consciences are out of order. He had just refused his wife the money for an Easter hat, and she had borne the disappointment with becoming meekness. She did not know the reason for the refusal, but he did, and that was the trouble. He wanted to join another club.

Mrs. Avery surmised that his conscience was uneasy and took heart. She hoped that he would come around. There were still four days to spare, and even if he did not come around until after Easter she could bear it if only the one hat she wanted had not been sold in the interval. It was a hat worth waiting for, and it matched her new spring suit to perfection. Nothing else would do. The hats that year were monstrosities. Mrs. Avery was a woman of excellent taste and knew what she wanted. She also knew that her husband was very much in love with her. Surely he would come around!

He did not come entirely around that day, however. He went so far as to telephone to his friend in the new club, asking him not to propose his name just yet. There was a little uncertainty. He would let him know in a day or two. The next day at lunch-time he went uptown and fattened his nose—figuratively—against one of the show windows at Mercer & Milner's. He couldn't remember the price she had mentioned. Was it $15 or $20? Absurd, of course, but not extravagantly high, as hats go. He would just go in and price them.

"It must be blue, because she said it matched her suit, and I know that's blue," he said helplessly to the saleswoman.

"Blue? Oh, we have a model hat in blue," said that astute young person,

"AND THEY DON'T EXCHANGE HATS!" going up to one of the many huge glass cases which were dazzling the bewildered eyes of Mr. Avery.

"This is a Parisian hat," she said, with a grand manner that disarmed criticism. "And a wonderful bargain, only $25!"

Twenty-five! Well, the dues and initiation fee of the club would amount to more than that. If Edith liked it—"Isn't it rather large?" he faltered.

"I'm sure this is the right thing," she said, with increased confidence. "I think I remember a lady of that description admiring this hat and saying she might come back and buy it if her husband was willing."

That didn't sound like Edith, but it furnished a clue, and Mr. Arthur Avery was tired and felt very helpless. There really seemed nothing to do but to order the hat sent home.

Mrs. Avery came in with a friend that afternoon and saw the box, which the maid had placed in the middle of the bed.

"Laura, look at that!" she exclaimed apprehensively. "He's bought me a hat—bought it himself!"

"Oh, how lovely!" cried the friend.

"I don't know about that! I'm afraid to look at it. There was just one hat I wanted, and I never allow any one, not even Arthur, to choose for me."

"Oh, Edith, hurry and open it! I'm sure it's all right. It's so good of him! I wish my—"

But she stopped short as Edith suddenly opened the box and stood transfixed in horror.

"Laura Glenn, will you look at that! And they don't exchange hats!"

She slowly drew it from its tissue paper wrappings and held it up in all its blue and pink radiance.

"It—why, Edith," faltered Laura, "it isn't so very bad. It's in the very latest style."

"I wouldn't be found dead in it!" broke out Edith. "Latest style! This how this society started at my new coat. My hat was a simple white with the most exquisitely delicate flowers, and only $10! What poor Arthur must have paid for this horror! What shall I do? I can't tell him his gift didn't suit me. He'll never forgive me, and it was a sacrifice on his part too. Poor dear Arthur! Oh—oh!"

Meanwhile Mrs. Glenn had been trying on the hat. She was short and dark, and the effect upon her was appalling.

"There, you see!" exclaimed Mrs. Avery. "No one could wear it! It's a monstrosity!"

"But, my dear," said Mrs. Glenn calmly, "the hats this year are monstrosities. I've got one myself."

"Well, I don't care what you've got. I won't wear a monstrosity! The one I chose was a dear, and they don't exchange hats!"

"Perhaps they will this time. I can testify that you didn't try it on. They will never think of my having tried it on."

"Oh, do you think I can persuade them? Come with me at once!"

"Very well," said Mrs. Glenn resignedly. "I suppose I'll have to see you through."

Suddenly Edith dropped into a chair, with a tragic gesture.

"I can't, Laura," she exclaimed. "I can't change Arthur's choice! He will be wounded. He'll think I don't love him."

"My dear, don't be any more foolish than you absolutely have to be. Men are not like that—only women. Arthur won't care a button if only you're pleased."

"You don't know Arthur."

"I know men, and I don't mind saying that I'm older than you, for you know it already. You can trust me."

"And you think he won't be hurt?"

"I know he won't."

"But I'm not sure!"

"Oh, well, wear the hat, then. It's the only alternative."

Edith shuddered.

"Unless," pursued Mrs. Glenn, "you can make him think they sent the other by mistake."

"What, deceive him? How can I? And yet better deceive him than hurt him. How can I tell him I despised his choice?"

"Oh, come along, Edith; there's no time to waste. Telephone for a cab."

In due course of time Edith was relieving her feelings by reproaching the head saleswoman in the millinery department at Mercer & Milner's for having persuaded Mr. Avery to buy such a hat. The girl looked abashed. She had not believed that the gentleman wanted it for any one like Edith. But she sulkily persisted that it was a Parisian model!

"It's a Parisian horror!" cried Edith. The head of the department was called, and with a man's susceptibility to a pretty woman's distress and upon Mrs. Glenn's testimony that Mrs. Avery had not ever tried it on, he consented to effect the change, provided that the difference in price was not refunded by the firm. Edith accepted the condition and joyously carried off her first choice.

"Thank goodness that's over!" cried Laura as they dismissed the cab and guiltily brought in the box.

"It's over, but I've deceived him, and I'm miserable," bewailed Edith. "Tell him all about it, then!"

"Never! I must suffer in silence!"

That night upon Arthur's return Edith flung her arms about him and with her face buried in his coat collar, thanked him almost tearfully for the loveliest hat she had ever had.

"The very one I chose!" she gasped. "Good! Let's see it on."

With trembling hands she drew from the box a hat of moderate proportions and graceful arrangement—a very symphony in blue and white—and set it upon her golden locks. The effect was magical.

"But—but," stammered Arthur, "it's not the one I bought!"

Edith turned her back and busied herself with the hatpins.

"Not the one you bought?" she faltered.

"No; that was much larger and more expensive, I'm sure. This won't do at all! They've sent the wrong one, and they must give me the other or refund the money. It was much handsomer!"

"Oh, Arthur, I want this one! I must keep it! You see yourself!"

"But it isn't worth $25."

"Twenty-five dollars! Dear, did you pay all that? How extravagant, but how lovely of you!"

"I'll go tomorrow morning!"

"No, no! Leave it to me. Men always muddle such things. I'll—I'll settle it. Arthur, please! I'm afraid of losing this hat."

"Very well, but they must refund the difference. Stupid fools! It's lucky they hit upon the hat you liked, but the other was so much handsomer."

"This is ideal," said Edith, but her voice trembled.

"I must get the $10 out of my savings bank fund," she thought. "Oh, what a tangle of deceit! He'll find it all out and never love me again!"

The next day was Good Friday, and Edith went to church, but she came home with a headache. On Saturday morning she could not get up. He was seriously troubled about her.

"I'll send up Dr. Moore, dear," he said. "You must get well and wear that Easter hat tomorrow. I've set my heart on it."

Upon that, to the poor man's utter amazement, she burst into a torrent of tears and sobbed.

"I'll never, never wear it!" she cried. "Oh, I'm a wicked, wicked woman!"

"Edith, my love! For heaven's sake! Wicked? Absurd! You're nervous and worn out. I told you you were going to church too much this Lent and working too hard over Deedy's new clothes. Darling, don't cry so. I've got to leave you—business appointment at 9 o'clock!"

off, and I can't bear to leave you like this. That's right! Try to smile and tell me it's all over!"

"It's—it's all over!" she answered placidly.

But after he left her he was out on one of the summer theories. Why should Edith call herself wicked? Was it only the effect of religious excitement or was it anything tangible? He recalled the fact that John Dent had talked to Edith quite a good deal of late whenever they had been out together. Could it be that her fancy had turned that way? Arthur turned cold with horror.

As ill luck would have it he met John Dent in the street.

"Hello! Changed your mind about the club?" called out the unconscious object of his wrath.

"No, confused it, and I won't change it!" snapped Arthur. "Can't you take a man's word for it that he knows his own mind?"

"When—when—?" whistled Dent. "What's the matter with you, old man? Want to take my head off?"

But Arthur was off, muttering inaudibly, "I'd do it for 5 cents!"

Meanwhile Edith knew that she had made disclosure inevitable, and she despairingly prepared herself for the

"AND SO ARE YOU?" sacrifice. Arthur came home in the evening, pale and ferocious of mood, to find her sitting in an armchair looking equally pale, clad in a long white tea gown, her hair parted over her ears, her eyes strained and wistful.

She looked up piteously, but Arthur did not smile. He set his teeth hard, drew up a chair and sat down in front of her with stern and tragic mien.

"Edith," he said, "what is the meaning of all this despair, of your self accusation? I have been thinking of it all day. I have been a wretched man. I am determined now to sift this thing to the bottom!"

She broke down and sobbed, but he did not waver.

"You have called yourself a wicked woman," he proceeded sternly, "and here and now you must tell me why!"

She clasped her hands hard together and drew in her breath. The moment had come.

"I—I—have—deceived you!" she gasped.

His face whitened, and a terrible look came into his eyes.

"Deceived me?" he repeated mechanically.

"Yes, Oh, you'll never forgive me! You bought the hat. You made a sacrifice. That horrid John Dent said you wouldn't join the club."

Hat! Horror! What was this? A strange revulsion of feeling came over him.

"You don't like John Dent?" he interrupted, with seeming irrelevance.

"I never liked him! I don't see why you do. He doesn't like me, I know. He talks to me, but he makes fun of me. I deceived you about the hat. I changed the one you bought for me!"

"You did? So the mistake wasn't theirs? But what does that matter? Why didn't you tell me?"

"Tell you that I had rejected your choice! Oh, Arthur, when you thought you were pleasing me! But I couldn't. I—it didn't match my suit. And—a smaller one seemed better. You know the hats this year are— But, oh, I deceived you! I've destroyed your love for me!"

Arthur had been walking up and down, trying to control a feeling of mingled anger and relief. To think that he had suffered so all day for nothing! d she had made herself ill for not— But now, at her last words, he had and took her in his arms.

"Oh, Edith, you dear, foolish little girl!" he cried. "You don't know what you've put me through, accusing yourself for nothing!"

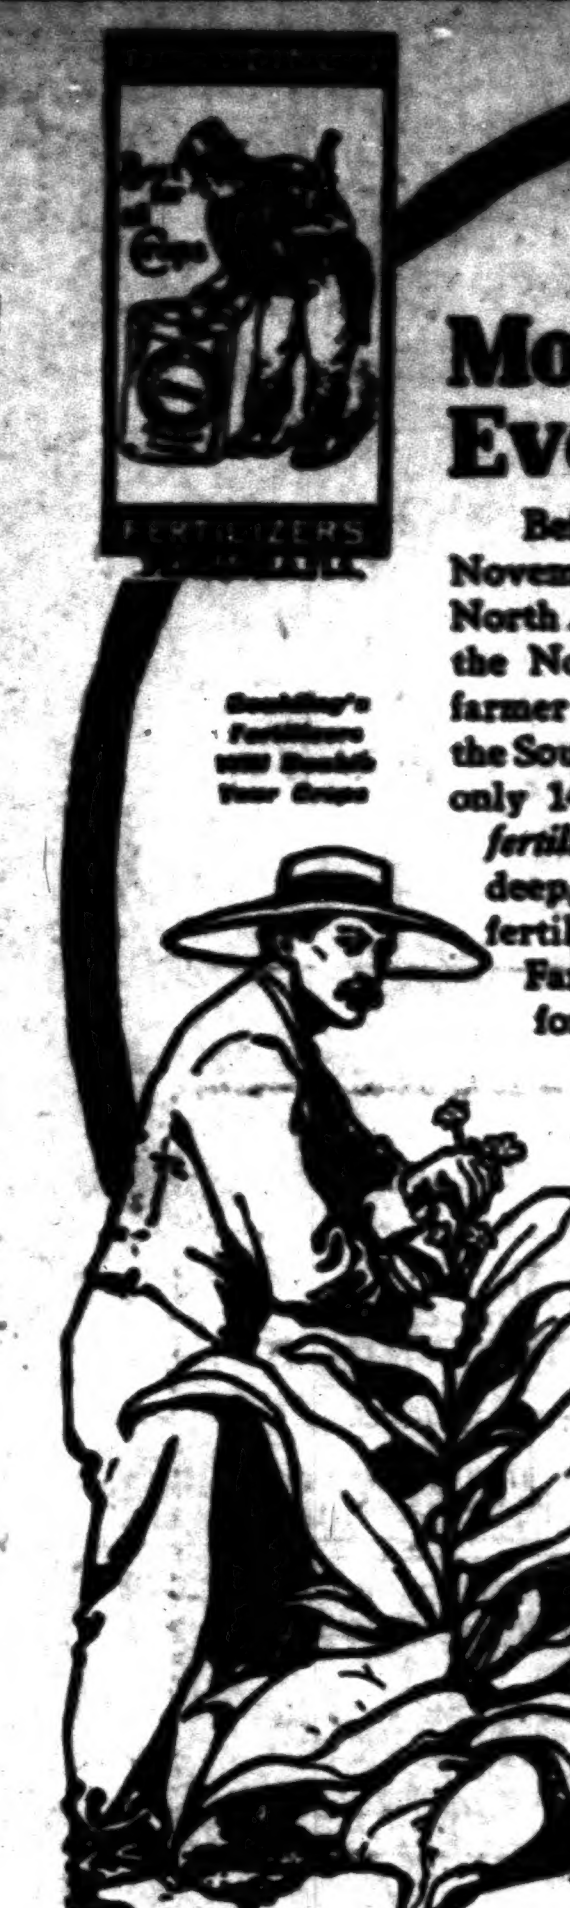

"For nothing?" Her tone was tragic, but thrills of bliss were running all over her.

"As if I cared about the hat, only so you were pleased," he said. "If you'd told me I would have had it exchanged gladly. I didn't like it much myself, but the girl said it was just the thing, and I supposed the hats this year were all monstrosities and it couldn't be helped. Was this all your trouble?"

"I should think it was enough! I did deceive you. I thought—"

"I know what you thought, foolish child. But you don't know what— Well, never mind. Now you'll sleep well tonight and wear the hat tomorrow—eh?"

"Of course I will," she answered happily. "I don't deserve it, but it really is a perfect dear, you know, Arthur. And so are you!"

Shouts

Editor Banner—I have come again to say just a few words concerning Easter, and to bring out a few other thoughts. I'm sure there were quite a number of little ones that were made glad Sunday morning, hunting eggs in the rye and oat patches, and some of the older ones made glad to have the pleasure of eating them.

A very large crowd were the receivers of a fine sermon delivered by Rev. P. G. Maass, at Pleasant Grove church, Sunday. Must think the Lawley and Tabernacle people for their attendance at church Sunday. We should all visit other churches and make a large number of people there, and that would encourage our pastors much more; but not only that, but to see our church people all working together.

Health is this community good. People are proceeding very nicely with their farm work.

A Mild Laxative For Baby's Bowels

Doctor Points Out Dangers of Pills and Cathartics

"Salts, purgatives, and violent cathartics are dangerous when given babies, children or delicate women," says a well known doctor. "Neither should they be given medicines containing narcotics for stomach or bowel troubles."

It would be well for mothers to heed this warning and keep on hand a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for baby and herself for any member of the family that has need of a laxative or a stomach remedy. It is safe and pleasant to take and has cured old people of chronic constipation and dyspepsia of many years' standing, and yet is harmless for a baby as many a happy mother can testify. It brings natural daily movements, sweetens the stomach, aids digestion and stimulates the torpid liver to proper action. The children like it. Late Weather, the popular hotel man in Indianapolis, says: "The children like it, we all use it and would not be without it in the house." Mrs. Mattie Crouch, Tiptonville, Tenn., cured her 5 months' old baby of indigestion with it. Mrs. Almon Willis, Jamaica, W. Va., says it saved her baby's life. Mrs. A. B. Cunningham, Fresno, Calif., says she can't keep house without it. It cured her little son of rheumatism and stomach trouble.

Mrs. Flora Hebert, Bow Creek, Kan., says: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin cured my little girl of constipation. I cannot recommend your splendid remedy too highly for children."

Mrs. Mary E. Young, Burlington, N. C., writes: "I cheerfully recommend it to mothers as the best laxative for children."

Mrs. Alice Miller, Canal Dover, Ohio, has used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin with splendid results as a laxative for children.

All druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Pepsin Syrup Co., 201 Caldwell Bldg., Westfield, Ill., will send a free sample to any one who has never used it and will give a fair trial.

$500.00 More Every Year For Every Southern Farmer

Before the Southern Commercial Congress in Washington, November 1908, it was proven that the average farmer in the North Atlantic States during the last census year made $304. In the North Central $1,074. The average South Atlantic State farmer $484, and the South Central State farmer $536. Although the Southern farmer worked 155 acres (average) and the Northerner only 144. The Northern farmer doubled his money by using the fertilizer that his land needed. He rotated his crops, plowed deep, helped his fertilizer to do the trick, and he made his soil fertile by using fertilizer exactly suited to its needs.

Farmers all over the state are making record yields from land formerly considered worthless by using Goulding's Fertilizers.

are compounded to suit the soil. They are manufactured only after careful chemical analysis of the soil, consideration of the crops, and with due regard to the lessons taught by the experiment stations. Whatever plant food your land needs—Nitrogen, Phosphoric Acid, Potash, etc.—Goulding's Fertilizers will supply in just the right proportion. This is proven by record breaking crops wherever Goulding's Fertilizers are used.

The average yield of corn in the United States during the past ten years was 25.6 bushels per acre. In Alabama only 13.3—other Southern States even less. We have just as good climate and soil in the South for corn growing as anywhere in the United States—the fault is improper fertilization. To make his lands pay the farmer in Alabama, Georgia, Florida—every Southern State must use better fertilizer—fertilizer that exactly suits the needs of his soil and crops—not only corn, but every other crop—cotton, tobacco, etc.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson III.—Second Quarter, For April 16, 1902.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts 13: 1-28. Memory Verses 13: 14—Golden Text, Acts 13: 4.—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Starnes.

(Copyright, 1902, by American Bible Society.)

When the Holy Spirit records anything several times He must desire to call special attention to it, as we suggested in a recent lesson. He must therefore intend that we give good heed to the account of Saul's conversion, recorded in this lesson and in chapters xxii and xxvi, and also to Paul's statements elsewhere concerning it, as in Gal. 1: 13-17; 1 Tim. 1: 13-17. This chosen verse, (verse 13) was permitted to blindly go his own way till the time came, which God had always foreseen, to stop him and turn him about in the right direction. Let all those who are pleading with God for wayward sons or daughters, husbands or wives or possibly for parents be encouraged by this wonderful manifestation of the grace of God, and may they hear the Spirit saying, "Thy prayer is heard" (Luke 1: 13; Acts 1: 14; 1 John 3: 14, 15), and then patiently but expectantly await God's time to make manifest the answer. Could there possibly be a seemingly more hopeless case than this one? And yet see how wondrously God wrought when His time came. Notwithstanding the triumphant death of Stephen and all that Saul must have heard and seen at that time he still continued his murderous career and was on his way to Damascus in the same spirit when suddenly from being a persecutor of Jesus he became His most devoted bond slave and faithful witness. He saw the risen and ascended Jesus (verse 17) as truly as Stephen did; he heard himself addressed by name in that double form by which the Lord addressed Abraham and Moses and Samuel; he was convinced of his great sin and, with true penitence, cried, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

Soon it was reported everywhere "that he who persecuted us in times past now preacheth the faith which once he destroyed" (Gal. 1: 23). The light from heaven was a great light above the brightness of the sun, and Paul said, "I could not see for the glory of that light." What blessed blindness, a sight of Jesus making us blind to all else! May it ever be so with us, blind and deaf to all but the face and voice of Jesus. The Lord's question, "Why persecutest thou Me?" was in the Hebrew tongue, for which there must have been some reason. Was it because Saul prided himself on being "a Hebrew of the Hebrews?" (Phil. 3: 5.) Our Lord's reply to Saul's "Who art thou, Lord?" was, "I am Jesus of Nazareth whom thou persecutest," the name that Saul had so hated and that so many proud Jews hate to this day. When Saul saw the hated one as the Lord of Glory his mouth was forever shut concerning himself and his previous good opinion of himself, and from that day he was ready to die for Him in whose righteousness alone he now rejoiced (Phil. 3: 8, 9). The humbled man was three days without sight or food or drink (verse 9). He was led by the hand into Damascus and must have had a never to be forgotten experience in the revelation of his Lord and of himself which came to him those days. Unless we can truly say from the heart Rom. vii, 18, we need to see more clearly the beauty of the Lord until the constant utterance of our heart becomes "Not I, but Christ," "Not I, but the grace of God" (Gal. 1: 20; 1 Cor. xv, 16). It is refreshing to meet in this record a good man named Ananias, for the other one of chapter 9 so dishonored the name that to this day it is a rare thing to find a man of that name. It is so much more easy to smirch a name than to redeem it. How careful we should be not to dishonor or bring reproach upon that worthy and beautiful name by which we are called, the name of Jesus Christ our Lord (Jas. 1: 7).

Let us also remember that all ill treatment of those who bear that name means to Him ill treatment of Himself, even as He taught when here in His humiliation, "He that despiseth you despiseth me" (Luke 10: 16).

How honored this Ananias was to be the Lord's messenger to Saul with such a message, "Receive thy sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost!" Andrew was greatly honored to be permitted to bring his brother Simon, as we think of the 3,000 who came through Simon Peter at Pentecost, but think of what God wrought through Saul. If the humble man who emphasized to the young stranger in the congregation that stormy morning that he never would be happy till he "looked and lived" had never led another soul to Christ than C. E. Spurgeon, would he not have been honored beyond measure?

A chosen vessel to bear His name before gentiles and kings and the children of Israel, to know His will and see Him and hear His voice and be His witness, to open people's eyes and turn them from darkness to light and from the power of Satan unto God that they might receive forgiveness of sin and eternal inheritance—what an honor, what a commission! These words were spoken to Saul, but written for us if we are willing to be written for His use. Many are called, but few are chosen, not because He wants only a few, but because so few are willing to be His chosen ones—chosen to suffer as well as to minister.

BREAD GOES SKYWARD

BAKERS OF OHIO ADVANCE THE PRICE OF BREAD, AND TRY TO TAFT FOR HELP.

Cincinnati, April 15.—At the close of a stormy meeting of the master bakers of Cincinnati, it was announced that as a result of the rise in the price of wheat, it had been decided to discontinue with the three and four-cent loaf of bread, which have been supplied from some bakeries, and that from now on nothing but the standard five-cent loaf will be supplied to the trade.

H. D. Upham, of Springfield, president of the State Master Bakers' Association, declared that only five and ten-cent loaves would be on sale in Springfield.

James Hartington Boyd of Toledo, in a letter to the local association, recited the duties under the proposed new tariff on wheat and flour, and asked the Cincinnati bakers to "go after President Taft" on the subject.

Resolutions, which will be sent to the Ohio senators and congressmen, were adopted, alleging that "recent gambling in food products had raised the price of flour to the master bakers, has lowered the wages of journeyman bakers, and has raised the price of bread to consumers."

Patriotic Women in Convention.

Washington.—Crowning with success the work of several years by patriotic women, was the dedication of the Continental hall of the Daughters of the American Revolution with ceremonies of interest and impressiveness. The building, which has cost $500,000, all raised by the Daughters, was dedicated on by Mrs. Donald McLean, the retiring president general of the society. The response to Mrs. McLean's address was made by Vice President Sherman.

Georgia Chautauquans Open.

Albany, Ga.—The twenty-first annual assembly of the Georgia chautauquans opened under flattering auspices. The audience which attended was one of the largest ever seen in the big auditorium, and everything points to one of the most notable assemblies in the history of Georgia's oldest chautauqua association.

The opening sermon was preached by Dr. George P. Eckman, one of the best-known Methodist divines of New York City.

Committed Suicide, Victim of Plot.

Paris.—I am the victim of the most diabolical plot ever devised to ruin an innocent man. This was the message contained in a farewell letter found in the effects of William E. Rainbridge, confidential agent of the United States treasury department, in charge of its Paris customs bureau, who committed suicide.

Prominent Negro Educator Dead.

Huntsville, Ala.—Professor W. H. Council, president of the Negro Agricultural and Mechanical college, one of the most prominent negro educators in the country, died after a long illness. He was known throughout the United States and regarded highly by the white people of the south.

St. Louis Boy Kidnaped.

St. Louis.—James Shoppard Cabane, seven years old, the youngest son of a famous St. Louis family, was kidnaped from in front of the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Julia C. Cabane, in the most fashionable district of the city. There is no clue to his whereabouts, save a telephone message from an unidentified man saying the lad had been taken to Louisville.

BRIEF NEWS ITEMS.

Philadelphia.—Under the will of the late Charles E. Ellis, the millionaire street railway magnate of this city, who killed himself accidentally, more than $2,500,000 is given for the establishment of a home for fatherless girls. The home, the will directs, is to be called the Charles E. Ellis Home for Fatherless Girls, and is to be conducted along the same lines as Girard College for Boys, in this city. Mr. Ellis' estate is valued at $5,000,000.

Columbus, Ga.—During the past week about 5,000 bales of cotton have been sold in Columbus at prices ranging around 10 cents, the purchasers being the shippers and the local mills. This leaves only about 8,000 or 10,000 bales in the local warehouses, which will barely supply Columbus mills until the cotton begins to come in. The Columbus factories use about 60,000 bales of cotton per annum.

Augusta, Ga.—It was given out that Mrs. William H. Duff, of Riverside Drive, New York, has notified the directors of the Children's Hospital Association that she will contribute the funds necessary to build the institution as a memorial to her late husband, a regular visitor to the Bon Air hotel, and whose sudden illness and death at the famous resort on March 19 was a shock to the winter colony.

Pensacola, Fla.—News reached here that the schooner, James C. Clifford, was found deserted in the Gulf of Mexico and that she was later set on fire and burned by unknown persons. The schooner falls from Mobile, Ala.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Mrs. Mary Ann Kline, Tennessee's oldest resident, died at her son's home, near Danbridge, Tenn., aged 112. She was a native of Lexington county, South Carolina. Positive proof of her advanced age was recently presented the state pension board, when application was made by her for a pension.

HOTEL FIRE IN FRISCO

GUESTS FLEE FROM DEATH. IN MISSING, FIVE BODIES FOUND. RUINS BEING SEARCHED.

San Francisco, April 17.—Five bodies recovered and probably eight or ten others buried in the ruins, six injured, one fatally, and property loss of $125,000 are the results of a fire that destroyed the St. George hotel, a lodging house for laborers, at Howard and Eighth streets, and eight other small buildings.

The bodies taken to the morgue were so charred that identification was impossible.

The hotel was a three-story frame building and burned so rapidly that some of the 150 guests had time to dress, and many escaped by jumping to the roof of an adjoining workshop. Scores clamored down the ladders of the firemen and the fire escapes, and at least four jumped to safety into the net held by the fire fighters.

The St. George hotel was a flimsy structure, built as an emergency lodging house after the great fire of 1906.

Dixie Baptists Get New Mexico.

Washington.—New Mexico will be placed under the jurisdiction of the home mission board of the Southern Baptist Church, Arizona, which the southern church also sought to have annexed to its territory, will continue in the territory of the northern church, but five years from now it will be annexed by the southern board.

Ex-Governor Joseph M. Terrell, Dr. B. D. Gray, Samuel B. Jones, Dr. John E. Briggs, of Atlanta, and J. F. Love, of Dallas, Tex., representing the southern church, conferred with a committee of five members from the American Baptist Home Mission Society of the Northern Baptist Church, relative to mission work in these two territories, with the result announced above.

Governor Terrell accompanied the Atlanta members of the delegation to the white house, where the party shook hands with President Taft.

Cudahy Packing Company Fined.

Kansas City.—The Cudahy Packing Company, of Kansas City, was indicted on the charge of wholesale violations of the United States internal revenue laws. The charge is that the company has defrauded the government out of more than $80,000 in revenues on oleomargarine. The maximum fine of each of 737 counts is $1,000. City of Mexico, April 15.—According to a dispatch received in this city the rioting which occurred at Velarde, the big coal mining camp in the state of Coahuila, was more serious than at first reported, thirty-two men being killed and many injured.

Fourteen of the rioters have been summarily executed by the government troops and many imprisoned. Many Americans reside in Velarde, the camp being controlled by American capital.

The leaders of the mob, which was well organized, avoided attacking Americans, or destroying American property. The fighting occurred when the Jefe Politico of the town, an officer corresponding to a mayor, attempted to stop a religious procession headed by the village priest, the law of Mexico forbidding such parades. A thousand parishioners followed the priest, wishing to witness the annual burning of Judas, and when the orders of the town executive became known, the mob, becoming enraged, stormed a Chinese hotel, looting it of all liquors and foods, and terrorizing the neighborhood during the night, by their drunken orgy.

THE GRACEFUL ANTELOPE.

He Seems Born of Light and Mured In the Lap of the Wind. For me there have been no fairer days than when the antelope skimmed the plain with legs nebulous with speed on that low, gentle center whose deceptive motion left the best aimed bullet far behind. For the antelope is the only large animal that is wholly spirituelle. Graceful as he may seem when spurning the ground and swinging high over rocks and brush, to rebound like a ball at the next touch of earth, there is still something earthly about the deer. But the antelope seems born of light and mured in the lap of the wind. All his movements show that he was meant for the air rather than the earth. Though Nature made a slight change in giving him legs instead of wings, she made no mistake, and her work has always been the wonder and love of the hunter. When troubles arise the deer takes to the harbor of the hills, but the antelope steers for the open sea. The farther the plain sweeps wide and free the more this gay rover loves its safety, and a run that to the deer would mean death is to him only a "breather" that warms him up to the race. Whether blinding the horizon like a shooting star in the clear morning air of the great plain or looming high, like a stilted ghost in the mirage of glowing midday, he is the most charming of all things that run, and his passing has left a great void that nothing can fill. The few that are left, protected as they are, give no idea of the effect produced on a lover of the open by one of the great bands of the days that were, strung out in a film almost like vapor with distance and speed, and vanishing as if in air over the land's outlying verge.—T. S. Van Dyke in Recreation.

THE NUMBER SEVEN.

It Rarely Occurs in the Science of Weights and Measures. How would you define "seven"? The Standard Dictionary says it is "one more than six." Webster's calls it "one more than six or one less than eight." The abridged Webster says it is "five and two," and the Century's definition runs "one more than six; the sum of three and four." In metrology—that is, the science of weights and measures—seven is comparatively rare. The seven days of the week form a striking example of its use, however. Scholars have found, too, that the Egyptian cubit contained seven handbreadths. "Cubit" is from the Latin "cubitus," the elbow, or the distance from the elbow to the end of the middle finger. The Roman cubit was one and a half Roman feet or 17.4 English inches, but the royal Egyptian cubit, used in the building of the pyramids of Gizeh, perhaps 3500 B. C., has been learned from measuring sticks found in the tombs to have been 20.64 English inches. The ordinary cubit was divided into six palms or handbreadths, and the use of seven in the Egyptian cubit is ascribed by some investigators to a probable custom of placing the hand behind the elbow when measuring along walls with the forearm and leaving it on the wall until the arm was laid down again. It should be added that there are many other cubits of widely different values, both ancient and modern.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Rough on the Architect.

"When I got the order to design a big wholesale house for a firm that has stores in five cities besides New York naturally I was elated," said an architect. "I'll plan a building that is bound to be satisfactory," I said to myself, "and then they will give me the commission for those few stores they expect to put up in those other five cities." "Well, I did turn out a splendid store—a store that was admired by everybody in the wholesale trade. My patrons were pleased, too, but instead of giving me an order for those other buildings they simply used the same plans over and over again and built all their houses alike. That's what I call playing a low down trick on a fellow."—New York Globe.

MONEY-MAKING MADE EASY.

During these strenuous times one is at a disadvantage if sick or bilious. An occasional dose of St. Joseph's Liver Regulator (either liquid or powder) will strengthen and brighten the entire person, thus keeping one in trim for the battles of life. Druggists and dealers sell it, liquid, 50 cents a bottle; powder in tin boxes, 25 cents a box. Give it a trial and satisfy yourself of its splendid regulating qualities. Don't forget the name—"St. Joseph's." Take no other.

Health of this community is very good. Rev. F. M. Wood filed his regular appointment at Mt. Nebo Sunday and Sunday night, and preached good sermons to large congregations. I wish to say to the people of this and surrounding communities that they will please meet for the purpose of organizing a debate, Saturday night, April 24. All are invited to come and help us make it a success. A MEMBER.

West Chilton

Editor Banner—Will you please publish a short letter of inquiry? Old Mr. John L. Friday of West Chilton mysteriously disappeared from these parts on February 15th and has not been heard from since. He is an old Confederate soldier, draws a pension; has no family. He is about 66 years old, bald headed, dark eyes and dark complexion; crippled in his left side and always walked with a stick. He was a harmless, peaceable man, never bothered anyone nor anybody's business. When he was last seen, he boarded the north bound mail train at Dixie to go to Brierfield. Any information concerning him or his whereabouts will be thankfully received by me or his brother, Joel Friday. M. H. BARNES, Stanton, Ala., R. F. D. 1.

"I'd Rather Die, Doctor, than have my feet cut off," said M. L. Bingham of Princeton, Ill., "but you'll die from gangrene (which had eaten away eight toes) if you don't," said all doctors. In stead he used Bucklen's Arnica Salve till wholly cured. Its cures of eczema, fever sores, boils, burns and piles astounded the world. 25c at Upchurch Drug Co.

ALABAMA STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The State Sunday School Convention which will meet in Montgomery, April 27-28-29, is near at hand, and plans are being perfected to accommodate the vast throng who will attend.

Special rates. The railroads of the State have granted a rate of 3 cents per mile plus 25 cents for round trip tickets, which is only a fraction over half price. Tickets on sale April 25 and forenoon of April 27. Returning, tickets will be good until midnight Friday, April 30.

Delegates. All white Sunday schools of all denominations in the State are requested to send at least three delegates besides the pastor and superintendent. All ministers of the Gospel and superintendents are delegates by virtue of their office. When delegates are elected, names should be sent at once to Mr. R. O. Blakey, 26 Dexter Ave., Montgomery, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, who will provide homes.

Entertainment. All trains will be met in Montgomery by "The White Cap Committee" and delegates will be taken to headquarters. After registering, each delegate will be given a beautiful badge and assigned to homes at such rates as may be desired, at from $1.00 per day up. This is the same plan that worked so satisfactorily last year.

County officers conference and lunch together at 12 o'clock (noon) Thursday, 29th. All officers of the County and State Sunday School Association are requested to be present at this lunch. Mr. Marion Lawrence will be in charge of this conference.

D. W. SIMS, General Sec'y.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of Scott's Emulsion. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

Secretary of Commerce and Labor. Charles Nagel of St. Louis, the secretary of commerce and labor, is a lawyer of distinguished ability and long experience. He attracted wide attention not long ago when he withdrew from the employment of the Standard Oil company because it refused to follow his advice in the conduct of its case in Missouri, where, after his withdrawal, it was beaten.

Secretary Nagel is rated in St. Louis as a man of wealth. He has been highly successful in the practice of his profession.

profession, and he and Mrs. Nagel have maintained in St. Louis a domestic establishment in keeping with their means. Mrs. Nagel is the daughter of the late John Shepley. She married Mr. Nagel some fourteen years ago, when he was a widower with one daughter. Mrs. Nagel has four children, none of them yet full grown.

Although a native of Texas, Secretary Nagel has lived in St. Louis nearly all his life. He will be sixty years old next August. While Mr. Nagel was in Republican headquarters in Chicago last summer his advice as to methods of dealing with problems involving labor and capital were most highly regarded.

Pius X. and the Number 9. When Pius X. was elected to the supreme pontificate it was observed that the great events of his life have happened in periods of nine years. He was for nine years, from 1858 to 1867, the humblest of country curates at Tombolo; for nine years, from 1867 to 1876, the modest parish priest of the little town of Salzano; for nine years, from 1876 to 1884, canon of the Cathedral of Treviso; for nine years, from 1884 to 1893, bishop of the not very important see of Mantua. In 1893 he was preconized patriarch of Venice, but the Italian government refused to acknowledge him for a whole year, and it was only in 1894 that he made his solemn entrance into his new diocese, where he remained for nine years more until that pregnant July 26 when the patriarch stepped into his gondola from the piazza of St. Mark's and started for the conclave from which he was destined not to return.—Rope.

Head of War Department. To Jacob McGarvey Dickinson of Chicago, secretary of war, will fall the task of supervising the work at Panama, and Mr. Taft regards him as peculiarly qualified for the work. Mr. Dickinson is one of the ablest lawyers in the United States, was assistant attorney general under Cleveland, was counsel for the United States in the Alaskan boundary case, and when he accepted the war portfolio was general solicitor of the Illinois Central railway. He is regarded as one of the best administrators that railroad ever had.

The friends of Mrs. Dickinson express the opinion that she had a good deal to do with the decision of her husband to give up the $55,000 a year job of counsel to the Illinois Central railroad in order to accept the $12,000 at the head of the war department. Mrs. Dickinson is the daughter of General Overton and is related to some of the oldest families in the south. She is a woman of wealth in her own right, and her husband is also well to do. While the Dickinsons are not in the multimillionaire class, they could probably muster a round million. They maintain a residence in Tennessee and own the famous Belle Mead manor house, not far from Nashville. The new war secretary has always been known as a Democrat, but he has long been a close friend of President Roosevelt, and he and Mrs. Dickinson have often been entertained at the White House. Secretary Dickinson is a native of Mississippi and is fifty-eight years old.

JACOB M. DICKINSON.

THE FATE OF A THIEF

That Harry Hadden, who had stolen six years in the Flying Dutchman, should have been accused of stealing from his master was something almost incredible, for he was well liked and a thorough seaman.

Yet the evidence seemed indisputable. Red Hittler pipe had been found in his kit, and petty thieving had been going on for some time. His services were Gus Galtion, known as "Kanaka Gus," who had formerly been a petty thief among the Mooris. He was a man of sulky nature and revengeful disposition.

Mocking laughter followed Harry as he went into the forecabin after his kit. No one would help him, and he tagged his chest on deck and placed it where it would be out of the way. His clothing had been tumbled about in utter confusion, and as he stooped to arrange it something fell from the folds of a jacket. He picked it up with a cry and shouted to the mate: "Mr. Foster, will you come here?"

The mate approached, and Harry held up a ring of bone, carved in the shape of "a death's head." "Kanaka Gus" made a leap and tried to snatch it from his hand, but Harry dealt him a blow which sent him reeling to the deck.

"You see this, mate?" cried Harry. "Every one here knows that 'Kanaka Gus' never parted with this ring willingly. Now, as I have been openly accused, I ask justice. Let the chest of 'Kanaka Gus' be searched, and if more missing articles are not found I give you the right to call me a thief if you will."

"It is only fair," replied Mr. Foster. "Send a whip down into the forecabin and hoist Gus Galtion's chest on deck." The chest was hoisted on deck and opened, and one of the men began to hand out the articles it contained, making running comments as he did so.

"Why, it's a regular curiosity shop," Mr. Foster. Here's that pair of braces you lost and that six bladed knife. Here's a can of cavendish with Harry Matland's mark on the lid. Catch hold of this sheath knife, Ben Brace, and if you was to sink it into 'Kanaka Gus' two or three inches nobody would be very sorry. I guess we may as well beg Harry Matland's pardon, for this black and blue cuss is the thief."

There was a rush of furious men at "Kanaka Gus," but the mate waved them back.

"Take hold of him, Ben Brace. Hurry! Take him on the other side and bind him to the lee ratlines!"

The villain was quickly tied up, and the mate went into the cabin and called out the captain. He heard the story quietly.

"Give him forty," he said. "Flogging may be played out in the merchant service, but I'll take the law into my own hands."

Ben Brace took the cat and handed it to Harry, but he shook his head.

"I won't touch the thief," he said.

"Give me the cat," said Foster. "I'll touch him."

The cat whistled through the air and alighted upon the bare back of the thief. A yell of agony broke from his lips as the cat rose and fell. At the fortieth stroke the captain raised his hand and the man was let down.

Harry sent his kit back to the forecabin, and "Kanaka Gus" took his place on deck. Two days passed, and not a word was spoken to the detected thief.

The men passed him with averted faces, and his life was made a very hell to him. Harry never looked at him, and this cold scorn of his former messmates cut him worse than the cat. The second night came, and a sudden gale called all hands on deck and sent them aloft. It was pitch dark, and they could only feel their way along the yards. But the heavy sail was furled, and the men sprang upon the yard to reach the top. In the darkness Harry could not see who was working next to him; but, to his horror, as he grasped the hand rope and bore his weight upon the foot rope underneath he heard a hissing exclamation, and the rope parted under his feet. The weight of his body tore the hand rope out of one of the rings, and he hung suspended by his hands alone three feet below the yard. Just then the lightning flashed, and above him, in his hand, was the ominous figure of "Kanaka Gus."

"My turn!" he hissed as the blade of the knife approached the rope. "Down you go!"

Harry uttered a cry for help, when the sail suddenly flapped and struck the crouching form of the would be murderer, and before he could seize anything to stop himself he plunged headforemost into the darkness below. At the same moment a strong hand grasped Harry by the collar and raised him so that he could reach the points and drag himself up.

"Get into the tops," said the voice of Mr. Foster. "I saw the whole thing, and if ever a villain deserved death 'Kanaka Gus' was the man. Let him go."

The first time Captain Foster sailed a ship on his own account Harry was his first officer.

Patient Audience. "Say, who's your friend?" "I really don't know his name."

"But you have been talking to him for an hour."

"Yes; he seemed such a good listener."

"Well, Jinks just went by and told me that he was deaf and dumb."

Literary Classification. "Is that new dialect story a best seller?"

"No," answered the publisher, "merely by a worse seller."—Washington Star.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, quickness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say, that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to one use in a family. The large bottle contains 30 times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago. Upchurch Drug Co.

It is useless to say any more on the subject, Ezra. My decision is taken."

"Very well," replied Ezra, with a sigh, as he looked down at his wife, who stood before him, with defiance in every line of her pretty face. Her shoulders were thrown back and her right foot advanced, while her hands were clinched as if for a combat.

This ready acceptance of her expressed determination annoyed her. She had expected opposition and was prepared for fighting it from every standpoint. Her arguments had been carefully prepared to defeat anything he might say. And here he had accepted her decision without a word. He asked no concession, made no appeal. It was exasperating.

Ezra Robbins was six feet tall and big in proportion. Edna was a little under a woman, whom he could carry like a child in his strong arms. He loved her with a mighty love and cherished her with an infinite tenderness. He almost worshiped the girlish prettiness of her face with its pink cheeks, pale blue eyes, auburn blond hair and weak chin. All these traits appealed to his large nature as the tender beauty of a little child. Nothing that he could do for her was too hard or irksome.

Ezra had received next to no education, as his family had moved to California before there were schools and he had been obliged to work from almost his babyhood. His father had died, leaving him the ranch near the summit of the beautiful undulating hills just beyond Piedmont. Here he had brought his young bride.

Every comfort that he could obtain for Edna was purchased, and he was very happy in his protecting love and abounding tenderness. He loved her so entirely that he did not know or feel that her love for him was but a weak and attenuated sentiment of half contemptuous toleration.

For Edna Robbins had literary aspirations. She subscribed for the story papers, read Mrs. Braddon, Ouida and The Duchess. She longed to evolve books like those written by her favorite authors and to people them with such unreal characters as lived in those books. She would sit for hours in her darkened room trying to create a plot for a book where all the suffering heroines should live in sumptuous homes, wear diamonds and have damsel beauty.

While she was dreaming her dreams of unrealities in her room Ezra would wander to a place from which he could look down upon the scene before him—the beautiful San Francisco bay—a panorama surpassed nowhere on earth. He always turned his eyes toward the Golden Gate as the sun was setting to watch the last rays as it sank into the Pacific. After the sunset came the gorgeous glory of the gold fringed purple clouds. The last look was given to the Golden Gate itself, the rugged slopes of the broken hearted mountain that had been torn asunder by some unknown cataclysm of nature to open the gate to the hordes to come.

Alcatraz and Goat Island grew dim as the lights of the city across the bay burned out, and when the evening star and perhaps a thin silvery crescent hung down low over the San Francisco hills he would heave a sigh of deep content and return to the ranch with a sweet peace on his face and humble thankfulness for all that he had and had seen filling his heart so that his countenance beamed with the inner light of a great soul.

At such times he was unconsciously a true poet, with grand thoughts struggling for utterance and finding no outlet in words. But the glory and beauty of it all sank deep in his simple heart.

Edna wrote a little namby pamby story of an impossible hero and heroine. This story she sent to the editor of the local paper.

The editor thought that Edna was a fool, but he had received many services from Ezra when in hard luck, and what editor does not have his hours of dismay when every hair stands up straight? He corrected the grammar and punctuation and gave some attention to the orthography, but with a grim smile refrained from changing the story itself. Then he printed it, calling attention editorially to the new star in the literary firmament.

That settled it all. Edna felt that she was a genius—that there was no field for her in that desolate place. Once or twice Ezra tried blunderingly to show her the beauty of her surroundings, where nature has been more lavish of gracious gifts than in any other land, but in all that wonder she saw nothing worthy the attention of the great writer she was.

All she lacked was the atmosphere of a great city. New York was the center. There she wished to go, and alone. She did not wish to harness her genius to such a plain, ignorant companion as Ezra. No; she must be alone, and when she had achieved success and realized her ambition she would return—for a visit.

Dreams of honors to be showered upon her by the great ones of earth filled her head. In this lonely place she was lost, entombed with her genius. She did not say talent, but genius. Ezra had heard all her complaints until he knew them by heart. Dimly he felt that she was throwing away the substance for the shadow, but he had no words to voice his thoughts.

With all the obstinacy of a weak and foolish woman Edna clung to her idea, repeating it always in the same words and in the same monotonous tone, with her weak chin uplifted, until now unavailingly, when Ezra had said: "Very well."

Then she went to her room and began to pack.

Ezra went up to his comforting mandarin tree and threw himself down with his gaze fastened upon the Golden Gate and the little fleet of ships that were sailing in. His friends, the stars, came out while the silver moon hung low above the horizon and sank slowly out of sight. He half sobbed:

"Poor little thing! I don't blame her. She is too bright and clever and gifted for me anyway. I never had no chance to learn. If she will be happier—why, I ought to be too. Poor little motherless thing!"

Then two big tears suddenly sprang from his eyes, and a heart wrung sob was in his throat as he pictured to himself what the ranch would be without Edna.

When he went in she had finished packing and was sitting before the glass putting her front hair in curls. It was such soft, pretty hair, Ezra thought. He bent clumsily and took a wisp of it into his broad palm and lifted it softly to his lips. She considered this almost an impertinence and drew her head away, while Ezra said slowly:

"Edna, I want to say this—I'll stay here on the ranch, and—and if you ever want me you have only to send me word."

For answer she tossed her head. He continued:

"Today I drew all the money I had banked—a thousand dollars. Here it is. If you need more I'll send it when the crops are sold."

"I shall not need any more. And I will return this out of the profits on my 'Little Will o' the Wisp.' I only borrow it."

"Maybe there won't be no profits," hazarded Ezra.

"Oh, I wish you could learn to speak English properly," she replied, angered by his doubt. She had no doubts.

"And," she continued, "I may go to Europe. I have read that 'The Breadwinner' made a hundred thousand dollars for the author. And if such a silly book could do so well mine ought to do much better. Why, all the people in that book are just ordinary folks and don't do anything grand or heroic, and—well, I know mine is much better."

Ezra sighed, but said no more. Edna took the money.

Neither slept much that night. A week later Edna stood in New York. She began her search for a publisher. She wrote letters to the most prominent publishers, hinting of the great work she was ready to read them; for she determined not to let her precious manuscript out of her hands. She dressed well, arranged her rooms—rooms then—and waited for the publishers to come. She hoped they would not fight each other. No one even replied to her letters. But why tell in detail the story of her long waiting, her cruel disappointments, the cold refusals—later and worse, the return of her books without comment or regret? She had learned that she must trust to the publishers, after all.

She learned many a hard lesson during the next few years, but with the superlative obstinacy of her nature she persisted in her belief of her own genius. She wrote hopeful letters to her husband and never told of her defeat.

Her money was all gone. She moved to one little attic room and peddled cosmetics for awhile, then addressed circulars, living, or, rather, existing, most miserably. Her garments were shabby, her shoes distressful and her hat disreputable.

At last even the circulars failed her. She was cold and hungry. Without money she had still been hopeful. The day would come when she would ride in her carriage. Did not true genius always suffer? There were six books awaiting a publisher, all written along the same lines.

But on this day she really did lose her courage. There is nothing like cold and hunger to develop despondency. She thought as the rain dripped down icy cold from a leaden sky of the ranch out in California. How sunny it was! How the trees were bending now with their weight of fruit! How the grapevines were covered with great purple bunches, hanging and sweet! How rich the milk was and how thick and yellow the cream and how sweet the butter! She had not tasted butter for a long time, and as she thought she was almost ready to say, "I will arise and go to my father."

Suddenly she began to cry—not a burst of noisy tears, but a low, quiet weeping without even a sob.

In her morning's paper she had read of a new western author who had drawn his inspiration from the very Piedmont hills where her home was. There was an extract, and this seemed to speak to her in her husband's own voice and say the same things of the place that she had heard him say so often. It was a word picture of all that could be seen from that spot up under the mandarin. She could smell the waxy blossoms and see the rich masses of the golden poppies that fairly crowded each other. She could hear the yellow linnet, see the wild rabbits scattering in the bushes. She saw the droll little gophers as they put their noses out, saw the broad bay—ah, it was too much! She was seized with a sudden homesickness. She would write to Ezra, and he would send her money. But could she live until the letter could reach her?

Defeat was written all over her. Ten years had left its impress on her face, her hair, her form. Maybe he would not care to have her back! Then more tears.

"NOW—THIS MINUTE!" SAID EDNA.

She began a letter to Ezra when there was a strange, heavy step on the rickety stairs which was yet curiously familiar. She stood up, listening. She was very pale. Opening the door in response to the knock, she stood facing her husband.

"Ezra!" she faltered weakly.

"Edna, my dear, I couldn't stand life without you any longer."

She fell into his arms to be strained to his heart while she sobbed:

"Oh, Ezra, I am so unhappy! I am a failure. My books are good for nothing. They are not true. I was writing to you to ask you to go home."

Then they sat and talked of the dear old ranch and many other things. Edna noticed something new, more alert, deeper and stronger in Ezra's manner and dimly fancied he used much better language than before and chose his words with more discrimination.

She showed him the extract in the paper from the book that had made her so homesick.

"What will you say, Edna, when I tell you that I wrote that book? I was so lonesome after you went that I thought I'd study some to pass the time. I had a teacher up on the ranch four years, and then I kept on reading and studying, and suddenly, almost without knowing how I did it, I began the book, and here is your copy."

"Oh, Ezra, I was writing only dreams! I see it now, and you have written truths. Oh, I am ashamed!"

"Well, you needn't be. You are the cleverest, sweetest and best girl in the world. When shall we start?"

"Now—this minute!" said Edna.

One Virtue of Art.

The greater number of us are condemned by circumstance of income and the routine of duty to a life restrained by walls, streets and the more or less flexible bounds of the community. The greater world without is defined by such impressions as the books and the newspapers and the chance travelers make upon our imaginations. When the opportunity of vacation or enforced travel takes us into country and cities thus described, we learn how awry and colorless these initial impressions have been.

The life that goes on within our own walk must ever be narrow in this sense—that the mind can never recreate all of any scene brought to us by others. The painter, as skillfully as the musician, can catch movement, light and poetry and can present them, so far as they may be reproduced, to the senses of the beholder. His expertness at this is often weird, uncanny. At least a half dozen pictures can make one feel as if present in the scene, a thing impossible to the photograph or to any other of the graphic arts. This, we believe, is a valuable quality of art. It can bring a relief from the dulling rule of duty. It can impart a touch of the buoyancy of travel. It can, to employ a hackneyed but fitting phrase, take one out of oneself.—Toledo Blade.

Make One Acre Give a Two-Acre Yield

The experiment station in this state has proven that most farm lands will double their yield per acre through the use of proper fertilizers and simple, common sense farming. (Proper rotation of crops.) Most fertilizer failures are due to poor fertilizers and guess-work in buying. Your soil may need more nitrogen, or phosphoric acid, or more potash, and simply dumping fertilizer on it won't restore these elements. You must enrich the soil with the fertilizers teeming with the plant food that your soil needs and in the correct proportion of phosphoric acid, potash, nitrogen, etc.

BIGBEE'S High Grade Fertilizers

are compounded after rigid soil tests to meet the exact conditions of Southern farm lands. No matter what elements your soil requires—there is a brand of Bigbee's High Grade Fertilizers to furnish them in the exact proportion needed. They are especially adapted to cotton, tobacco, corn, etc. Through judicious use of Bigbee's Fertilizers former barren acreage all over the state is now yielding bumper crops of the South's great staples—an eloquent testimonial to their worth.

CAME ON THE JUMP.

A Signal That Brought the Busy Waiters in a Body.

To get a waiter quickly is a big call in at times very difficult, but a Germantown man recently learned a method from a New York friend which is guaranteed instantly to bring not one but several waiters. This Germantown man was giving a dinner in one of Philadelphia's swiftest cafes, with the New Yorker and two women as his guests. After a long delay a waiter came and took the order. Then one of the women decided that she must make a change in her order. The host signalled one waiter after another without avail. After about ten minutes of violent gesticulating on his part the New Yorker said:

"You don't know how to attract their attention. I'll bet you $5 I can bring a waiter to this table within thirty seconds."

"I'll take the bet," said the Philadelphia, drawing out his watch. The New Yorker reached over into the middle of the table, picked up a thin, delicate glass and deliberately dashed it to the floor. Instantly every waiter in the room came rushing up to see what was the trouble.

"Charge one tumbler up on the bill," said the New Yorker laconically, "and change one of those oyster orders to Blue Points."

As the waiters dispersed he added, "I guess you owe me a five spot, old man."—Philadelphia Record.

How to Cure Your Piles

Due Often To Carelessness or Neglect and Stubborn to Cure

"The knife is not always necessary to cure even desperate cases of piles," says a physician whose years and experience make him an authority. "Indeed," he says further: "I have known some very aggravated cases of long standing cured by a simple home remedy that restored to the bowels easy natural daily movements."

And the doctor is right, as many letters from cured people in various parts of the country prove. If sufferers from piles, rectal tumors and ulcers would try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin they would often save themselves the terrible pain and danger and the heavy expense of a severe surgical operation.

Piles are often due to constipation and are always aggravated by it. Easy natural movements of the bowels such as are invariably produced by this famous laxative without pain or gripe do much to restore a normal, healthy condition to the bowels and thus cure piles.

M. H. Miller, Monticello, Ill., says: "I have been troubled all my life with piles brought on by constipation. I tried many doctors and numerous remedies, but found no relief until I used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. I have used it as a laxative and stomach remedy for the past nine years and have no more troubles with piles." H. N. John, Minneapolis, Kan., says he suffered for four years with piles which were so bad that he could not work. Four bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin cured him, and he says he has not been bothered since.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a safe, sure remedy for constipation, restoring easy natural daily movements in the worst old chronic cases, yet so mild and pleasant to take mothers give it to their babies with splendid results. It is sold by all druggists at 50c and $1.00 per bottle. People's Syrup Co., 315 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill., will send a free sample to anyone who has not used it and will give it a fair trial.

Text, Acts vi, 25—Commentary Prepared by Rev. E. M. Stearns.

Copyright, 1908, by American Bible Association.

In Acts vii, 1-4, we read that the persecution at the time of Stephen's martyrdom led to the scattering abroad from Jerusalem of all the disciples except the apostles and that they went everywhere preaching the Word. The lesson today begins just there with the statement that they which were scattered abroad went as far as Phoenice and Cyprus and Antioch, preaching the word to Jews only, but that some at Antioch spoke to the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus, and that a great number believed and turned to the Lord. That was a blessed scattering which sent the good news so far from Jerusalem, but we cannot help wondering if the disciples had been obedient to Acts i, 8, might the persecution have at that time been avoided, and yet persecution was what they were taught to expect (Matt. x, 23; John xv, 20). Well the fact stands that God expects us to be obedient, for only as we are so He can accomplish His pleasure in us (Isa. i, 19). If there was a great scattering today of true believers to all the dark places of the earth, how soon the church, the body of Christ, might be gathered from all nations!

When the church at Jerusalem heard the tidings from Antioch they sent to inquire about it, and it was fortunate that they sent the man they did, for he had eyes to see the grace of God in others than Jesus and a heart to love all who loved the Lord. To this very day in this twentieth century, after the birth of the Messiah, it is not difficult to find those who cannot see any grace of God in any outside of their own denomination. A visit from some Barnabas, full of the Holy Ghost and of faith, would do them good if they would listen to such a one. Barnabas was glad to see the work of the Spirit in these people, and his exhortation was that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord, not to the one who had led them to the Lord, but to the Lord Himself. We are in a time of great following of men, but things will not be right till the Lord alone is exalted (Isa. li, 11, 17).

As we come in verse 25 to Saul and the visit of Barnabas to Tarsus to find him we had better pick up the threads of his story since his conversion. Having seen and heard the risen Lord Jesus, there was no conferring with flesh and blood after the visit of Ananias, but he went off into Arabia, perhaps like Elijah to Horeb, for further communion with God.
Then he returned to Damascus, confounding the Jews, thereby proving that Jesus was indeed the Messiah.
They sought to kill him, but the disciples took him by night and let him down by the wall in a basket, and he made his escape to Jerusalem. There was no welcome awaiting him there, the disciples being afraid of him, and it was not until Barnabas took him and spoke on his behalf that the disciples were willing to receive him as one of them. As he spoke boldly at Jerusalem in the name of the Lord Jesus, his life was soon in danger there also, so the brethren took him to Caesarea and sent him to Tarsus. If we cannot quite fit into their proper places his experiences of chapters xxii, 17-21; Gal. i, 18, 19, we can accept the record as it stands and adore the grace of God, which so cared for and guided him, and imagine the fellowship which he and Peter must have had those fifteen days at Jerusalem.
He began early in his career as a child of God to experience something of the sufferings to which he had been called and to which he afterward referred quite fully in II Cor. xi, 23-33, where he seems to consider even his manner of escape from Damascus as an infirmity.

Barnabas, his faithful friend, having found him at Tarsus, brought him to Antioch, and for a whole year they abode there, teaching the people, teaching them to observe all things that Jesus had commanded, and so doubt enjoying a fulfillment of His assurance, "Ye, I am with you all the days, even unto the end of the age" (Matt.
xxviii, 20). These must have been blessed days for the believers at Antioch, who must have greatly grown in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ under such teachers. Here the disciples were first called Christians, perhaps because their lives made it so manifest that they belonged to Christ. We may at least think on a dear man of God now in glory once said to me that in him "Christ-like-ness" suggested Christ in all; I am nothing. Paul wrote in Gal.
ii, 20, "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me."

Prophecy from Jerusalem having testified by the Spirit of the need of the believers there to temporal things, the believers at Antioch determined to send relief to them, each man contributing according to his ability, not grudgingly, but cheerfully, as unto the Lord Himself. We are not expected to do what we cannot do, but simply to minister as of the ability which God gives, knowing that if there be true willingness and if it be accepted according to that a man hath (II Cor. ix, 7; I Pet. iv, 10). "Do as thou hast seen Paul, for God is with thee" (I Sam. x, 7, margin).

Soldiers Home

Editor Banner—Notwithstanding a continuous rain throughout the day, memorial services were observed here on Sunday evening.
An interesting program was arranged for the occasion, consisting of songs, music, recitations, and an oration by Capt. A. T. Goodwyn, of Robinson Springs. After prayer,
a song "Nearer my God to thee."
Mrs. Jennie Snyder presided at the organ, accompanied by Prof. Rasimi on the violin. "The conquered banner" was most feelingly recited by Mrs. Tom Raoul of Montgomery, and "The sword of Lee" was imitably recited by little Miss Lettitia Tyler McNeel of Montgomery. Miss Ruth Roper, also of Montgomery, impressively recited
"Little Griffin of Tennessee."
A solo on the violin by Prof.
Rasimi, "Happy days of yore," was greatly enjoyed by all.

Not having secured an orator for the occasion, Capt. Goodwyn was pressed into service and made a most interesting and captivating impromptu address.

The services were concluded with a song, "God be with you till we meet again," and a prayer by Commandant Simpson, who presided over the meeting.

As it was such a rainy day, announcement was made that the decoration of the graves would be deferred until the next day, which part of the program was carried out under favorable conditions, Monday evening. The grave of Col. Falkner was suitably decorated with a profusion of flowers.

I hope they will soon have a game

Say, boys, it is fishing time again. I see Buster Boy is fishing

EASTER

On Easter Sunday, the young people enjoyed themselves at an Easter egg hunt, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Edwards.
After which refreshments were served, consisting of ice cream, cake, chocolate, soda water, lemonade, fruits, etc. There were about sixty or more that participated in the egg hunt, and we had a most delightful time. We thank Mr.
and Mrs. Edwards for their hospitality, for they took great pride in making the day one of enjoyment and pleasure to the young folks.
The day will be one of remembrance to many of us.

Best Seven

Editor Banner—If you will give us room, we will write a few lines from this part. The general health of this community is tolerable good Autanga; writers want to know how the bottom land and rocky hills are. Some of the bottoms look like a little river as it has rained very hard all day. When it is too wet to plow there is plenty to do. I know a man that tends the bottom that made $7 in two days hauling ties, and one day he made $4 moving a man. So you see when he can't plow he has patience until he can plow. He has a fine garden and can pickle if he wants to.

Jennie Adams, Sam and Fred Mc-Gee and Farmer Shoults went to Wilton recently.

The bottoms are not planted yet,
but I suppose they will get dry enough to plant, and every thing will go on alright.

We are just in a dread about the stock law; we are wondering what will become of the poor man that has no land and wants to rent land and keep a few cattle. It is surprising to think a man is in favor of stock law. I guess there will be more people going to public works than ever before.

Alonso Burnett's family.

Shiloh

IN MEMORY.

On April 20, the death angel visited the home of Mr. E. B. Owen and carried away his beloved son, who had been sick for four days.
He leaves a father, mother and four sisters, six brothers and a host of friends and relatives to mourn his loss. He was the oldest son and would have been 20 years old his next birthday. But the Lord knows best. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh. He has gone to that beautiful home above where pain, nor sorrow, nor death will enter no more. Oh we loved him, yes we loved him, but the Savior loved him more. He can't come back to us, but we can go to him. Weep not, dear ones, for he is at rest. His remains were laid to rest in Shiloh cemetery, Bro. T. J. Deason conducting the funeral.
His Cousin.

The special session of the Legislature is still a possibility of the future. It may come this summer and it may never come.

PLENTY of rain these last few days, but cotton planters in Chilton have been busy just the same.

Spring term of circuit court convenes at Clanton Monday week, with lots of business before it.

The way the corn-growing proposition is spreading throughout the south is encouraging, for it presages good for the farmers. If they find that they can raise a large crop on one acre, it will be an object lesson for their own good in the future.—Advertiser.

Clanton, Ala.

In order to expedite the delivery, collection, and dispatch of rural mail, enable rural carriers to cover their routes with celerity, and give the earliest possible service to patrons residing on the far ends of routes, the Department will insist that all rural mail boxes be so located as to be served with the greatest expedition.

You are, therefore, directed to require each rural carrier at your office to submit to you without delay, for transmission to the Department, the names of all patrons whose boxes cannot be served with out leaving the road, dismounting, driving into deep ditches or on steep inclines, or on or across railway tracks involving danger, or the approaches to whose boxes are obstructed. It is not required that boxes shall be erected beside the wheel tracks nor on any particular corner of the crossroad; but they must be erected within the confines of the road, and accessible, on any corner.

It is not desirable that boxes be attached to telegraph, telephone or electric light poles, or to fences or buildings, but boxes should be securely fastened to neat and strong posts firmly set at the side of the roads, at a sufficient height to be served by carriers without rising from their seats, or reaching through wheel spokes.

After boxes have been properly relocated, and it is practicable to curtail carriers' schedules, postmasters will advise this office, so that changes in schedules may be considered.

When roads are in bad condition postmasters are directed to make report thereof to the Department, and to the proper local road officials and cooperate with them and patrons to the fullest extent, consistent with position and duty, to secure the improvement of the roads. The manifestation of interest and properly directed efforts by postmasters in the good-roads question will in many instances be productive of excellent results.

Respectfully,
P. V. DEGRAW,
4th Asst. Postmaster General.

Therefore, according to said command, I shall expose for sale, at public auction, all the right title and interest of the above named Mrs. A. Burk, in and to the above described property, on SATURDAY the 9th day of MAY, 1909, during the legal hours of sale, at the Court House door, in Clanton, Ala. Dated at Clanton, Ala., this 28th day of April, 1909. JOHN S. CARTER, Sheriff Chilton County, Ala.

MR. W. L. WELLS IS DEAD.

Mr. W. L. Wells, one of the most prominent citizens of Vicksburg, died at 2 o'clock this morning at his residence, 420 South Cherry street.

Mr. Wells was taken seriously ill the early part of last week. He was treated by Dr. R. A. Quin of this city, and on Tuesday morning Dr. J. B. Elliott, Jr., was called here to see the patient, and remained with him until Wednesday night a week ago, when he returned to New Orleans. He suffered with Bright's disease which brought about his death.

Mr. William L. Wells was born in Clanton, Alabama, August 21st, 1855, his father being Mr. Kenyon D. Wells. In the year 1876 Mr. Wells went to Texas to make his home and came to Vicksburg to live in 1885.

He was married in the year 1880 to Miss Emma Deupree of Noxubee county and their immediate family consists of the following children: Mrs. A. L. McKee of Greenville, formerly Miss Elizabeth D. Wells; Kenyon D. Wells, Charles W. Wells, W. L. Wells, Jr., and Danella Wells.

Mr. Wells is also survived by his mother, who resides in Clanton, Ala.; two sisters who live in Alabama, and one in Brooksville, Miss.; and a brother, John T. Wells of Jackson, formerly of Vicksburg. All of the immediate family were with Mr. Wells at the time of his death except W. L. Wells, Jr., who has been attending college at Lawrenceville, N. J., and who left there Tuesday upon telegraphic information sent that his father was in a critical condition. His brother, Mr. John T. Wells, came to Vicksburg several days ago upon learning of his serious illness.

Mr. Wells stood among the leading cotton men of Vicksburg, having been engaged in that business under the firm name of W. L. Wells & Co., ever since he came here to reside. He was a prominent member of the Cotton Exchange and had served that organization as president several times, and always manifested a deep interest in its advancement and welfare. His business judgement was recognized by all of his trade associates, and was joined with an integrity that was never questioned. On these two qualities, which won him the respect of all, he based a highly successful commercial career. He was a director of the Merchants National Bank.

Although a man of reserved manner, except to a few of his closest associates, the deceased gentleman was a most considerate and sincere friend, devoted father and husband and his death is indeed a most keenly felt loss to the community. On all public issues he stood for progress and improvement, for law and order. I religion Mr. Wells was an earnest member of the First Baptist church. He belonged to the Elks and the Country Club of Vicksburg, and the Boston and Pickwick Clubs of New Orleans.—Vicksburg Daily Herald.

THE USEFUL PIG.

A Colored Woman's Story of a Trade and Its Results.

A colored woman was being examined at a conference at Tuskegee. "Do the people in your community own hogs?" came the query from Mr. Booker Washington.

"I think they're fixing to own 'em, sah."

"But do they own them?"

"A heap of times you can't just tell, sah. But they're holding 'em down."

"Do you own your hogs?"

"Yes, sah, I do," proudly. "And I can tell you just how I got it. I swapped a puppy dog for it."

"Tell us about it."

"Well, it was this way. When I started I didn't have anything at all but just a little yaller puppy dog."

"I took the dog over to my brother-in-law's. He had eight little bits of pigs, oh, just so little, and I swapped the puppy with him for one of the pigs. It was such a little pig that it didn't look like it would live, but I nursed it good, and I prayed to the Lord to make that little pig come forward to do me good, and the pig lived and grew."

"The first year I turned her out, and when she came back in the fall she brought me seven little pigs with her. That was my start. I've never had to buy any more since. This winter I've killed three hogs, and I've got another at home now ready to kill. I've got forty acres of land now, all paid for, and a house, and it all come from that one little puppy."

"Do you hear that," exclaimed Mr. Washington, "you men? Some of you'd better go back home and swap your dogs for pigs!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE GREAT PYRAMID.

It illustrates the Wonderful Ability of the Ancient Egyptians.

The cost of the labor and material necessary to duplicate the great pyramid of Gizeh at the present time would amount to considerably more than $50,000,000, according to a paper read before the Society of Engineers in New York city by E. S. Wheeler, says the American Architect. The cost of the material alone is estimated at $48,000,000.

This structure, one of the wonders of the world, is founded on solid rock at a depth of about 120 feet below the surface level and rises to a height of 454 feet. Its base covers an area of almost fifteen acres.

Mr. Wheeler's scheme for the reproduction of this pyramid contemplates first the setting of a base of concrete. This would represent about 2,000,000 cubic yards of material and would cost at least $10,000,000. The estimate for the superstructure is about $38,000,000, and it would contain 3,313,000 cubic yards of backing stone and 140,000 cubic yards of facing stone. Mr. Wheeler's estimate of labor is 24,000,000 days.

These figures are cited to show the great engineering skill of the Egyptians and the fact that no task in construction appeared to be too large for a people whose extant monuments showed their patience and ability to overcome obstacles that would daunt even the modern engineer.

LANGUAGE OF MUSIC.

The Manner in Which It Appeals to the Human Heart.

To those musical agnostics who deny to music any beauties save those of design and maintain that of itself it cannot express ideas and feelings Redfern Mason makes appropriate reply.

But there is another side to the picture. What was it that made George II. rise in his place when they sang the "Hallelujah" chorus, thereby setting an example which is followed to this day? What was it in the finale of the fifth symphony that drew the Napoleon veteran to his feet with the exclamation, "The emperor?" What sanctity in the Ambrosian hymns moved St. Augustine to tears?

During the wars of the French revolution it was forbidden, on pain of death, to play the "Ranz des Vaches" in the hearing of the Swiss soldiers, for so acute a longing for home did it bring upon them that they deserted in hundreds. Are we to think that there was no virtue in the music itself and that the effect produced was the outcome of purely accidental circumstances?

The Austrian government forbade Berlioz to play the "Rakoczy" march at Budapest, fearful of its effect on the inflammable Hungarians. Was the fire of patriotism kindled by the mere knowledge that the melody symbolized Hungary, or did the notes speak with tongues of flame?—Atlantic Monthly.

Men Who Cheat Themselves.

I have known employees actually to work harder in scheming, shirking, trying to keep from working hard in the performance of their duties, says Orison Sweet Marden in Success Magazine, than they would have worked if they had tried to do their best and had given the largest, the most liberal service possible to their employers. The hardest work in the world is that which is grudgingly done. The youth who is always haggling over the question of how many dollars and cents he will sell his services for little realizes how he is cheating himself by not looking at the larger salary he can pay himself in increasing his skill, in expanding his experience and in making himself a better, stronger, more useful man.

"Women are not what they used to be." "Certainly not. They used to be girls."

How They Struck Oil

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1921, by American Press Association.

HAD Cicely's aunt died and left her the farm in midwinter, when the mercury stood at zero and the wind was howling around the street corners, it is more than probable that the outcome would have been different.

But the news of her inheritance reached her early in the spring, when the buds were swelling on the trees and the corner groceryman was selling radishes not as big as the end of your thumb for five cents a bunch—five in a bunch. It was the radishes that finally decided Cicely. She had heard of women who had made fabulous sums out of just such radishes, together with lettuce and peas and new laid eggs and young broilers. Cicely was filled with a strong desire to go and do likewise.

She resigned from the kindergarten where she taught, and she induced her dearest friend, Madge Carter, who worked in a downtown office, to do likewise. Madge had been born on a farm, so naturally she would be a most desirable partner in the chicken raising and truck gardening industry.

On the journey Cicely was dreamy and pensive. Occasionally she wept a little. She had never liked her aunt, and she had feared her dislike returned with interest. Now she suffered the pangs of remorse.

When after two days and nights of travel they reached the farm she wept again, tears of good, honest rage.

"I always knew Aunt Harriet disliked me," she wailed, "but I didn't suppose she hated me like this."

The outlook was certainly discouraging. The farm was for the most part rocks, the kind that go deep down under the surface and multiply as they go. The house was no bigger than it should be to shelter two people and no better than it had to be to keep from tumbling down over their heads.

Madge undoubtedly would have wept, too, had she not recognized the necessity for at least one of them keeping up a good, stiff front.

When Cicely's angry sobs had subsided into pathetic gulps they started on a tour of investigation. Flowers or shrubbery there were none and but one tree, a forlorn and stunted maple with a few sickly green leaves struggling out in its bare branches. Half a dozen bedraggled fowls were scratching about its roots, and a dejected mule was biting at its lower branches. He was thin and hungry looking, but in him Madge saw possibilities.

"He's our only hope," she said. "We'll fatten him up and sell him. Perhaps he'll bring enough to get us back home."

Cicely sniffed dolefully, and they went back to the house. At the back door they found a man waiting for them. He said his name was Victor Ellwood and that he lived on the farm next theirs. He was a young fellow, tall and broad shouldered. His hands were the hands of one who toils, and his face was tanned by sun and wind. But his eyes were humorous and kindly, and his smile warmed you through and through. His arms were full of suggestive brown paper packages.

"Some groceries the last people left here," he explained. "I took them home with me for—safe keeping."

He was drawing somewhat upon his imagination, but the two girls, lonely

"Then," said Mr. Ellwood, "with your permission I'll take this home with me. You see," he explained, "I have a lawn, and if I'll cut the grass for me it will save cutting it."

Madge thanked him and turned him to stay for supper. In view of the fact that he had furnished the supper she could not well do otherwise, even had she so desired, which most emphatically she did not.

He looked at Cicely a good deal while they ate—Cicely was very good to look upon—but his conversation was addressed for the most part to Madge. As a matter of fact, it had to be that way. Cicely's accumulated woes pressed so heavily upon her that she was utterly incapable of anything beyond an occasional subdued "Yes" and "No."

Madge, however, chatted gaily. To her mind the situation was decidedly tolerable and growing more so every minute. And when next she looked upon the bleak vista of rocks that made up the immediate landscape she found it almost attractive.

"The only hope," observed Madge, "has come home again."

Cicely joined her in the doorway. "And he's thinner than ever," she declared pessimistically.

Then Mr. Ellwood came into view. He was doing an elaborate imitation of a man who has been running fast.

"He got loose," he panted. "And I've been following."

"Yes," Madge broke in gaily. "I know you have. I've been watching you down the road for the last five minutes." She waved a hand toward the mule. "I never in all my life," she said, "saw anybody so reluctant to take advantage of a handicap. How on earth did you induce him to get here first?"

Mr. Ellwood had the grace to blush. "It—it's a very warm day," he stammered, tactfully trying to shift the conversation to a safe topic of general interest.

"It is," Madge agreed. "And I don't believe so much exercise is good for the mule. Besides, it will take a lot of your time to lead him home with you every night and drive him back here every morning. Why don't you bring his meals to him?"

"Every day?" inquired Mr. Ellwood hopefully.

"Well, I really think he ought to be fed every day, but I'll leave that to you."

Cicely, who wondered miserably at her friend's high spirits, had retired into the other room, mopping her eyes. "She doesn't like it," Madge observed confidentially to Mr. Ellwood.

"And no wonder," he rejoined sympathetically. "You're going to stay?" he asked.

"We must," said Madge, "for we've no money to get away on. And anyway," she added after a moment's pause, "I believe it isn't going to be half bad."

"If I can help it," said Mr. Ellwood heartily, "it's not."

He was as good as his word, and better. For Cicely brought a ham-mock and flowers in pots and many little comforts that helped to render her life more tolerable. He treated her as might an elder brother a lovable but incapable sister.

But Madge was his comrade and friend. She had assumed the burdens Cicely was incapable of bearing, and he very naturally thought her the owner of the farm. He liked her pluck that wrested her hardly won garden from the rocky soil and her sturdy independence that always returned favor for favor. His own little place took on an added value because she had approved it. He gave the house a new coat of paint and planned when the crops should have been harvested to build a bigger porch. And he evolved little conveniences for the kitchen, shelves and closets and a flour bin, things of which his masculine housekeeping had not felt the need. He whistled as he worked, and before him there was ever a girl's face, a laughing face growing daily rosier and more sunburned—and happier.

"The only hope," observed Cicely complacently, "is certainly growing fat. If we could sell him by the pound as they do 'beef on the hoof,' I think they call it, we'd get quite a lot for him."

"He's too fat," Madge objected. "He looks stuffed. I think you feed him too much, Cicely. If Mr. Ellwood were at home I'd ask him to take a look at him. I'm quite certain his eyes ought not to have that glassy stare."

Later in the day the only hope succumbed.

"I don't really blame him for dying," said Cicely, who was weeping over the remains. "I suppose he was just naturally tired and discouraged and didn't care whether he lived or died—I've felt that way myself—but I do think it was most inconsiderate of him."

"He might at least," said Madge, "have gone off and done it somewhere else. Then we could have pretended he wasn't ours. As it is, we'll have to bury him, and how on earth we're ever going to dig a hole big enough to hold him I'm sure I don't know."

"We'll leave it to Mr. Ellwood," Cicely suggested. "We can wait till he gets back."

"I suppose we can," said Madge, "but there are reasons why the only hope cannot. I'm going to the village to secure expert assistance."

It was growing dusk when she returned. She was dusty and disheveled, but in her eyes was the light of triumph.

"I have exchanged half the chickens," she announced, "for a stick of dynamite and a man to set it off. The only hope has played us a shabby trick, but he's going to have a first class funeral, little as he deserves it."

The next morning the man came, bringing the dynamite. The explosion rent the rocks and shattered all the visions. Then things began to happen.

"There's such a powerful odor," said Madge, who was first to venture out of doors. "Don't you notice it, Cicely?"

But Cicely, divining what had happened, thrust her friend aside and sped on ahead. Madge found her staring down into a ragged hole from which there came up something that decidedly was not water.

Cicely turned and threw herself into the other girl's arms.

"Oh, Madge," she cried hysterically. "Oh, Madge, we've struck oil! The only hope has saved us!"

"I'll make you a mint of money," said Mr. Ellwood gaily.

"You don't seem at all glad," said Madge, who always went straight to the heart of things.

"I'm not," said Mr. Ellwood bitterly. "You'll be rich, and you'll go away."

Nietzsche and the Invalid.

An invalid lady who often met Nietzsche found him the gentlest, kindest and most sympathetic of men. He "implored her with tears in his eyes not to read his books." Such was his knowledge of women that he was thunderstruck to find shortly afterward that the lady at once proceeded to read them all. He was further stupified by the discovery that, having read them, she was utterly unmoved by the philosopher's unanswerable demonstrations that feeble persons like herself had no right to live and that women were distinguished by this, that and the other objectionable attributes. It must have been a blow to him.—London News.

Odd Cures For Rheumatism.

Cures for rheumatism are almost as old as the complaint itself. In the midland counties of England it was formerly considered that the right forefoot of a hare, worn constantly in the pocket, was an amulet against rheumatism. While the Dutch peasant still cherishes a belief in the preservative virtues of a borrowed or stolen potato. Stranger than these, however, was the remedy discovered by a servant girl at the village of Stanton, in the Cotswolds, who contrived to be confirmed three times, in the belief that confirmation was an unfailing cure for rheumatism.

The Cowcatcher.

How to Cure Constipation

Simple Home Remedy That Is Safe and Pleasant

Few people escape constipation. Catching cold, over eating, worry, lack of exercise, failure to answer promptly the calls of nature, dissipated or weakened system or strong medicines may cause it. The too common practice of taking salts, or pills or some such violent cathartic has always done more harm than good. They make the bowels act quickly and violently simply because they irritate them, and leave them in a worse condition than before.

What is needed is a mild easy herb laxative, that gives regular daily movements in all cases, yet does not pain or gripe, and which will strengthen the bowels and tone up the system instead of depleting it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin taken at night before going to bed will bring an easy pleasant natural movement in the morning even in the most obstinate cases and without any bad effects. No pain, no gripe and it is so safe and pleasant to take, mothers give it to their babies with splendid results. It is an aid to digestion and tones up the system as well as cures bowel trouble. Dr. L. H. Covey, Savannah, Tenn., writes: "I get better results from it than any Pepsin I ever used."

Dr. T. Jones, Osgood, Mo., says: "I consider Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin the best of all laxatives." Mrs. Almon Willis, Jamaica, Va., says: "I truly believe it saved my little boy's life."

Rev. A. J. Fletcher, Rutherford, Tenn., says: "I am 80 years old and my Syrup Pepsin has cured me of dyspepsia and bowel trouble."

W. D. Jackson, Burns Station, Tenn., says: "I was afflicted with constipation and dyspepsia for nine years, and found no relief until I used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin." All druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

We are glad to send a free sample to any reader of this paper who has never used it and will give it a fair trial. Write today to Pepsin Syrup Co., 305 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Had None to Spare.

The boy had been taking piano lessons for just a week. Then his mother went to the musical college, hunted up his teacher and complained that, though her son had received three lessons, he could not yet play a single tune. The instructor politely explained that it was necessary to first teach scales, then exercises and after these were mastered his mother's wish could be gratified. The fond parent was not satisfied, but she concluded to try it awhile longer. At the end of another week she was back again and loud in her denunciation of the teacher and his methods because, so far as she could see, her son had made no advancement.

"Well, madam," said the exasperated professor, "I can teach your boy something, but I cannot give him brains."

"No," answered the mother scornfully, "you poor man, you don't look as if you had any to spare."

Civility of Cornish Folk.

It is pleasant to travel about in the country districts in Cornwall. Few of the people you meet cross your path without passing the time of day. If you ask the way you are invariably answered civilly. You are not told to go straight on and then ask again. No, you are directed with great minuteness of detail as to the proper course you should take. As likely as not, so I have found it, your casual picked up friend will say after an elaborate explanation of the right way that you will never find it alone and set off with you to the point you wish to gain.—Antiquary.

THE GRACEFUL ANTELOPE.

He Seems Born of Light and Mured in the Lap of the Wind.

For me there have been no fairer days than when the antelope skimmed the plain with legs as nimble with speed on that low, gentle center whose deceptive motion left the best aimed bullet far behind. For the antelope is the only large animal that is wholly spirituelle. Graceful as he may seem when spurring the ground and swinging high over rocks and brush, to rebound like a ball at the next touch of earth, there is still something earthly about the deer. But the antelope seems born of light and mured in the lap of the wind. All his movements show that he was meant for the air rather than the earth. Though Nature made a slight change in giving him legs instead of wings, she made no mistake, and her work has always been the wonder and love of the hunter. When troubles arise the deer takes to the harbor of the hills, but the antelope steers for the open sea. The farther the plain sweeps wide and free the more this gay rover loves its safety, and a run that to the deer would mean death is to him only a "breather" that warms him up to the race. Whether illumining the horizon like a shooting star in the clear morning air of the great plain or looming high, like a stilted ghost in the mirage of glowing midday, he is the most charming of all things that run, and his passing has left a great void that nothing can fill. The few that are left, protected as they are, give no idea of the effect produced on a lover of the open by one of the great bands of the days that were, strung out in a dim almost like vapor with distance and speed, and vanishing as if in air over the land's outlying verge.—T. S. Van Dyke in Recreation.

THE NUMBER SEVEN.

It Rarely Occurs in the Science of Weights and Measures.

How would you define "seven?" The Standard Dictionary says it is "one more than six." Webster's calls it "one more than six or one less than eight."

The abridged Webster says it is "five and two," and the Century's definition runs "one more than six; the sum of three and four."

In metrology—that is, the science of weights and measures—seven is comparatively rare. The seven days of the week form a striking example of its use, however.

Scholars have found, too, that the Egyptian cubit contained seven hand-breadths. "Cubit" is from the Latin "cubitus," the elbow, or the distance from the elbow to the end of the middle finger. The Roman cubit was one and a half Roman feet or 17.4 English inches, but the royal Egyptian cubit, used in the building of the pyramids of Gizeh, perhaps 3500 B. C., has been learned from measuring sticks found in the tombs to have been 20.6 English inches. The ordinary cubit was divided into six palms or hand-breadths, and the use of seven in the Egyptian cubit is ascribed by some investigators to a probable custom of placing the hand behind the elbow when measuring along walls with the forearm and leaving it on the wall until the arm was laid down again. It should be added that there are many other cubits of widely different values, both ancient and modern.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Sleep
Sleep is nature's rebuilding period, when the energy used by the brain muscles and organs is renewed. If you lose sleep, your system is robbed of the strength sleep should give. Continued loss of sleep multiplies this loss until you become a physical wreck. Dr. Miles' Nervine quiets the irritated nerves and brings refreshing, invigorating sleep. Nervine contains no opiates, and therefore leaves no bad after-effects.

"For over two years I suffered from nervousness, my friends thought I was going crazy. I could not rest at all. I tried different doctors, but failed to find relief. My head would ache all the time; I was like one drunk; could not concentrate my mind; and was so restless I worried that sleep was out of question. After taking one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine I felt wonderful. I am now on my third bottle and am gaining all the time. I can lie down and sleep like a child, and am able to do my work." MRS. MAY SCOTT, English, Ind.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Nervine, and we authorize him to give you a price of first bottle (only) if it is to benefit you. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Lesson V.—Second Quarter, For May 2, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.
Text of the Lesson, Acts xiii, 1-12. Memory Verses 2, 3—Golden Text, Mark xvi, 15—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Copyright, 1909, by American Free Association.)
There would be a warm welcome for Barnabas and Saul from the Christians at Antioch on their return from Jerusalem, and John Mark, Barnabas' sister's son, whom they had brought with them (xiii, 25), would probably find himself in a different atmosphere from that at Jerusalem and must have been much helped by the companionship of his uncle, Barnabas, and by fellowship with such teachers as those here mentioned and by the seal of these warm-hearted believers. They ministered to the Lord and fasted. The things of this world were nothing in comparison with the things of the kingdom, and food for the body was wholly secondary when the pure bread and water of life was to be had. Some who read can understand. Although it means much to minister to the Lord, even a child can do it (I Sam. xiii, 1). I have often been impressed with this in considering the matter of ministering to the Lord—that the eight words "that they may minister in the priest's office" (Ex. xxviii, 2, 3, 4, 41, and many other places) are a translation of a little Hebrew word of three letters, and I have asked myself, Does it take as much of earth's language to open to us the little words of heaven? For we have no record of any language but Hebrew having been spoken by the Lord from heaven.

Well, I am sure that it means more than any of us know to "minister to the Lord." In the great book of worship, Leviticus, it is well to mark the phrases "unto the Lord" and "before the Lord," and when they become daily mottoes with us we shall know more of true ministry. While they were ministering the Holy Ghost said, "Separate Me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them" (verse 2). Here we have the whole of these chapters in one sentence and the whole of every true Christian life set apart for the Lord, separated from the world and self and sin, to do the will of God, to work the works which are beforehand prepared for us (Eph. ii, 10; Phil. ii, 13; Heb. xiii, 21). So they, sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed. When we are sent of God we always have His assurance, "Certainly I will be with thee" (Ex. iii, 12; Judg. vi, 16), and it is only by His assurance that we will be separated from all things and people not of Him (Ex. xxxiii, 16; I Kings viii, 53). If we would know God as our Father and as the Lord Almighty, the mighty God who is all sufficient for us, and have others see that we are His sons and daughters to His glory, He dwelling in us and walking in us, we must be willing to be separated from all things unto Himself (II Cor. vi, 16-18). The Holy Ghost having set them apart, the believers by fasting and prayer united with Him in this consecration of their beloved teachers to a foreign mission. They might have said: We cannot spare them. We need them so much here. What shall we do without them? But they agreed with God and let them go and must have been specially blessed in giving to God the best they had. How honored these two men were in being named by God for this ministry! Even the longest journeys are made very little of in Scripture, for what is a journey round the world even when compared with coming from heaven to earth, which angels accomplish as swiftly as the lightning? They leave Antioch and are next at Salamis, in Cyprus, without any details as to the journey. The word is preached in the synagogues at Salamis, but no statement as to results. Whether we see results or not, we can always rest on Isa. lv, 11; Jer. i, 12, R. V. They passed through the island to Paphos and found the deputy of the country eager to hear the word of God, but hindered by a Jew, a false prophet and a sorcerer, who sought to turn away the deputy from the faith.

Saul, who is now for the first time called Paul, being filled with the Spirit, spoke as plainly to him as did our Lord to the Pharisees in John viii, 44, and in the name of the Lord caused him to be blind for a season. The power of God thus manifest and the true doctrine taught by Paul so wrought upon the deputy that he became a believer.

God is the God of truth. Jesus Christ is the truth. The Spirit is the spirit of truth. There is no righteousness that can abide in the presence of God but that which God has provided. All that is not of God is of the devil. Consider, then, in the light of these facts, how the way of the Lord and the word of the Lord and the gospel of God concerning His Son are perceived by an ever increasing number of those who are called ministers of the gospel and are paid for preaching the gospel and teaching the truth (Eph. xiii, 20; Gal. i, 7). Though there may be no Spirit shed Paul to speak plainly to them, God Himself will deal with them in His time. The expression "the hand of the Lord" recalls Ex. viii, 22, "The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek Him, but His power and His wrath is against all them that forsake Him." From even this much of the story of this journey we may learn that Spirit-shed ministers of God must expect the opposition of the devil.

MONARCH OF ALL DRESSINGS

A Few Hints Here Given for the Proper Preparation of Mayonnaise.

When making mayonnaise, if the oil gives out before the dressing is of right consistency, put a little fresh butter in a kettle of hot water and melt it quickly. This can be used to eke out the oil and gives a delicious flavor.

A little whipped cream added to mayonnaise just before serving greatly improves it. If the cream has soured slightly it can still be used without being detected.

A bit of onion or chives rubbed over the bowl in which mayonnaise is mixed gives a snap to the dressing, yet is not enough to be distasteful even to those who dislike onion flavor.

If mayonnaise is to be mixed in a hurry do not think to make haste by adding the oil too rapidly. It will surely curdle. Set the bowl in a larger bowl of cracked ice and the dressing will thicken more quickly.

If lemon does not seem to give enough acid to mayonnaise, a few drops of vinegar will be found to improve the flavor. Should the mayonnaise be too thick and quite sour enough, thin with small lumps of ice.

Mayonnaise that has "gone back" need not be thrown away. Start a fresh egg, and when the dressing is quite thick stir in the curdled mixture very slowly.

If kept in the refrigerator in a tightly covered glass jar, mayonnaise that has been carefully mixed can be kept for a week. Be careful when first taking it into the air after standing. Too vigorous stirring may make it curdle.

Mayonnaise dressing is suitable for meat and fish salads and for apples of all kinds. Most fruit salads and plain lettuce are better with French dressing beaten to the consistency of an emulsion.

CLEAR UP ALL BAD ODORS.

Nothing Better Than an Onion Cut in Pieces to Purify the Atmosphere.

Everyone knows that an onion has a distinct and unpleasant odor, whether cooked or raw. But everyone does not know that this odor of an onion will draw to it every other disagreeable odor and clear the house atmosphere in a day.

The onion can then be thrown away and with it go the disagreeable smells that come about in a house that has been closed for the summer.

And this is also a good thing to know: That it will absorb all the odor from fresh paint and turpentine. If the house has been freshly painted and cleaned for the season's occupancy, the people moving into it will be miserable with the smells that come from walls and floors.

One onion should be cut into small pieces and placed about the room in two or three saucers. Allow an onion to each room and let the saucers remain there over day and night. If every bit of odor hasn't gone in that time put a few fresh pieces in for the next day.

Fried Spinach Pie.

Clean and cook one-half peck of spinach. When cooked chop, but not too fine, beat three eggs, add three tablespoons olive oil, two cups grated bread, one cup grated cheese then the spinach. Salt and onion sliced very fine should be added after the former ingredients have been mixed, and mix again thoroughly.

Parmesan cheese is the best to use.
Put on a frying pan in olive oil or butter, if preferred and fry until almost cooked, then turn into a sort of pie shape and brown on both sides.
After one side has been browned, it can be turned over by placing a shallow plate on top and quickly turning it downward, holding both together.
This mixture can be used to stuff loaf.

ARE THE NATION'S BACKBONE

Forty South and West Have Given Prosperity to the United and Greedy East.

One of the great things that the Union is doing is that of bringing the great resources of the south and west together. When we look backward and contemplate all that our country has achieved in material greatness within the past forty years, we stand amazed and our hearts and souls swell with pride and gladness as we think of the expansion and upbuilding of commerce and trade, as well as the improved conveniences for all walks of life. In short, the era of improved and perfected farm implements and machinery of all kinds and character; of steam railways, electric rail-lines, urban and interurban; of improved vessels for rivers and ocean transportation; of electric lights, of telephone and telegraph systems; of printing machinery and of the marvels of engineering success.
Of all that we have and are to-day, our nation, in all these new things and in the perfection of the old ways, leads the very van of all nations. But as we look still closer at what the past has brought and laid at the feet of the present, we naturally and involuntarily think of the future and try to cast a horoscope of the years to come. When we do this, just as the needle points to the pole, a vision of the south and west meets the mind's eye. The wrinkled visage of the east peers and leers at us through shaggy locks, whitened with the winters of more than a century, and the decrep-itude of age manacles her limbs. It is a repulsive face and the lines of greed and graft and craftiness mar its very lineaments and the eyes gleam with malice, envy and longing upon the lusty, robust strength of the new south and west.

The east has seen its day of power and vigor and its day of waning is surely coming, and while it has had its chance, avarice, greed and lust of gold and mammon worship have dwarfed her heart and soul and stricken her limbs with the palsy of crime, and to-day the south and west have come to the parting of the ways;
each one with the east, and leave her in her selfishness to pursue her own destiny while they pursue theirs, which is for all things that make for material greatness. The south and the west are the magnificent agricultural regions of our wonderful nation, and the fertile plains that unite the great lakes of the northwest with the Mexican gulf on the south, permeated by the two splendid rivers, the Mississippi and the Missouri, supply the golden fleece in the cotton that clothes the world and the grain that feeds the people of the earth.

The south and the west are one, industrially. They give to this nation its prosperity. The exports from these two sections nestle side by side in loving unity of interests that need but concerted action to make them irresistible and swell the volume of business on the credit side of the nation's ledger.

Hats off to the new south and west!
They are the nation's backbone, and the Union has done more to unite these two great sections than any other agency extant.—Union Tribune.

TELL THE TRUTH.

George J. Gould says that all the legal machinery of the government was brought against E. H. Harriman for four years, and that while he stood practically alone, he came out stronger than ever. Practically the same thing can be said of the beef trust and the Standard Oil Company. The government has practically failed in its effort to prosecute these trusts and compel them to obey the law. Harriman resisted all efforts of the government in its effort to make him be good.
When a state legislature passes a law that has teeth in it to bring the trusts and corporations to a stand, it is almost invariably pronounced unconstitutional by some federal judge. What is to be the end of this contention?
The people are not going to stand for this condition of things for all time to come. If the trusts and corporations are not going to respect the laws of the land can it be expected that the people will respect them? It is settling a bad example. If the people lose respect for the law to whom shall the corporation look for protection? To the government? What is the government without the people behind it? Every violation of the law by trusts and corporations that goes unpunished licenses lawlessness among the people. It can only end in disaster, and the first victims when the war of retaliation comes will be the trusts and corporations themselves.

FEAR BROWN-TAIL MOTH.

A warning of interest to horticulturists against the importation of the brown-tail moth on orchard nursery stock from Holland and France has just been issued by Prof. E. F. Sanderson of the college of agriculture, University of Wisconsin, who is the Wisconsin state nursery inspector.

Practically half of the importations or ornamental shrubs and plants from these countries now contain the live insects, which may be spread to other trees when released from the packages. Out of 43 shipments brought into one western state, 21 were found to be infested.

As noted in the Prairie Farmer in the issue of March 1, Dr. Forbes, state entomologist, is doing everything in his power to examine all shipments coming into Illinois, and is thus far meeting with every indication of success.

THE COURT OUT OF POLITICS.

The legislature of Montana recently passed a bill making it impossible for political parties to nominate judges.
The governor has signed it, and it is now the law. This is a result of a condition out there when the judges and politicians formed a partnership and put justice on the block to be sold to the highest bidder. It is necessary under the new law, to nominate judges by a certificate signed by a certain percentage of voters in the district. It seems that the race of judges is deteriorating and needs something to brace it up. If this tonic prescribed by the state of Montana shall have the desired effect it will be well for the other states to use some of it. And some of the federal judges ought to have a dose of something occasional.

THE DIVINE CHALLENGE

Malachi Calls Upon the People in Three Acts.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY"

Scripture Authority:—Malachi 3:1-5 12.

The Book of Malachi.—It is contained in four chapters in our version, as in the LXX, Vulgate, and Peshito-Syriac. In the Hebrew, the third and fourth chapters form but one chapter. The prophecy of Malachi is alluded to in the New Testament, and its canonical authority thereby established (temp. Mark 12: 21, 22; Luke 1: 17; Rom. 9: 27). The style is prophetic and rhetorical, rather than poetic and more closely resembles a written philosophical discourse than the oracles of the Hebrew prophets. The prophecy naturally divides itself into three sections: I. (1: 1-5: 12).—Jehovah is represented as the loving father and ruler of his people. It may be subdivided thus: (1) 1: 1-4.
—Jehovah asserts and proves his love to his people by reference to the punishment of Edom. (2) 1: 5-2: 17.—Rebuke of the priests, as the leaders of spiritual defection. II. (2: 18-3: 18).—The prophet's reproof of mixed marriages and divorces, portrayed by the deserted wives weeping at the altar. III. The sudden appearance in the temple of the Lord as the judge, preceded by his forerunner. This section may be thus subdivided: (1) 3: 17-3: 23.—A threat of punishment. (2) 3: 24-4: 1.—A call to repentance. (3) 4: 2-4: 4.—Reproof of the trust in God; forewarning of the final judgment; the advent of the Messiah, heralded by Elijah. Thus prophecy closes with the announcement of the Messiah's coming, and prepares the people for the appearance of his precursor, John the Baptist, in the spirit and the power of Elijah (Matt. 11: 14; 17: 12-13).

Open up the treasures of your heart if you would be possessed of the treasures of God.

One reason for the barrenness of the church to-day is the parsimony of its members.

The old simile of the eagle who robbed the altar and set fire to her nest with the burning coal that adhered to the stolen flesh, illustrates forcibly the condition of men who retain God's money in their treasuries and in the end find that what they have is a losing possession, for it robs them of eternity.

We must give to God if we would receive from God.

Notice how God's promises are always conditional upon some act of the soul to whom God would send the blessing.

God's treasures all have their price. If we are not willing to pay the price, to fulfill the condition, then they are not for us to possess.

And yet God's price is always within the reach of the one to whom he makes the offer.

It is a wonderful figure we have in this tenth verse. The heavens with all their rich store of blessing shut up because the people were robbing God.

Windows there, but not open earthward to permit God's blessing to pour forth because the people had forgotten God.

It is a storehouse which cannot be carried by assault. A place of eternal riches which cannot be entered by stealth, by violence, or by deception. Why?
Because God is the Lord of the place, and nothing but the price which he demands can operate to move the levers and throw open the windows.

Have the windows of heaven ever yet been opened wide to permit all the blessing of God to descend upon the earth? Not yet. The tithes of God's people have not all been brought in to his storehouse. They are still robbing him, and because the conditions which God has laid down have not been fulfilled he is withholding the full blessing.

And yet God wants to be proved. He wants the fullest test made of his promises. Has there ever been one who found those promises to fail?

THE STORY.

"WHAT!" exclaimed Malachi. "Do you complain of God's dealings with you? Of course there is suffering in the land! Of course we are under the power of the nations that surround us! Of course the glory of Jerusalem and of the Temple service has departed, for ye have forgotten
God. Sin has brought its punishment."

The voice of the prophet rang out sharp and full, expressing the bitter sorrow he felt within, and the delegation of men before him turned as though they would depart, disappointment and anger written upon their faces.

They had come in bitterness of spirit to complain of the oppression which they were suffering at the hands of the rulers of the land. They were vine dressers living in the vicinity of Jerusalem, and the exactness to which they had been subjected by their task masters had at last reached a point where they felt they could stand them no longer.

"Malachi will surely help us against these pollish heathen who have come and gained control of the land," exclaimed one, as they had journeyed into Jerusalem and sought out the dwelling of Malachi.

"Yes, the prophet has always taught the good of our nation, and he will not fail us," spoke up another, enthusiastically.

SAVING PAINT MONEY

It Cannot Be Done by Using Cheap Material and Cheap Painters.

In arranging for painting, a many property-owners try to save money by employing the painter who offers to do the job cheapest—by trying to save money by insisting on a low-priced paint. But no property-owner would run such risks if he realized what must be taken into consideration in order to get a job that will wear and give thorough satisfaction.

No houseowner will go wrong on the painting question if he writes National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York, for their Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49, which is sent free. It is a complete guide to painting. It includes a book of color schemes for either exterior or interior painting, a book of specifications, and an instrument for detecting adulteration in paint materials.

Nearly every dealer has National Lead Company's pure white lead (Dutch Boy Painter trademark). Yours has not notify National Lead Co., and arrangements will be made for you to get it.

GOING THE PACE.

Tortoise—What, have you started a motor car?
Snail—Yes, one must move with the times, you know.

Grief That Kills.

"My poor boy," said the benighted old clergyman, who had encountered a young wail sobbing in the street, "what ails you? Some case of dire distress has touched your heart-strings, no doubt?"

"No," sniffed the lad, "you're clear off your base, old kazoozicks. Me an' Snippy an' de rest of de fellies like canned the many, old yellow cur up at Schwarz's grocery, and while did Schwarz an' de gang followed de dog, I sneaked back to de grocery to swipe dried apples. De fido chased into Schmitt's orchard and de gang cribbed de sweetest peaches you ever seen, an' then dey smoked grape-vine cigarettes and set de barn a-fire. I made a saahay into de apple barrel at de grocery, an' de delivery boy pased me with a bed-slat and it hurts yet, and I didn't get to see de fire, and didn't get nothin' to eat, and I wait I wur dead—dog-gone it all!"—The Bohemian Magazine.

Question of the Hour.
"We are really at a loss to know how to punish Earle," she said. "We have tried all the punishment in our kindergarten list without effect. We have reasoned with him and told him that he will cease to be our pretty pet and will grow up to be a bad, bad man, and—"

"Madam," interrupted the gentleman of the old school, who was visiting them, "you will find on the trunk in my room a very excellent strap that I shall not need tomorrow."

But, of course, he didn't know anything about modern methods.

When Courage Failed.
"Duke," said the heiress, eagerly, "did you see father?"

"Yes."

"Well?"

"We talked about the weather."

"What? Lose your nerve again? Why don't you brace up and talk like a man—a subject of a king on whose domain the sun never sets?"

"Can't," moaned the duke. "All the time I was in your father's office he kept grinning at a big painting."

"What painting?"

"COFFEE DOESN'T HURT ME"

Tales That Are Told.

"I was one of the kind who wouldn't believe that coffee was hurting me," says a N. Y. woman. "You just couldn't convince me its use was connected with the heart and stomach trouble I suffered from most of the time."

"My trouble finally got so bad I had to live on milk and toast almost entirely for three or four years. Still I loved the coffee and wouldn't believe it could do such damage."

"What I needed was to quit coffee and take nourishment in such form as my stomach could digest."

"I had read much about Postum, but never thought it would fit my case until one day I decided to quit coffee and give it a trial and make sure about it. So I got a package and carefully followed the directions."

"Soon I began to get better and was able to eat carefully selected foods without the aid of pepsin or other digestants and it was not long before I was really a new woman physically."

"Now I am healthy and sound, and eat anything and everything that comes along and I know this wonderful change is all due to my having quit coffee and got the nourishment I needed through this delicious Postum."

"My wonder is why everyone doesn't give up the old coffee and the trouble that go with it and build themselves up as I have done, with Postum."

Easy to prove by 10 days' trial of Postum in place of coffee. The result is big.

"There's a Reason."
Ever read the above letter? A girl who appears from time to time. She is genuine, true, and full of interest.

When the first automobile appeared in the streets of Seoul, the Korean capital, recently, there was an uproar from which the natives did not recover soon. When the simple Koreans saw the machine, manned by whites, they scattered in all directions. Those who were carrying bundles dropped them and prayed to be delivered from the new demon. Ponies and bullocks bolted in all directions and days passed before those who witnessed the entry of the thirty horse-power machine restored to calmness.

PARADISE OF AFRICA

Home of Bagishu People Is Like Southern France.

Agriculture in State of Advanced Development, Though the Natives Are Cannibals and Few of Them Wear Any Clothes.

London.—Great Britain has recently not only learned of the passing under its flag of three Malay states, comprising 15,000 square miles of territory, but has also become aware that it possesses a hitherto unknown paradise in Central Africa. There is not a doubt that in the provinces ceded by the King of Siam Great Britain has acquired a territory capable of being developed into an extremely valuable possession.

The news of the African paradise is sent by the governor of Uganda, H. Reithell, who has just been on a tour through the eastern province of Uganda.

Vague stories of the charms of this land of the Bagishu people, its dense population and high state of cultivation had reached the governor of Uganda, but the expedition was not prepared for the surprises that met it.

The governor traveled through the enchanting scenery of a fertile plain to the base of Mount Eldon, towering 14,000 feet. From the ridges which separated smiling valleys Gov. Reithell saw stretched out on every side a scene which could only be compared to Southern France.

Fields of millet, wheat and other grain, and groves of bananas rolled away as far as the eye could reach, the vast garden being cut up into small rectangular plots each carefully defined by hedges, while dotted all about were a wonderful profusion of dome-shaped huts of the Bagishu.

Gov. Reithell says that the whole scene gave him the impression of such calm security, plenty and of peace that he tried in vain to realize that he was in the heart of Africa. The inhabitants of this delectable land are, however, on a very low social scale in spite of their agricultural thrift. It is not a sign of degradation that, for the most part, they go absolutely naked, but they are undoubtedly cannibals. The population, which is enormously dense, numbers 500,000.

Some particulars are given respecting the unusual social habits of the Bagishu, of whom further investigation will at once be made.

VIRGINIUS AFFAIR RECALLED.

Offer of Land for Guantanamo Naval Station Revives Stirring Historic Incident.

Washington.—An offer to sell 40,000 acres of land on the ocean and near Guantanamo bay for use in connection with the naval station has been made by Mme. Xavier Rosier, of Bordeaux, France.

This offer has recalled the stirring incidents attending the seizure of the Virginus, as Mme. Rosier is the daughter of Robert Mason, British vice consul at Santiago de Cuba at the time of the seizure of the Virginus, and it was he who interceded in behalf of both British and American citizens, saving the lives of many of them in the exciting times of 1873. The land now offered was the property of Vice Consul Mason, who died several years ago and left it to his daughter.

As the government now owns between 30,000 and 31,000 acres of land at the Guantanamo naval station it is doubtful whether any negotiations to acquire more acreage there will be undertaken. In the last session of congress great hostility was shown toward the development of a naval station at Guantanamo, it being claimed by southern senators that such development would divert work from the Charleston, S. C., and New Orleans navy yards.

The proffer of this property to the government was made personally by Mme. Rosier, recently, when she called to see the secretary of the navy. Although the daughter of a British consular officer, Mme. Rosier speaks but little English, her mother being a Cuban. No price was put upon the property.

MONUMENT TO SIOUX

Courageous Deed of Indian Band to Be Recognized.

Granite Shaft Will Be Erected in South Dakota in Memory of Young Braves Who Risked Their Lives.

Aberdeen, S. D.—After the lapse of well-nigh half a century the band of young Sioux Indians, known as the "Fool Soldier" band, which in November, 1862, at great personal risk to themselves, rescued, at a spot near the Missouri river in what is now Walworth county, South Dakota, two women and four children, whites, who had been abducted by a roving band of Sioux from their homes at Lake Chetok, Minn., are to be remembered and their heroic behavior commemorated by a suitable monument.

Under the auspices of the South Dakota Pioneer association, a granite shaft will be erected on June 27, a mile from Mohrville, S. D., where the rescue was effected.

The "Fool Soldier" band consisted of 11 young Indian braves, and their act was one of the exceptional deeds of the aborigines in which the whites were befriended at the risk of incurring ostracism and the enmity of not only their own tribe, but the entire Sioux nation, at that time powerful and warlike.

After conceiving the idea of saving the white captives, the young braves watched with unceasing vigilance until the opportune time came, when they secured possession of their captives and rushed them to a white settlement whence they were returned to their homes.

Walworth county was at that time totally unsettled by whites, but after the whites settled the country the members of the band were always welcome guests at any white man's house, and after the Walworth County Old Settlers' association was formed, the survivors of the band were featured of every reunion of the association.

The monument erected to their memory will be a plain granite shaft, standing upon two mammoth native boulders and suitably inscribed with the account of the deed which won the Indians immortality. Doane Robinson of Pierre, S. D., state historian, will deliver the address at the dedication of the monument.

POLICEWOMEN IN BAYONNE.

"Guardian Mothers" to Teach Politeness to Children in New Jersey Park During the Summer.

Bayonne, N. J.—Policewomen are to be a reality here. Having been authorized by the city council, at the suggestion of Mrs. Julia Goldner, nine volunteers will police the park during the summer. The women officers will not bear the name of policewomen, but will be known as "guardian mothers" and will not wear uniforms. Their duty will not be so much to make arrests, but to instill politeness into the youngsters of Bayonne. They will urge the children not to make noise, to be gentle and always to give their seats to elders.

The guardian mothers will serve on alternate afternoons and will get no pay. Some one has proposed that they carry the proverbial slipper or paddle instead of a club, but this question has not been settled.

Costly Set of Birds' Eggs.
Of British birds' eggs a complete set is worth about $1,000.

SOUP OF CHICKEN OR YEAL.

Nourishing Dish Made with Either Ingredient—Mutton Broth as It Should Be Prepared.

To make veal soup, cut up one pound of veal in small pieces, break one knuckle of veal well, put into a saucepan with six cups of water. Bring to the boil and skim carefully; add one slice of turnip, and boil for at least six hours very gently. Strain the soup, add one tablespoonful of tapioca, and boil for 20 minutes, stirring frequently. Put the yolks of two eggs in a small basin and beat well for five minutes, add one gill of cream, stir well together. Take a cup of the soup and stir it in gradually among the eggs and cream, then pour all the soup among it; also add salt to taste and it is ready.

To make mutton broth, cut up one pound lean mutton in small pieces, put it into saucepan with one quart of cold water, add two ounces of pearl barley that has been washed. Let it simmer for five hours. Then strain it and remove all the fat from the top.

It is better to stand till quite cold before doing this. Put it on then to boil, add half a cupful of milk, and a little finely chopped parsley; season to taste with salt and pepper.

Chicken is very good cooked in the same manner as this.

English Seafoak.

When a steak is broiled over coals the good fat is lost. When a steak is broiled in a hot skillet the kitchen is filled with smoke. The English method avoids both the above conditions and gives a better result. Have a porterhouse steak cut from an inch to an inch and a half thick. Ask the butcher to add a piece of clear suet two inches square. Shape the steak to fit the skillet, placing the suet in the center as nearly as possible. Have the fire moderate but steady, and when the skillet is hot enough to sizzle sharply lay the steak in it. If wanted rare done turn at the end of eight minutes. Turn carefully with a broad bladed knife (do not pierce with a fork), and allow to cook another five or eight minutes. If the heat is just right the upper surface will remain perfectly dry at the end of eight minutes, and after being turned the other surface will remain the same. When the juices of the meat ooze out the steak is ruined. Dish the steak on a hot platter and pour over it the fat from the skillet. Serve on warm plates.

Compote of Pigeons.

Have some pigeons ready trussed for broiling, and put them in a covered stewpan with an ounce and a half of fat or butter, a bunch of herbs tied up, say a sprig of thyme, parsley, and two bayleaves, about a quarter of a pound of raw bacon cut up in little square pieces, a dust of paprika, half a pint of peeled button onions, or two large ones cut up in small squares, and some carrots cut in pea shapes; fry till a nice golden color; add about half a pint of stock and some turnips, prepared similarly to the carrots, and let the whole simmer for about half an hour; as the stock reduces put a little more of it; take up the pigeons and remove the string from them; dish them; remove the fat from the gravy, reboil and pour round the pigeons, with the vegetables and bacon in little bunches.

Fruit Cake Without Butter or Flour.

Beat thoroughly the yolks of 12 eggs with one pound of confectioner's sugar; add one and a half teaspoonfuls of cinnamon and the same of cloves; a half pound of dates, cut in small pieces; half pound of citron, cut fine; half pound seeded raisins; half pound almonds, blanched and rolled fine; eight soda crackers, rolled fine and sifted with two and a half teaspoonfuls baking powder; two squares of sweet chocolate powder; the grated rind and juice of a lemon; a wine glass of wine or brandy, and the whites of 12 eggs, beaten only, and added last of all. This cake is excellent and will keep for months.—National Food Magazine.

Orange Charlotte.

One-third box of gelatine, one-third cup cold water, one-third cup boiling water, one cup sugar, juice of one lemon, one cup orange juice and pulp, whites of three eggs. Soak the gelatine in cold water till soft, add the boiling water, sugar and lemon juice. Strain and add the orange juice, and a little of the grated rind. Cool in a pan of ice water, and when it begins to harden beat in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Serve with a custard made with the yolks of the eggs, one pint milk, three heaping tablespoonfuls sugar and a little salt. Flavor to taste. Or it is fine cut up in little cubes and served with whipped cream.

Sunday Salad.

A new salad is made with the tender leaves of head lettuce, washed in cold water, drained and arranged on a flat dish. Just before the time to serve toss lightly together two bananas sliced, 12 white grapes, one stalk of celery and about two dozen walnuts, or any other nuts desired, and spread it on the leaves, then cover it with mayonnaise or French dressing; serve with salted water and scalded cheese, ice cold. This is original and delicious to the salad lover.

How Cutlets.

One pound boiled ham, one large onion, one large potato, boiled, one sweet green pepper, two well beaten eggs, salt and pepper to taste. Mince all together fine, then add egg. Mold with hands to form small balls. Insert small piece, scalded mutton in small and to turn ham bone. Fry until well done and serve with brown sauce.

AILING WOMEN.

Keep the Kidneys Well and the Kidneys Will Keep You Well.

Back suffering, languid women are learning the true cause of bad backs and how to cure them. Mrs. W. G. Davis, of Greenock, Teane, says: "Back-aches hurt me so I could hardly stand. Spasms of clankness and sick headaches were frequent and the action of the kidneys was irregular."

Soon after I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills I passed several gravel stones. I got well and the trouble has not returned. My back is good and strong, and my general health is better."

The Missionary Mule.

"That mule," said the old farmer, "is what I call a 'missionary mule,' an' I'll tell you why: It throwed one man on his head, an' when the man was able to be up an' about ag'in, he went to preachin'; an' the last time the sheriff come to levy on that mule the critter kicked him 'cross the county line, whar they was holdin' a campmeetin' an' I'm b'liev the sheriff didn't git religion an' quit runnin' fer office—which was uncommon hard to do, seem' that the office habit run in his blood. I tell you, nuthin' in this here worl' is to be despised, w'en as humble a critter as a mule kin be a missionary!"

Too Literal.

"Well, yes," said Old Uncle Lamsberry, who was intimately acquainted with most of the happenances of the village, "Almira Stang has broken off her engagement with Charles Henry 'Footwiler.' They'd be gon' together for about eight years, durin' which time she had been inculcatin' into him, as you might call it, the beauties of economy; but when she discovered, just lately, that he had learnt his lesson so well that he had saved up 217 pairs of socks for her to darn immediately after the wedding, she 'peared to conclude that he had taken her advice a little too literally, and broke off de match."—Puck.

Let Me Tell You Something

A woman who is sick and suffering, and won't at least try a medicine which has the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is to blame for her own wretched condition.

There are literally hundreds of thousands of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read what these women say:

Camden, N. J.—"It is with pleasure that I send my testimonial for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, hoping it may induce other suffering women to avail themselves of the benefit of this valuable remedy."

"I suffered from pains in my back and side, sick headaches, no appetite, was tired and nervous all the time, and so weak I could hardly stand. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman—and this valuable medicine shall always have my praise."—Mrs. W. F. Valentine, 508 Lincoln Ave., Camden, N. J.

Eric, Pa.—"I suffered for five years from female troubles, and at last was almost helpless. I tried three doctors but they did me no good. My sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has made me well and strong. I have all suffering women will just give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, for it is worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. F. Radlich, E. P. & T, Eric, Pa.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, it is not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering from the same trouble.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman can justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for her advice—it is free and always helpful.

Stomach Muscles In Old

How Old People May Retain or Good Health

Usually the bowels are not in middle or advanced years as in youth. Just as the eyes grow dim, the wrinkles, the hair gray, the muscles by, so do the internal organs show age if we could but see them.

However we sometimes find a person whose age is near the meted three and ten and yet his step is as firm as his eye keen, his flesh firm, his appetite good and his bowels regular upon close questioning you will find his history of right-living, good, keen appetite, perfect digestion and regular bowel action.

Regular bowels and proper diet of the food we eat is absolutely necessary to the enjoyment of good health in old or young. If the readers of this are interested, we are glad to tell how they can restore good health and prolong their lives.

Step into a drug store and purchase a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will cleanse the bowels of any person that has clogged them up and restore to them strength and nerve regular natural daily action. It acts by stimulating the stomach's digestive glands to a proper and efficient secretion of the fluids necessary for perfect digestion. It acts on the kidneys in a mild, quiet yet powerful manner. Rev. A. J. Fletcher, of Ford, Tenn., is 80 years old, and he has him of 60 years of dyspepsia. W. W. Higgins, Sioux City, Ia., says: "I have used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for 15 years with dyspepsia, and it has cured me." It is certain and effective the most obstinate old cases, and safe for the most delicate child. All druggists sell it at the regular price. Pepsin Syrup Co., 100 N. W. Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas, and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary people "dyspepsia tablets," "physics," etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Epilepsy, Fits

Convulsions, or Spasms and St. Vitus' Dance are Nervous Diseases. Most cases can be cured by strengthening and building up the nervous system. To do this a nerve medicine is needed. Dr. Miles' Nerveine will be found efficacious and satisfactory. It has cured many cases of these diseases and we believe it will cure you. We can give you names of many who have been cured through its use. Write for advice.

"My son John had epilepsy for years, and after having him treated by specialists for over 2 years he still continued to have spells. I had all the virtues of Dr. Miles' Anti-Epileptic Pills for sick headaches. I concluded to try the Nerveine. During June, 1900, I gave him a teaspoonful three times a day, then in July I gave it as directed, and I could see that he was improving, and he has not had a spell since August 25, 1900, and has taken no medicine since Jan.-01. I am writing the case just as it is, hoping it will induce others to try it. W. E. ALLISON, Montgomery, Ala. Your druggist will tell you how to get the Nerveine. Write him for a copy of free booklet (sent) if it fails to benefit you. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

ALABAMA

FROM DENVER.

Denver, Col., April 28, 1909
Editor Banner—Denver is a city of 250,000 inhabitants and situated at the foot of the Rocky Mountains and supported largely by health-seekers, tourists and railroad industries. There are trunk lines leading into Canada, Mexico and all parts of the United States.

There are many parks and places of amusement here and two museums, which contain relics from all parts of the globe. The city park contains a museum in which there is a case that has about $100,000 worth of gold in original forms as taken out of the ground. The Zoo contains deer, elk, antelope, bear and mountain-lions and some other animals which I heard more than one name for.

In the museum at the capitol there are relics of the Revolution, Civil and Spanish American wars, which are very interesting to look at. There is a gun used by the Chinese shortly after they invented gun powder. It is a "dandy."

In one case there is the head of an Egyptian princess that was found near the temple of Ramesis II, at Lower Egypt. Her head shows that she was somewhat delicate; large eyes, pointed chin and sharp nose and real good looking. The white of her eyes retain their color, rest is black. Part of the embalming cloth yet around her neck.

In an adjoining room are the relics taken from the Cliff Dwellers ruins in the Maroon canyon in the southwest part of Colorado. The Cliff-Dwellers were a prehistoric race that built their houses of stone in the cliffs and large crevices of rock, and some are so high and wide of canyon so steep that it is scarcely safe to climb to them. The thread of which they wore into cloth is made of the fiber of the yucca plant, or what Mexicans call soap weed. It is similar to what I always heard called bear grass in the South. The pottery is made of clay and very rude. The straps used for carrying burdens are about two feet long and two inches wide. Their sandals are made of yucca leaves, split reeds and buck skin. There are some rings made of yucca leaves and supposed to have been worn on the head to carry vessels and to hold them level. The stones they used for hammers are about as heavy as hammers used today, but longer and have a groove around the centre in which they wrapped the handle. One rock has a stick about as large as my thumb wrapped it twice and tied together at the rock and at the ends of stick, and makes a very good bundle that would stand all the rock. The stones used for doors are about twelve inches by twenty inches and about three inches thick. Window stones and base stones are about the same size. The stones used for building are about twelve inches square and three inches thick. There are arrow heads like those used by the Indians. There is one roll of oser or willow matting about ten feet long and four feet wide; other rolls smaller. Their agricultural implements are sticks about the size of a man's wrist and about four feet long; smooth at one end some sharp and others flat. Some of the spinning sticks are as large as a man's thumb and two feet long. Some are very short and small. Their smoothing knives are made of bones that resemble the ham bones of a hog. Their needles are small slim bones that are sharp at one end and hole through the other.

There are some squash seeds, rinds and stems found in the building. The corn found in the old building is a little larger than popcorn, but men have taken grains of it and planted them and they produced ears almost as large as the average corn of the South. Some of the ears are yellow and some are a dark red.

One of the ladders which they used to get into the house is about eight feet long and six inches in diameter and has notches about eighteen inches apart that were used for steps. Their cloth is very loosely woven of thread about one-eighth of an inch in diameter.

One woman lying as she was found in the grave. Her shroud was cloth in which fur and the down of feathers had been woven, and I presume was very fine cloth for that age. I think she would have weighed about 75 pounds. One infant, whose shroud just comes to its chin, has its mouth open and has only two teeth; it looks real cute. Their skulls indicate that they were very intelligent. There are some burnt bones that show that they had fires, but nothing to show that they knew any thing about metals.

Yours truly,
J. B. JONES.

A LION HUNT.

Usually a Case in Which Hunters Goad the Game Into Combat.

There is a distinction in Africa between ordinary lions and "man eaters," says T. R. MacMechen in McClure's Magazine. The ordinary lion does not willfully attack man. The presence of lions roaming at night on the veldt is not disturbing to any native nor to whites who have come to understand the beast. Persons returning to their camps after nightfall do not notice the roaring of lions or the cries of leopards or hyenas.

It is seldom that people bent upon domestic errands carry weapons in the darkness, although at night the veldt of British East Africa is alive with roaming beasts, which may be heard from the verandas of the houses. Lions give the passing man a wide berth, day or night, when it is apparent that he means no mischief. An ordinary lion, even when wounded, will try flight before fight. When its escape is disputed it will, especially if wounded, try to maul its enemy with teeth and claws.

A lion-hunt is usually a chase in which the hunters goad the game into combat. Once a lion has tasted human blood, however, it is no more afraid of man, but learns that he is the weakest of animals and the choicest of meat. Such a lion is known as a man eater because now he hunts man.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Spring term of Circuit Court Monday, Judge W. W. presiding; D. D. Askew, was in his place. The case was a very strong address Grand Jury, as follows: In charge to the Grand Jury Pearson stated that selling in violation of law was in category of misdemeanors which the law required mention. He said: "It is not what our view of the law may be, it is our duty to enforce it. Some people think that it cannot be enforced, usually be found that such do not want it enforced, partial enforcement has not without good results. You may do some good, but question it has done and is incalculable harm. In a society we have a report of a man goes to a blind tiger and what I think we might say was mean liquor, he gets of it to get drunk, he goes kills the sheriff of his county then he is acquitted upon and of insanity. Ah, gentlemen, what about it, what about I go down to some secret place in the town of Clanton procure mean whiskey and until my mind is unbalanced then go out and kill the of the law that you have up to preserve from violence men and children, and then whipped of justice, and that is what is ruled by men eyes and straight hair? that human life has been cheap in Alabama? Who is a community where jurors are voluntary drunkards? In other words, gentlemen, you think it is right that a go to one of these blind men his passions with mean violate the sanctity of one daughters and then say he is not."

ward Governor Glenn, of Carolina, yesterday made the strongest address, I which I have listened in days, and he presented some which would be appalling. He said that there was one year more than two of dollars; more money spent for religion and education. Just think about it: more money was spent for chewing gum; more money was spent for tobacco; then is spent for people for the purpose of paying in foreign lands they say is the safety of all nations—religion. It is, insist, some who oppose this prohibition, that we have a right, a right, to make liquor drink liquor and to sell it. I have a right, in other gentlemen, to put what I will cause death, what I will cause ruin, what I know the crime of all sorts, I have to put that thing into the of your son; I have a right it into the hands of your son; I have a right to put it in the hands of the colored man know that if he takes it in proportions that he will go and commit some crime upon person or property. Why yes, I have a right, but we also have rights. I have no inherent to sell my neighbor that will probably injure him or whenever I deliberately do which will injure him or his, am placing myself in a position I deserve censure at his and at the hands of all lawmen and women. Yes, but I am asserting that prohibition doesn't prohibit. No, it prohibits, and why doesn't it? It is because men lose respect for law. Let's see did in Atlanta. I have a from the Atlanta Constitution. To the closing of the session he chiefly attributed the of $8,810 in a number of the police last year as compared with the records of 1907. Now of 8,810 arrests in the Atlanta is one year, and yet there doesn't do anybody any New, gentlemen, it has been that there have been some of this law in this county. you are to pass on it. DAINTY AND ECONOMICAL PIES

Cluster of Recipes That Have Much to Recommend Them to the Housekeeper.

Here are some pie recipes which are both tasty and economical:

Lemon Pie.—Juice of one lemon, one teaspoonful of hot water, two-thirds of a cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of cornstarch dissolved in a little cold water to thicken. When cold, add the yolk of an egg; put the filling in a crust previously baked, and use the white of the egg with two tablespoonfuls of sugar as a frosting for the top.

Pineapple Pie.—A small pineapple grated or one can of grated pineapple.
One cupful of sugar, one egg, a piece of butter half the size of a walnut.
Beat all well together and bake between two crusts.

Cranberry Pie.—One cupful of cranberries chopped fine, one-half cupful of raisins chopped fine. Cover with one half cupful of water, cook a little and add one teaspoonful of cornstarch dissolved in a little cold water to slightly thicken, then bake between two crusts.

Raisin Pie.—Seed one pound of raisins, cover with water, and boil slowly one hour. Add one scant cupful of sugar, the juice of one lemon, and one teaspoonful of flour to thicken. This will make two small pies.

Mock Mince Pie.—Four common crackers broken, two cupfuls of cold water, one cupful of molasses, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of vinegar, one cupful of raisins. Salt and spice to taste. This makes two pies.

Apple Custard Pie.—Four apples stewed soft, the yolks of two eggs, the juice of one lemon. Sweeten with sugar to suit the taste, bake in an under crust; when cool, make a frosting of the whites of two eggs, and put on top. Set in the oven and brown.

Amber Marmalade.

Shave one orange, one lemon and one grape fruit very thin, rejecting nothing but seeds and cores. Measure the fruit and add to it three times the quantity of water. Let it stand in an earthen dish over night, and next morning boil for ten minutes only.
Stand another night, and the second morning add pint for pint of sugar and boil steadily till it jellifies. This rule is supposed to make 12 glasses.
Twice, using fruit rather above the average size, I have, to my astonishment, filled 16 large glasses. The product should have a limpid appearance quite different from the mushy look of most marmalade, the strips of fruit being well defined in a clear, pale jelly. To this end stir as little as possible during the two hours or more of the cooking which it requires.

Corn Dodgers.

Two cups white cornmeal, tablespoon sugar, three tablespoons milk, two teaspoons melted shortening, one level teaspoon salt, two eggs. Scald the meal with boiling water. Add the sugar, milk, shortening and salt; then add the yolks of the eggs beaten very light. Fold in the whites beaten very stiff. Half fill well greased muffin pans and bake in a hot oven until nicely browned.

Baked Custards.

To one whole egg, the white and yolk beaten together, add two cups of scalded milk, while still hot. Sweeten to taste. Pour into individual custard dishes and grate nutmeg over the top of each. Set in a pan of warm water in a moderate oven. Bake slowly. Do not let the water in the pan boil. This makes five individual custards. An important point in custard-making is to use fresh milk.

Palatable Tea Scones.

The tea biscuits served at a hospital up-town table on occasional Sunday nights have a cheese flavor which guests are not always able to account for. Grated cheese is sprinkled

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Edited and Conducted by W. A. MORGAN,
Springfield, Missouri.

Diversification of crops will enable the farmer to live at home.

Make up your mind right now to plant less cotton this year and then hold the crop until you receive your price for it.

Study the best methods of farming.
It will be money in your pocket as well as to enable you to become a more efficient member of the union.

If the farmers will not unite for their own protection they deserve to be robbed. A man who won't protect his own interests and provide for his own family is worse than an elephant.

The Standard Oil trust is having some troubles of its own just now.
They will increase in the near future.

Respect for the law is necessary to good government, and people will have respect for the law just in proportion to how well it is administered.

The Standard Oil Company threatens to pay the entire fine of $1,700, 300 imposed upon it by the Texas authorities all in silver. The oil magnates say they will do this in order to put the state authorities to as much trouble as possible. You can't hurt a Texan that way; many of them used to pay their debts in lead.

A crop that will save paying out money is just as good as a crop that will sell readily for money. Some men who persist in raising cotton, because it is a money crop never get to see the money it sells for.

The men who sell the most cotton are those who never raised a bale of it in their lives. They buy and sell millions of bales, yet there is never a bale delivered. They simply gamble on what the price will be in the future.

MORE MONEY FROM THE FARM.

What Scientific Agriculture Means as Figured in Dollars and Cents.

If the government were to advertise that they would furnish the farmers all the land they could cultivate free of rent in a certain country, how many farmers do you believe would sell out and move there to take advantage of the kind offer of the government? You reply at once that all the land would be taken up the first year, which is no doubt true, regardless of the fact that to sell out and move would be very expensive.

The government is making a much better proposition to the farmers than that. It proposes to send scientific agriculturists to your counties and teach you by actual experimenting how to increase the yield of your land from 5 to 25 bushels of corn per acre.

Suppose they teach us to increase the yield ten bushels per acre. This means, at 50 cents per bushel, an increase of five dollars to the acre.

The average rent paid for corn land is seldom over five dollars per acre.
If they can do this, and their reports show they are getting such results in many parts of the United States, they are virtually furnishing you the land free of rent and saved you the expense of moving to the country as suggested above.

The trouble with a great many of us is that we insist on continuing in the "same old way," the way our fathers trod.

Some of us are too prone to want to sneer at the experiment agent when he comes around, as some "young upstart" from the city who knows nothing about farming.

There are still a few farmers who insist that the crop will stand a drought better if the land is thrown up in great ridges, contending that the ridges will hold the moisture better than if the land were left level. It is high time we are waking up to the realization of the fact that if we do not desire killing our ground by robbing the soil of its fertility, we must devote a little time to the study of the science of farming. Have you ever figured what it would mean to increase the yield of your land five or ten bushels per acre? If you are cultivating 40 acres and increase it five bushels you would have 200 bushels more, which, at 50 cents, would be $100; or, if ten bushels per acre, you would have 400 bushels more, which would be $200.—Union Tribune.

A Fair Deal.

I saw in a newspaper the other day a plea to give railroad corporations a fair deal. The editor seemed to think that the legislatures of some of the states had been imposing upon them.
It sounded a little funny to me and reminded me of the story of the Irishman who was brought before the court to be tried for some crime he had committed. Pat was lamenting at a great rate. The judge sought to soothe the Irishman's fears and told him that he should have justice done him. "Arrah!" replied Pat, "and that is what I'm afraid of." If the railroads had justice the water would be squeezed out of their stock and their capitalization reduced nearly half.
Upon this just valuation all rates could be reduced. As a general principle.

Think Before You Vote.

If the politicians were as anxious for the welfare of the farmers as they were for their votes before the election, the farmer would soon get all that is coming to him. If this was so, the farmers would not have to go down on their knees to the legislature now begging for some return of their tax money in the way of four cent-

COUNTRY RULED BY LAWYERS.

Farmers in a Class Are to Blame That Their Interests Are Not Better Looked After.

A newspaper is responsible for the statement that there is only one farmer in congress. Whether this is correct or not is immaterial. The fact remains that the percentage of farmers among our lawmakers is very small. I do not undertake to say that our legislature and congress shall be composed principally of farmers, but it does seem reasonable that there should be a greater proportion than there now is of has been for some time. It may be said that a lawyer is better equipped to draft a law than the farmer, but even this statement may be received with some doubt in view of the way in which judges are setting aside laws made by our national and state legislatures. It seems to be a question whether one lawyer can write a law in such a way that other lawyers cannot pick a flaw and thus render it inoperative. If there is any good reason why lawyers should predominate in our legislative bodies it is that they are presumed to be able to write laws that will stand the test of court decisions.

In making this statement I am not taking into consideration the decisions of corrupt judges, or those whose ignorance of the ordinary principles of business or lack of sympathy with the people or public interest incline them to render decisions wholly inconsistent with the law and the facts. The lawmakers are not responsible for the decisions of such judges.

It is quite often the case in our law-making body that the interest of the farmer is not intentionally neglected.
It would be better if there were more farmers in our legislative bodies. It is proper that they shall be represented in the construction of the laws which affect their interest. The farmers themselves are in a great measure to blame for not being represented in our lawmaking bodies. The country today is practically ruled by lawyers, many of whom cannot or do not distinguish the difference between a fee and a bribe. Many others who are supposed to be representatives of the people are the actual-paid attorneys of corporations and trusts.

The selection of lawmakers is one of the propositions which the members of the Farmers' union should carefully consider. The vote of the farmers constitutes the largest factor in American politics. In most states we have the primaries to aid us in the selection of candidates in this work.
It is not necessary to make it a partisan question, but members of all parties can demand a larger representation of farmers in our state and national lawmaking bodies. The farmer knows best what he needs. If there were a considerable number of them in our legislative halls they could make known their wants and needs and protect their own interests with their votes. That would also form a link connecting them with our brethren in such a way as to give the farmer greater influence in public affairs.

The Guarantee Bank Law.

The Oklahoma law providing for the guarantee of all the deposits, like the meases, seems to be catching.
Oklahoma was the first to pass it but other states are rapidly following and the national banks are running over each other trying to get in under its provisions. The substance of the law is that it imposes a tax on the deposits of all the banks to create a fund to pay depositors if one or more of them should break. It is a good law for the people. It will help to restore confidence, which seems to constitute the biggest part of the assets of the banking system. It is especially good for the farmers who prefer to make their deposits in a home bank and require something more than a safe and a sign as assets upon which to base their confidence. I am not informed as to whether its constitution-ality has been pronounced upon or not. If it can stand that test and run the gauntlet of "technicalities," "expert witnesses," "reasonable doubts," and "confiscation" without being dis-trucked, we may hail it with our hats and shouts of joy. The farmers haven't got a great deal of money, but the most of them have some and expect to have more. They furnish most of the deposits for the little country banks and they like to feel safe when they put their money away for the proverbial "rainy day." And this law answers that purpose.

One great drawback to the Farmers union is that too many of its members listen to outsiders who think it to their interests to defeat the objects of the union. We regret to say that many merchants and bankers erroneously think the union will injure their business, when, as a matter of fact, if they would be friendly to the union it would help their business. At any rate, members of the union should trust each other rather than their enemies.

Think Before You Vote.

If the politicians were as anxious for the welfare of the farmers as they were for their votes before the election, the farmer would soon get all

LA VENDER

By LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE

(Copyright, by J. E. Lippincott Co.)

Old John Davis came along Southern Lane in the early dusk and stopped in front of the house nearest the churchyard. He stood a moment and stared across at it.

"I can smell them bushes out here,"
he said. "My, ain't they sweet!"
He crossed to the gate and entered.
A long, straight path led up to the little sloping-roofed, shutterless house. It faced the rich yellow west, and its windows were the color of those of a cathedral.

"Is that you, Mr. Davis?"
He came to a halt; "Yes, it's me, Mrs. Field."

A slender old woman came around the corner of the house and eyed him distantly for a moment. Her face was small and dark; her eyes were dark.
A certain breathlessness, as though that of expectancy, hung about her.
"I seen you coming," she said briefly;
"I guess you come for the lavender."

"Yes, Mrs. Field, that's what I want."
He followed her back to a grassy space hedged in on two sides by tall lavender bushes, brimming with their June spears of exquisite bloom.

"Here's your lavender," said Mrs.
Field, as she put the blossoms into his outstretched hands. "You ask five cents a bunch for them stalks—you hear?"

"We always do," said the old man.
"Lord, ain't they sweet!" He thrust his withered face down into them.

Mrs. Field looked at him with a curious hesitancy. "What kind—what kind of market did you have yesterday, Mr. Davis?" There was a secret and faltering eagerness in her voice.

"Oh, middling, middling. Folks want stuff for nothing these days.
They want you to grow it, and dig it up, and cart it to town, and then just throw it at 'em when you get there.

"You helped to drive her to it, John Field."

And if you ain't willing, they're ready to sass you. Them hucksters get all the profit."

The woman's face grew wistful in the waning light. "Nobody could sell better'n me when I wanted to," she said.

"That's so, Mrs. Field. Susanna and me were just talking about it. We all thought it was a better chance for the rest of us when you give up your stall.
How long ago was that, Mrs. Field?"

"Ten year and more, Mr. Davis."
"It was that year we had them three hard frosts handrunning," said he; "it was when—when—"

"You mean when my Jean went away," said Mrs. Field.

The old man was abashed. "I didn't mean to bring up any of your troubles, Mrs. Field," he blundered on.

She stood silent. The creakles seemed to grow louder and louder.

"Well," he rose and moved slowly away out of the sweet-smelling space.
"Mrs. Field!"—he had halted and was looking back—"Mrs. Field, why don't you sell us one of them lavender-roots?"

A flash like that of fire passed over her dark, tense face. And yet it seemed long before she spoke. "It's Jean," she said at last.

"Jean!" he said hastily.

"Yes, Jean, Jean!" She was fierce and remote and appealing all in one.
Then she seemed to falter beneath his wondering eyes. "And when she comes back—when she comes back," Mrs. Davis, I want things to look like they did when she went."

"I feel sure she's coming back, Mr.
Davis."

"Yes, ma'am, maybe she will."

"That flash came again. She'll come back alive, or she'll come back dead, John Davis. I know she will!"
He lumbered away through the dusk without another word. She returned to her little table, and taking up the cooled lavender, busied by hand, with scent and thicken. She worked mechanically, her fingers trembling a little. The half light, the strict dark, the memory-drooping hour, were filled with the daughter that had lured out of her younger life like the morning smoke. What mattered the now regarding her that still faded show among the narrow country folk after those long years? To her she was virgin still.

"With Lord!" said Mrs. Field. It was

"Mrs. Field! Mrs. Field!" called a voice across the palings.
The old woman came slowly forward.

"I've just slipped down to see if your lavender," said the minister's wife. "How I love it!" She held her girlish face towards the delicate lilac bloom. "I wonder if you won't sell me just one little root, Mrs. Field. I'd like to try it in my garden."

"I ain't going to part with one of them roots, Mrs. Bowden. But I'll give you some cuttings, if you want me."

"Oh, thank you. I'm just wild to do something with that garden. We've been here a month, and we haven't seen a flower in it yet. How long has that hedge been growing, Mrs.
Field?"

"Some of it's twenty year-old, maybe more. The last I planted was eleven year ago."

Mrs. Bowden drew a long breath.
"How dear and old-timey and straggly it is! Now if my cuttings grow, —and you must show me how to manage them, Mrs. Field,—I'll be the proudest woman in the world. And when you sit in church and smell the blossoms, they'll be so sweet you'll think it your own lavender, and not mine at all!"

"I don't go to church," said Mrs.
Field.

On one side of the fence rose the graves, very distinct in the clear yellow of the west, and beyond them the church, distinct and dark. On the other stood the narrow old house, a side window one sheet of quiet ra-diance. The hedge looked dim and cloud-like, and seemed to float away into the softened space. Beyond the hedge stretched acre after acre of market-garden, whose already furrowed levels were filling with phantom mist; and out of this ghostliness was blown a primeval aroma that could be subtly detected under that of the lavender.

"I don't go to church," repeated Mrs.
Field. "I got tired of hearing preachers talk about Mary Magdalene and the thief on the cross. You'd think there was only two kinds of com-mendments that ever got broke."

Mrs. Bowden looked rather vague.
"I guess everybody gets tired of preaching sometime," she said. Then she laughed. It seemed easy for her to do so.

Her neighbor gone, Mrs. Field stood a moment gazing out into the churchyard. If she had put her hand over the sunken palings, she could have touched her husband's tombstone. He had been a hard man. A certain rigidity of conduct had brought him an enviable reputation, which, after his death, had ripened and mellowed into that of the saint. Some fleeting recollections of their early youth, when they had both lived away from the neighborhood, came into his wife's mind. Then some later and keener ones that roused and stung her. All at once she spoke out sharply. "You helped to drive her to it, John Field, and then, just like a man, you had to go and die, and leave me to bear it." Her voice rang out, peiting the air as though with stones. "Sinner, sinner, sinner!"

She went back to her humble task of tying the lavender stalks, but the light grew dimmer, the yard began to melt away into the gathering darkness, and presently she flung her apron over the unfinished heap on the little table and looked around and about her. "I wonder if she'll come," she said. An added breathlessness took possession of her. Her body appeared to strain forward in an attitude of almost painful watchfulness.

"I wonder if she'll come to-night," she repeated, as she went into the house.

Out in the lane each tree was a soft, blurred black, behind which stretched the distant and exquisite west. The road itself was a half-blotted track.
There were the old, shrill noises in the hidden grass.

Mrs. Field came out to her front-door. "Jean," she called softly.

It seemed to her, so sharp was her longing, that the girl must rise up before her out of the brooding dark. All hopes, her desires, her schemes, her ambitions, had resolved themselves into that one cry of her forlorn heart. She had given up church, market, friends, all the petty but absorbing threats of a country life, and lived eleven lonely years in a lonely house that she might be at home whenever Jean returned. Against that hour the chamber had been kept ready, the garden pruned and tended in the old fashion. There should be nothing new, nothing accusing and strange.

"Jean," and her voice struck into the dusk with a passion that was like a flame. "If you're dead, come back!"
A step came faltering along the lane outside.

"Jean!"

There was no answer.

Old Mrs. Field went swiftly down the gravel path.

The step began to draw nearer.

"I know you'd come back, Jean, I've been waiting. There's only you and me now. Your father's dead."

The groans came and rocked against the far golden sky.

"Jean! Jean!"

There was no answer.

Mrs. Field ran out into the road, grazing blindly before her with outstretched hands.

LAXATIVE FOR WOMEN

There is a great difference in the purpose to which a laxative is put. Tablets and pills, cathar-tics, are usually violent purgatives, causing, and altogether too frequently, for the average person.

A woman at all times needs a mild laxative—in fact, none other needed by anyone, weak or strong, though they may be, for the object simply to move the bowels, and a gentle laxative will do it, what is use of a violent one?

LAXATIVE FOR WOMEN

There is a great difference in purpose to which a laxative is put. Tablets and pills, which are usually violent purgatives, cathartics, and altogether too powerful for the average person.

A woman at all times needs a mild laxative—in fact, none is needed by anyone, weak or strong, though they may be, for the object simply to move the bowels, and gentle laxative will do it, what is the use of a violent one?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin earned a well-deserved vogue among women and children and old people who must necessarily be careful of what they take.

It is a liquid laxative tonic and mildly the greatest stomach, liver, bowel remedy before the American people. The price is only 50 cents or $1.00, as it comes in both sizes, and druggists sell it. Its pleasant taste and gentle action make it an ideal remedy for women in constipation, torpid liver, stomach, sick headache, heartburn, such like digestive complaints. In a short time will remove the trouble, so that future medication will be unnecessary. Its tonic properties build the stomach and intestinal muscles so that they act naturally again. This is so in the experience of many happy families, like Mrs. Brannan of Albany, Va., Mrs. K. L. Stout, of Louisville, and numerous others. In fact, way out Williams, Cal., as Mrs. J. E. Blackman of that place writes, the whole family seems to be using it.

If the remedy is new to you and you want to make a trial of it before sending your name to the doctor's address below and a free test bottle will be sent you. Then, if results are satisfactory, you can buy it of your druggist.

If there is anything about your ailment that you do not understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. Caldwell, 201 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Practical Gain.

Teacher—Lennie, if you were to take your father's razor and leave the steel blade open out in the grass overnight, what would happen?

Learner—Lennie—it would get a rust oxidation of the steel or what is commonly called rust.

Teacher—Quite right. Now, Willie, if you would put your mother's diamond ring in the fire, what would you get?

Wise Willie—I'd get a lickin'.

FOOD FACTS

What an M. D. Learned.

A prominent Georgia physician went through a food experience which makes public:

"It was my own experience that led me to advocate Grape-Nuts and I also know, from having prescribed it to convalescents and weak patients, that the food is a powerful builder and restorer of muscle and brain tissue, as well as muscle improves the digestion and sick patients always gain just as I did in strength and weight very rapidly."

"I was in such a low state that I had to give up my work entirely, and went to the mountains of this state, but two months there did not improve me; in fact I was not quite as well when I left home."

"My food did not sustain me and it became plain that I must change. Then I began to use Grape-Nuts and in two weeks I could walk without fatigue, and in five weeks returned to my home and profession taking up hard work again. Since that time I have felt as well and strong as I ever did in my life."

"As a physician who seeks to help all sufferers, I consider it a duty to make these facts public."

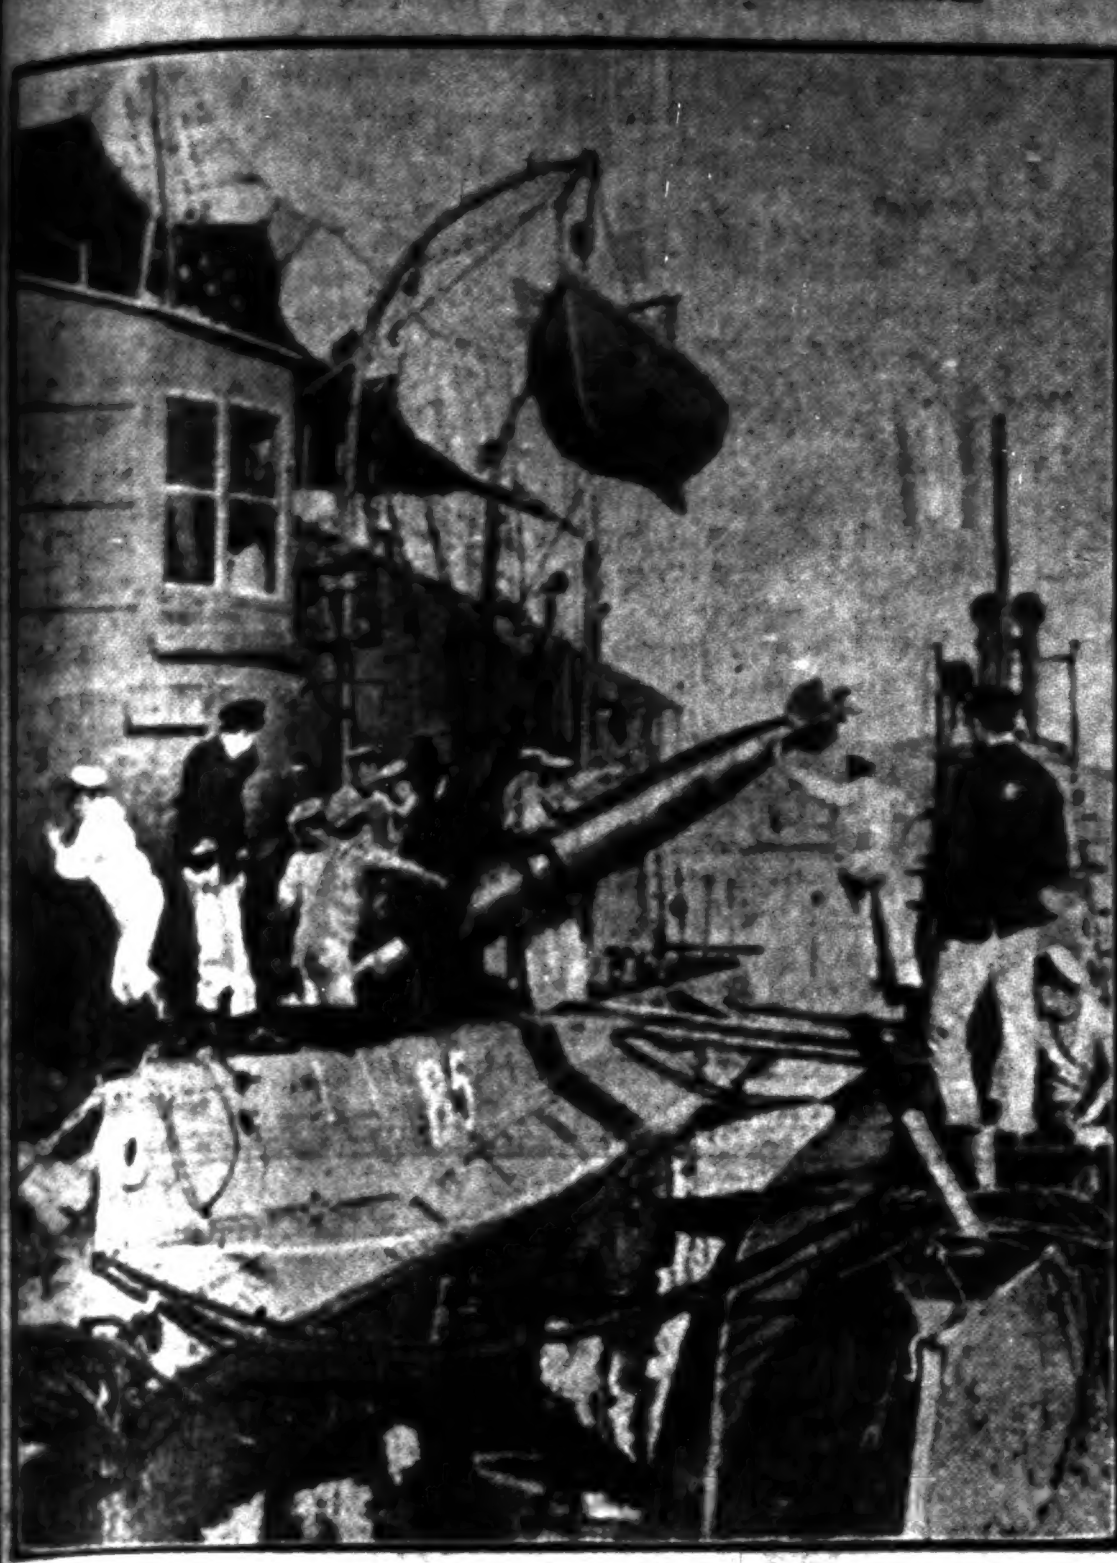

Trial 10 days on Grape-Nuts, and the regular food does not seem to sustain the body, will work miracles.

WINS PROPHET FAME

Oklahoma Hermit Correct in Predicting Floods.

Railway Builders Stand in Awe of Him Because River Wrecks Bridge Thrice as He Said It Would.

Muskogee, Okla.—Living in a hut on the bank of the Canadian river, near Pierre Davis, a hermit, whose prophecies in all that time have never carried him outside of a six-mile radius of his cabin, and then only for food and skins for clothing.

Davis is six feet tall, finely built and of commanding presence. His great hobby, in fact his only hobby, is to foretell certain events, especially pertaining to floods. So accurate has been that workmen along the Midland Valley railroad almost stand in awe of the queer old man.

Three times last autumn he predicted that floods would come and each time a deluge arrived, on the date he named.

While workmen were completing a new Midland Valley bridge to replace the one washed away, the old hermit made his first appearance. For a time he regarded the bridge workers with silent scorn. Then he spoke to the foreman of the gang.

"You see little water in the river now," he said, "but in 30 days the floods will come and the bridge will be carried away."

Having made his prophecy the old hermit strode away and the workmen laughed at him as if he were crazy. Exactly 29 days later the flood came. The following day the Canadian river swept away the bridge.

The bridge was rebuilt, and when the workmen had nearly completed it the hermit again appeared. He prophesied that November 22 there would be a 14-foot rise in the river and that the bridge would again be washed away. The 22d of November the bridge was again washed away.

Four days later while workmen were rebuilding the bridge the picturesque figure appeared again. So solemnly the old hermit prophesied that the following Sunday the bridge would again go out. The prophecy proved true.

Undaunted, the company again put workmen to rebuilding the bridge, which was completed December 13. Before the final repairs were made Davis made another prophecy. He predicted that the first train would not cross over the bridge until December 13. This prophecy also proved true.

Although the bridge was completed December 13 there was a delay in getting the first train over, and it was not until the 15th that traffic was resumed.

On every occasion Davis has foretold the exact height to which the river would rise, and his predictions have been correct.

YIELDS BIG REVENUE

British Inheritance Tax Realizes $90,000,000 Annually.

American Investigator Presents Figures in Connection with Tariff Legislation—Estates Chief Source of Income.

Washington.—British inheritance taxes, drawn from a population of 41,000,000, yield $90,000,000 to $95,000,000 annually out of a total internal revenue of $170,000,000 to $180,000,000. About 4,000,000 estates pay the bulk of these taxes. This is the substance of a report by Charles M. Pepper, who has been investigating the subject for the bureau of manufacturers, department of commerce and labor, in connection with the tariff revision.

The revenue from the death duties, Mr. Pepper says, is a little more than half that from excise imposts and considerably more than half the amount realized from the income tax. The gross capital value of the estates contributing to the inheritance tax in 1908 was over $1,500,000,000, and the net value was a little below $1,400,000,000. The gross value of the personality was $1,013,000,000, and of the realty $413,000,000.

Of the various classes of inheritance taxes, the chief sources of revenue are estates proper, which last year netted approximately $71,500,000; legacies, $19,500,000, and successions, $3,500,000.

The kind of wealth which contributes to the revenues through the inheritance duties is indicated. On a little more than $500,000,000 gross capital value of personality, shares or debentures of public companies, were valued at $480,000,000; mortgages, $93,000,000; loans on bonds, notes, etc., $67,000,000; stocks or funds of the United Kingdom, $45,000,000; foreign stocks or bonds, $55,000,000; insurance policies, $41,000,000; household goods, $34,000,000.

The value of the personality abroad subject to the death duties has fluctuated since 1899 from less than $20,000,000 to above $75,000,000. In 1908 the value was but $20,000,000.

Agricultural land furnishes considerably less of the total duties than household property and business premises. The net capital value of the legacies from which duties were collected in 1908 was $405,000,000, while the succession duty was realized on a total capital valuation of $90,000,000.

In the rates of duties for successions, legacies and estates, estates of less than $500 are exempt. The duty ranges from one per cent. on estates from $500 to $2,500 up to ten per cent. on estates of $3,000,000 to $5,000,000. Above $5,000,000 there is a graduated scale.

There were 67,500 estates contributing to the inheritance taxes in 1908, while those exempt were 18,000, of which about 1,700 were insolvent.

The largest number of estates, 17,356, were those between $5,000 and $50,000, aggregating a valuation of $326,000,000, or about 23 per cent. of the total.

Of the 67,533 estates contributing in 1908, 3,915 were of $50,000 and upward and aggregated a total of $1,400,000.

A division of the funds accruing from death duties is made between the exchequer and the local taxation accounts. Generally the proportion allotted to the local taxation accounts is above 30 per cent.

$2,000,000 AS BIRTHDAY GIFT

Five Heirs of Wealthy Woman Get Fortune When the Youngest Becomes of Age.

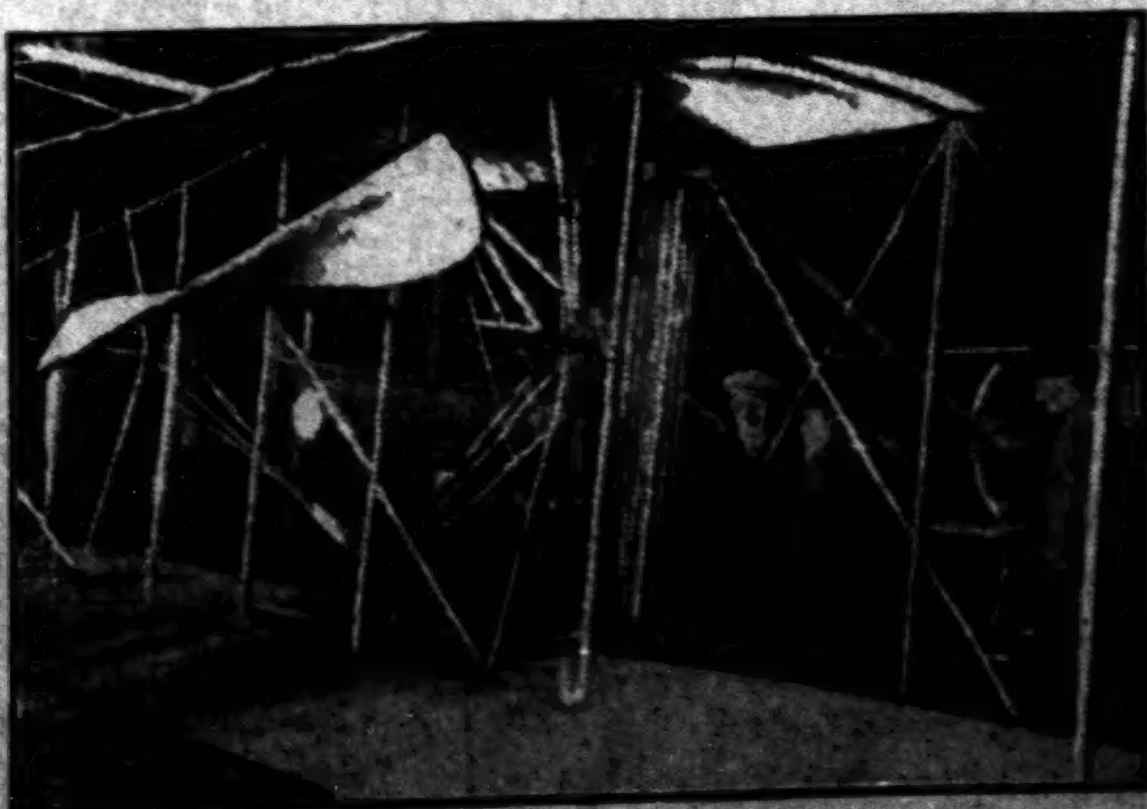

Pasadena, Cal.—A birthday party, having as favors shares in a $2,000,000 bequest, was held the other evening at 537 South Orange Grove, the home of Miss Ellen Elliot, in honor of her eighteenth birthday anniversary.

When Mrs. Edward Elliot died several years ago it was generally understood that she left a large fortune in trust, to be distributed among her five children when the youngest became of age.

The five children equally sharing the $2,000,000 estate are Miss Ellen Elliot, Mrs. Clover Noyes, Mrs. Nina Wotkins, John Vischer Elliot and a second son, now residing in the east.

Besides the favor of approximately $400,000, Miss Elliot received many costly presents from her large circle of friends.

NEW ISLAND RISES FROM SEA.

Addition to Bogoslop Group Makes the Appearance of a New Island in the Great Fear.

Seattle, Wash.—The steamship Down, Capt. R. B. McKay, in from Alaska, brings the story of the appearance of a new island in the Bogoslop group, near Unalaska, March 18. Capt. McKay says that, according to the natives, the islands in the group were quiet for about ten days prior to the time when the new island, with great rumblings, pushed its head out of the sea. The craters of the Bogoslop group began to belch with fire, smoke and sand.

Capt. McKay added that the natives, in great fear, could not be made to approach within many miles of the new island. They declared, however, that its peak was visible and that it was throwing out a volume of steam. The natives even said that soon after the appearance of the island the rumblings ceased and the eruptions from the craters on the Bogoslop islands came to an end.

"Beginning about March 1," Capt. McKay said, "there was a series of rumblings which became more pronounced every day. These rumblings were accentuated by occasional loud explosions, which increased in violence and frequency."

"Then either new or old craters of the Bogoslop group burst out in flames and the reflection of fire was visible in the sky at night time and could be seen from high points near Unalaska. The marshal sent Indians off to see what had occurred. They returned and said that they would not go near the place, as there was fire on Bogoslop and a new island was visible. The island is now covered with steam, indicating that the rocks are still hot."

INVENTS 'WIRELESS' TORPEDO

French Works Turn Out a Radio-Automatic Boat Operated from Shore or Ship.

Paris.—If all that is claimed for the new radio-automatic torpedo built at the Crouzet works is true it promises to prove the most terrible engine of destruction that the genius of man has yet invented. This weapon of naval warfare can be worked from shore or from ship, and can be used against a ship of the enemy's fleet in motion. There is no escaping it.

The radio-automatic torpedo is controlled and directed by the employment of Hertzian waves and by aid of an apparatus which differs little from that now used in wireless telegraphy. When loaded it would contain 1,000 kilograms of gun-cotton and about ten times the quantity of explosive charge of the ordinary torpedo. Its appearance is synchronized so as to receive the Hertzian waves from the "parent" ship or shore station and to refuse those emanating from the enemy. It will be capable of maintaining a maximum speed of nearly fifteen knots for five hours.

One of the most important features is the wide radius of its action. From its starting point the operator, be he on ship or ashore, can control its every movement, stop it, send it dead slow ahead or astern and alter its course with as much ease as if he were on board the deadly craft.

The inventor is M. Gustave Gavet, who has long devoted himself to the study of the problem and of the science of naval warfare.

Compass for German "Jags."

Berlin.—The German "Jag" is to be guided home by compass. The city fathers of Berlin have set the fashion. They have ordered that in 100 of the most popular parts of the city the pavement is to be ornamented with a mosaic design in colored marble of a mariner's compass.

At least the comic papers of Berlin say that the compasses are for the special benefit of inherited gentlemen who have lost their bearings. The city fathers, however, declare that the object is to enable strangers to find their way more easily about the city. The designs are about a yard in diameter and show the cardinal points of the compass and the half points.

Old Army Horse is Retired

With the Yale Battery He Took Part in Campaigns in Both Cuba and China.

New York.—Among the horses recently retired from United States army service was Old Faithful of the Fifth artillery. Old Faithful of his career as Putnam and later was known as Peking. There are many stories in the army of his wonderful intelligence and splendid battle record.

At the beginning of the Spanish-American war Putnam, as he was then called, was young and strong and earning a livelihood as a draught horse in New Haven, Conn. When the Yale battery was organized Putnam became one of its most valuable members and took to army life as a duck does to water.

Such was his reputation that he was secured for the regular. He took part in the Santiago campaign and made a fine record at El Caney. Early in 1898 he was sent to the Philippines with Battery F, Fifth field artillery.

Then came the heavy outbreaks in China, and so that country Putnam went with the American forces. He showed in every one of the engagements in which the allied forces participated and when the foreign armies reached Peking the old Yale horse, with another name as Corcoran, was pulling the first of the light field guns.

In climbing a hill to take a position of advantage Corcoran's traces broke and Putnam gallantly pulled the gun to the summit unaided.

Hatroom in Churches Wanted.

Camden, O.—Camden milliners have started a movement to have hatrooms with mirrors provided in churches where pastors object to women who wear the new large creations.

"If the preachers want the hats taken off they should provide dressing rooms where the hats may be kept during the service and furnish a mirror," said one milliner. "Surely, they can't expect us to hold our hats in our laps or put them under the seats and, without a mirror, why, goodness, it is simply out of the question."

Tips Shared by Law.

Spokane, Wash.—Advances sheets of the new criminal code adopted at the recent session of the legislature show that it contains a strict anti-trading law, which provides that "every employee of a public house or public service corporation who solicits or receives any gratuity from any guest and every person giving any gratuity shall be guilty of a misdemeanor." This was the first indication that such a law passed the two houses of the legislature.

Keep Your Bowels
A Safe Certain Home Remedy
By All Druggists
A fact any doctor will tell you constipated people suffer most. Regular bowel action is necessary to health. People constipated either part or all must use something to make them move. This should not be a violent purgative or a cathartic, but tears its way through the bowels, leaving them in a state that prolongs the constipation. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is pleasant, natural, laxative, for the waste matter and establishes daily movements without pain. Children and delicate never be given strong purgatives. Only weakens the bowels. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin serves as a tonic and an aid as well as a laxative that is effect upon the most obstinate and yet safe and pleasant. With the first few doses the constipation, such as dyspepsia, indigestion, liver trouble, biliousness, sour stomach, sick headache, etc., quickly disappear. It is a remedy that should be in the home for every member of the family. Mrs. J. C. Cooper, Chicago, writes: "I use Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin myself and family. I keep it constantly, as I find it to be a most ant laxative and it all you say. Sarah J. Houser, Kansas City, says: 'I would have been constipated for years if it were not for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is the best medicine I have ever used for constipation, indigestion and all the best known laxative for the bowels. We are glad to send a free trial to any one who has not used it. It is a fair trial. Write to Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Co., 205 Caldwell Building, Ill. All druggists sell it at 25c per bottle.'"

Whooping Cough.
This is a more dangerous disease than is generally presumed. It will be a surprise to many to learn that more deaths result from it than scarlet fever. Pneumonia often results from it. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used in many epidemics of whooping cough, and always with the best results. Delbert McKelg of Harlow, Iowa, says of it: "My boy took whooping cough when nine months old. He had it in the winter. I got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy which proved good. TRIAL OF MRS. POPE.

Wednesday morning interest in the trial was manifested by the crowd in evidence early in the morning. Soon after 8 o'clock court room was well filled, a number of ladies and several men being present.

All the attorneys being busy, a recess was taken to 9:30 a.m. and resumed to 10:30, and it was a minutes after eleven when the action of a jury was proceeded. Soon after 12 o'clock the jury was empaneled as follows:

Shout!

Rev. P. G. Maness filled his regular appointment Saturday and Sunday.

I must say just a word or two about post cards, but not to the people of this community, for they heard Rev. P. G. Maness talk something about them Sunday. Oh, young people! I have just conceived the idea that post cards are an unnecessary thing for us. Show me a boy or girl that don't pay 5c or 10c every week that comes for cards, and goes to Sunday school, and when the hat comes around, won't give one cent for the help of Sunday school. I have received cards that I would be ashamed to send anyone by mail or any way. If you can't send nice cards, it would be better to send none at all. I hope I won't make anyone mad about the cards, but won't you stop before you get in trouble with them? I have never been a mail rider, but if you had the truth from the most of them, I expect that they would say that the most of their time they don't carry anything but cards to young people.

Now, let us see if we can't spend our money for making the world better, or for something more useful. If we would stop buying them the card companies would stop making them. And I think if we would cut out the cards and watch more who we keep company with, I think there would be better times. Now, if I have said anything to hurt any one's feelings, I hope you will realize some day that I was right.

MURDER AT JEMISON.

Wednesday night of last week (May 12) John Lawson, a negro, shot and killed his wife, Hattie Lawson, using a Winchester rifle for the deed. The woman was in the house and Lawson outside, and shot his wife through a window he raised for the purpose. The ball struck the woman in the breast, killing her instantly; passed entirely through her body, then went through a wall and struck another negro woman, Love Webb, also in the breast, inflicting a serious wound.

Having committed the crime, Lawson succeeded in making his escape, and was captured in the railroad yards in Montgomery on Friday morning, the gun still in his possession.

Deputy Sheriff W. R. Jackson went down to Montgomery and returned Saturday evening with Lawson, who is now in jail at Clanton.

Tuesday evening the Grand Jury returned an indictment against him for murder in the first degree, and he was arraigned in court the same night.

At 8 o'clock Col. R. H. Knox, who appeared for the prisoner, entered a plea of not guilty, and the trial was set for Friday.

During the proceedings the prisoner sat in a dejected position with his head between his knees.

Wednesday morning the prisoner withdrew his plea of not guilty, and Col. Knox declined to go any further with the case.

T. A. Curry and A. C. Smith, acting as his attorneys, a plea of guilty was entered, and the trial will take place Friday.

Chamberlain's Liniment.

This is a new preparation and a good one. It is especially valuable as a cure for chronic and muscular rheumatism, and for the relief from pain which it affords is acute inflammatory rheumatism. Those who have used it have invariably spoken of it in the highest terms of praise. Lame back, lame shoulder and stiff neck are due to rheumatism of the muscles usually brought on by exposure to cold or damp, and are quickly cured by applying this liniment freely and massaging the affected parts. Stiffness of the muscles, whether induced by violent exercise or injury, is allayed by this liniment. For sale by all druggists.

For years I was troubled with biliousness and constipation, which made life miserable for me. My appetite failed me. I lost my usual force and vitality. Peppin preparations and cathartics only made matters worse. I do not know where I should have been today had I not tried Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. The tablets relieved the ill feeling at once, strengthened the digestive functions, purified the stomach, liver and blood, helping the system to do its work naturally. —MRS. ROSA PORTER, Birmingham, Ala. These tablets are for sale by all druggists.

TOBACCO IN TEXAS

PRODUCT OF THE FIRST QUALITY ASSURED.

Experiments Have Shown That the Proper Soil for Growing the Highest Grade Is Found in the State.

After experimenting for several years with cigar leaf tobacco in Texas, growers now believe they have found the proper soil for growing first quality tobacco. Through the courtesy of A. H. Prince, formerly connected with the bureau of plant industry as a tobacco expert, the following account of conditions in the Lone Star state is presented:

The 1908 crop of Texas tobacco proved beyond all possible doubt that the Texas grown product is destined to become one of the principal types of cigar leaf. During recent years the acreage planted in tobacco in Texas has been diminishing, rather than increasing, but during this time new soils were being tried, and the finding of a soil that produces a superior quality of tobacco has resulted in the industry being transferred to a new section of the state.

In east Texas lies what is known as the "red belt," consisting of a strip of land from three to five miles wide and extending some hundred miles or more through the counties of Sabine, San Augustine, Nacogdoches, Cherokee and Anderson. The largest area of this soil is found in San Augustine county. At first sight this land appears identical with some of the red clay soils of the eastern states, but a closer examination shows it to be entirely different in character.

This soil consists of a rich, sandy silt loam, whereas the red clay is stiff in its nature. A peculiar feature of the red lands proper is that, although they lie 150 miles or so from the gulf of Mexico and at an elevation approximating 400 feet above sea level, oyster and other sea shells are found in the deposits of marl which underlie the belt. The geological evidences that this land was at one time submerged are unmistakable.

When it was discovered that this soil was identical with the Cuban tobacco soils experiments were at once begun to determine the character of tobacco leaf it would produce. In 1908 about 200 acres were planted at widely separated points in the belt, and this was the first crop that could be considered of commercial importance.

These 1908 crops were a distinct success, the quality of the leaf being excellent, and leaving but little, if any, doubt in the minds of those competent to judge that the product would take well in the tobacco markets. From 700 to 1,000 pounds per acre were made from the first crop, while in some cases a second, and even a third crop of 500 pounds was secured from suchers. This tobacco sold readily at 15 to 20 cents a pound, bringing the grower from $100 to $270 an acre. A good percentage of wrappers possessing a perfect burn and a white ash was selected from these crops.

Preparations are being made for a much larger acreage this season, and planting is now going on. Packing houses are being opened up in which this tobacco and future crops will be handled, and sweat and small cigar factories are being established to manufacture same into cigars.

Good Roads.

The big public question this year will be road improvement. It seems strange that there should be any "opposition" to those who want better roads, but if you think there is no opposition, start a road campaign in your locality and find out. As a matter of fact, the road problem is of far more importance to the farmer than either the tariff or silver question. A good road costs money. It is a business investment requiring a large outlay of cash at first, and the interest on this investment comes back not only directly in the form of cash, but indirectly, as the farmer along the road is able to save horsepower in hauling his crops to market. The chief question is how is the money to be raised? Who is to handle and pay it out? It is a financial matter rather than a question of engineering skill. It ought to be debated and debated in every schoolhouse in the land.—Oklahoma Farmer.

Education of Value.

The school garden has no equal as an aid to nature study. It brings the child in close touch with nature and nature's laws. It can be used in correlation with all other branches taught in the school room. The practice in measuring and marking out the garden, systematically planting the seed, teaches the child to put into actual practice the mathematics he has learned in the school room. Much language can be taken up in connection with it, as can also writing, painting, drawing and geography. In many instances the products of the school gardens are taken to market and sold, and the money deposited in the bank, thus giving the pupils some idea of everyday business methods.

For the Head of the Herd.

Whatever the character of a dairy herd there should be a thoroughbred sire at the head of it, and he should be of the dairy and not of the beef type. Once in a while you may run across a "dual purpose" cow, but nature does not provide dual-purpose bulls.

BOOKKEEPING ON THE FARM.

Agriculturist Should Know Cost of Production and Profit on Everything He Raises.

To be up to date the farmer must plan ahead. If he is wise he will open an account in his ledger for every crop he raises, including horses, cows, sheep, swine and poultry. He will have a system of bookkeeping that will show him at the end of the year which crop paid a profit and which created a loss.

It will be a great satisfaction to know how the potato, the onion, the general garden, the hay and the straw crops paid. His ledger will show how many days his teams worked, crediting them with such amounts as he would have had to pay had he hired teams to do the work. Against this will be the price of feed. There need be no item for labor in attending to the horses, as the manure and the use of the animals for pleasure drives will offset that.

The income from the cows and the sheep, the swine and the poultry would have to be the cost of feed. The writer knows of a progressive farmer who follows that system year after year, says a correspondent of the Oklahoma Farmer. His daughter keeps the books. He reports each night the sales, the purchase, the hours the teams were at work, etc., and thus is he able to keep a record of his doings and knows exactly what each crop means to him.

Beginning the new year, the farmer should lay out his plans for the spring operations, the size of the vegetable garden, the varieties to grow, the increase of the small fruit plots and the additional trees to the orchard, the changes and the repairs that should be made to the barn and other buildings, not forgetting improvements on the old homestead.

There are a hundred and one matters that can be planned for 1909's operations, and no better use could be made of one's evenings than to map out all these matters.

The latest catalogues of reliable seeds, nursery and implement houses can be secured, and profitable time may be spent in carefully looking them over. Lists of seeds, trees, tools, etc., should be got and ordered before the general rush in the spring. This will avoid delays, errors, and vexations generally.

The farmer is a business man and each year the farm is becoming more important to the welfare of the country. The farmer is no longer the subject of ridiculous cartoon, but the emblem of prosperity in all the high-class publications. The whole world looks to the sturdy tiller of the soil for the means of maintaining prosperity in the land.

The Little Pigs.

The little pigs should be encouraged to eat at an early age as possible. The dividing of farrowing pens, so that the pigs can have access to a shallow trough away from the sow, is of great value. Keep everything scrupulously clean, or serious digestive troubles will likely result.

Feed only in limited quantities, and allow no old feed to remain in the trough from one feeding to the next. If the little pigs and the sow are confined inside all the time a few sows and roots will greatly benefit them, if given every two or three days.

Young pigs fed in this manner will not fall away in condition when they are separated from their dams. In fact, they will practically wear themselves by the time they are eight or ten weeks of age.

Abundant exercise and frequent feeding are essential to the best growth and development of the young pigs. By the time they are ready to wean some kind of forage crops or pasture should be available for them.

The gains made upon pasture and green forage crops are not rapid, but are very economical; and the pigs' digestive powers are greatly enlarged and their bone and muscle are better developed by the time their fattening period arrives. A good variety of forage crops and pasture is necessary to provide plenty of grazing during the season.

Alfalfa, clover, oats, peas, rape and rye may be profitably utilized as pasture and forage crops for pigs. Land that is utilized for hog pasture will gain rapidly in fertility, and will be in excellent condition to produce large crops of roots for winter feeding.

Seed Breeding.

The profits from any crop are largely dependent upon the reliability of the seed from which the crop is grown, says R. N. Billin, of the Colorado Agricultural college. A mixture in the variety, or a poor quality in the seed of some crops may be a very serious injury; but with a special crop like cantaloupes, that has market demands to meet, the use of poor seed may mean the total loss of a season's work. On several occasions in the early days of the cantaloupe industry at Rocky Ford, when the growers depended upon the seedmen for their seed, entire fields were worthless on account of mixtures and unmarketable types.

Cows that are to calve in winter or early spring should have about six quarts of some vegetable every day for two weeks before calving. If this course is pursued there will be no milk fever nor any of the other many troubles incident to calving time.

There is always a market for the chicken from the time it is a month and a half old till it is ready to die a natural death.

SPOILED A GOOD IMPRESSION.

Final Act of Inmate of Asylum Case Visitor Good Ground for Doubting His Sanity.

Low Dochastler tells in the Saturday Evening Post of a friend of his who visited an insane asylum and came across an inmate who was waiting in the corridor. His friend engaged the inmate in conversation and discovered him to be a most intelligent person, posted on all the topics of the day, with rational ideas about everything and no signs of insanity.

"You do not seem insane," said the visitor.

"Certainly not," replied the inmate. "I am perfectly sane. I am here because of a plot against me by my enemies. If I could get word from my sisters and brothers I would be glad to see them at once. Also, I would like a word with my lawyer."

To make sure the visitor took the half an hour with the inmate and at the end, was convinced a great injustice was being done. He said he would gladly take a message to your sister or your brother. I am sure they are sane."

"If you will," replied the inmate, "I shall be under lifelong obligation to you. I am incarcerated here for no reason. I am sane. Please say to my lawyer that you saw me here and that I want him to come at once and see me so I can take steps to regain my liberty."

There was some more conversation and the message was arranged for and addresses given. After other protestations of his sanity and assurances by the visitor that the outrage would soon be corrected, the visitor turned to go. As he was about to descend the steps he was hoisted off his feet by a tremendous kick and fell into a flower bed. He turned to see the inmate grinning at him from the steps.

"Why did you do that?" shouted the visitor.

"Lest you forget," said the inmate, shaking a finger at him—"Lest you forget."

Wrong Estimate of Success.

Dr. Eliot, lately president of Harvard university, said recently at a reception in New York: "My career appears to strike a considerable number of people as a successful one. People congratulate me on what they call my success. But my career has certainly not been successful in what is considered to be the American idea of success in a pecuniary way. It is a success in terms of service—service to the community. Now, does not this refute the common opinion that the American estimate of success is a pecuniary one?" Dr. Eliot then related an incident in one of his travels by boat when the vessel's officers came to him and said: "We officers want to ask you a question. We know you are a smart man. We want to know why, being a smart man, you are not rich?" Dr. Eliot did not repeat his reply, but concluded his remarks on the subject by saying: "The real American estimate of success in the world is serviceableness and not wealth."

London Homeless.

On one night recently a census of homeless people was taken in London. The figures are startling. There were 2,088 persons homeless in the streets, including 1,329 men, accommodated for a few hours in shelters, but not provided with beds. To these may be added 62 persons provided with tickets for beds free of charge by the Church Army. On the same night no fewer than 21,864 persons occupied beds in licensed houses, 1,188 in casual wards. London's homeless army was, therefore, 25,140.

MAGNIFICENT JAIN

An absolute gem of Indian architecture, Mount Abu, in Rajputana, India, a marble and mosaic of elaboration, a certain monotony and "vain repetition" in whose honor they were at about 500 or 600 B. Rather die than destroy a microbe of luxury, and give all their possessions to the most elaborate in India.

Nuts and Pie May Insure 1,000 Years on Earth.

Dress in White, Sleep in Draught and Forget About Death, Says Boston Savant—Suggestion for Daily Menu.

Boston—Dr. John Fair, head of Boston's newest cult, the "New Life" is certain that he has discovered the secret of how to laugh at old age, and how to exist not only for 100 but for 1,000 years without pain, evil or sorrow.

He says 350,000 people have enlisted under his banner. Here are his rules for living to be 1,000 years old: "Dress always in white. White is the prime principle of life. I believe there should be a universal law making it a crime for any person to be attired in black or dark apparel."

"Do not think of death; do not lie in death."

"Live principally upon vegetables and nuts. Abjure meat, milk, oil, a flesh of all kinds, as well as all stimulants."

"Sleep eight hours daily, exercise eight hours and work eight hours."

"A man's most critical hour in the day is the 39 minutes before and after meals. He should absolutely abstain from work a half hour before each meal, and must not resume work until half hour after each meal."

"Each person should be alone for half hour each day, not necessarily sleep, but to get his mind in a condition of natural and perfect repose."

"Sleep with your bedroom window open every night all your lifetime. Ways have a draught in your room."

"A daily menu I would suggest would be as follows:

"Breakfast—Honey, toast, rare coffee, and at long intervals an egg."

"Dinner—A bowl of soup made from nuts or celery or potatoes, preference; an apple or an orange, with variety, lettuce or radishes."

"Supper—Apple pie, fruit."

"I offer to every one who accepts my faith not 100 or 200, but 1,000 more years of life if it is desired."

Mountain Top Thrown Out of Place Changes Surface of a Canyon in California.

Ventura, Cal.—The slide of the side of a great mountain of the Sierrita range, in this county, has changed the entire surface of Santa Paula canyon. The Santa Paula canyon, made a lake in the South Fork of the river, six miles back from the ranch equal in size and beauty to Tahoe. The head of the creek has been raised 200 feet above its former level, and the water pours out over a magnificent fall 200 feet high. The earth slip that threw the mountain out of place occurred on April 11. It was local in character, caused excessive moisture in the hill, and shock was only noticed locally. The tremor did not extend to Santa Paula or any of the towns of this county.

Whooping Cough.
This is a more dangerous disease than is generally presumed. It will be a surprise to many to learn that more deaths result from it than scarlet fever. Pneumonia often results from it. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used in many epidemics of whooping cough, and always with the best results. Delbert McKelg of Harlan, Iowa, says of it: "My boy took whooping cough when nine months old. He had it in the winter. I got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy which proved good. I cannot recommend it too highly." For sale by all druggists.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headache, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Lived 155 Years.

Wm. Parr—England's oldest man—married the third time at 120, worked in the fields till 132, and lived 20 years longer. People should be youthful at 80. James Wright of Spurlock, Ky., shows how to remain young. "I feel just like a 16 year-old boy," he writes, after taking six bottles of Electric Bitters. For thirty years kidney trouble made life a burden, but the first bottle of this wonderful medicine convinced me I had found the greatest cure on earth." They're a godsend to weak, sickly run down or old people. Try them. 50c at Upchurch Drug Co.

How to Cure Liver Trouble

Keep Your Bowels Regular and Your Stomach Sweet

People sometimes imagine when they have liver trouble or are bilious that the main thing to do is to take physics. Taking pills and keeping your bowels regular are two very different matters. The use of a violent cathartic does not mean the cure of constipation or the establishment of regular movements. Physics is an emergency remedy, but never a bowel treatment. If the bowels do not move regularly there is a reason deeper seated than the mere clogging up that is removed by a dose of salts or pills.

When that drowsy, tired feeling, with the coated tongue, the dull head pains, the sour stomach, the sallow complexion, constipated bowels and touches of fever come on it is time to take a medicine that will act on the bowels gently and mildly, cleansing and strengthening them, stir up the liver and aid the stomach in digesting the food.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin does this every time. Take a few doses and you have quickly the drowsy feeling leaves, regular bowel movements come back, with a good appetite and perfect digestion, and you soon feel like your old self. It does not grip nor pain, it acts smoothly, mildly and is very pleasant to take. Wm. Hinchman, Moulton, Mich., says: "I was troubled with indigestion and liver trouble. I have used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin with fine results. It is a perfect laxative and I now feel as strong and well as formerly." Wm. Brock, Monticello, Ill., says: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best remedy I ever used for liver complaint or constipation."

Mrs. R. H. Brown, Addison, Ind. Ter. was troubled with torpid liver and constipation. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gave her prompt relief. All druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

Pepsin Syrup Co., 301 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill. is glad to send a free sample to anyone who has never used it and will give it a fair trial.

Arlington's Sleeping Hero Army

BY EDWARD B. CLARK
COPYRIGHT 1900 BY W. PATTERSON

WASHINGTON.—In wooden Arlington just across the Potomac from the city of Washington 16,000 of the country's dead are at rest.

Arlington holds a sleeping army, and no soldier host ever camped upon a ground more nobly beautiful. Many of the great captains of the federal forces in the civil war are at rest here. Grant and Sherman sleep elsewhere, though their place is here. Generals, colonels, sergeants, corporals and privates are side by side in this burial ground of the nation, for death, like love, levels all ranks. The tents of Unionists and Confederates are pitched not far apart, and no picket walks between. "All is quiet along the Potomac."

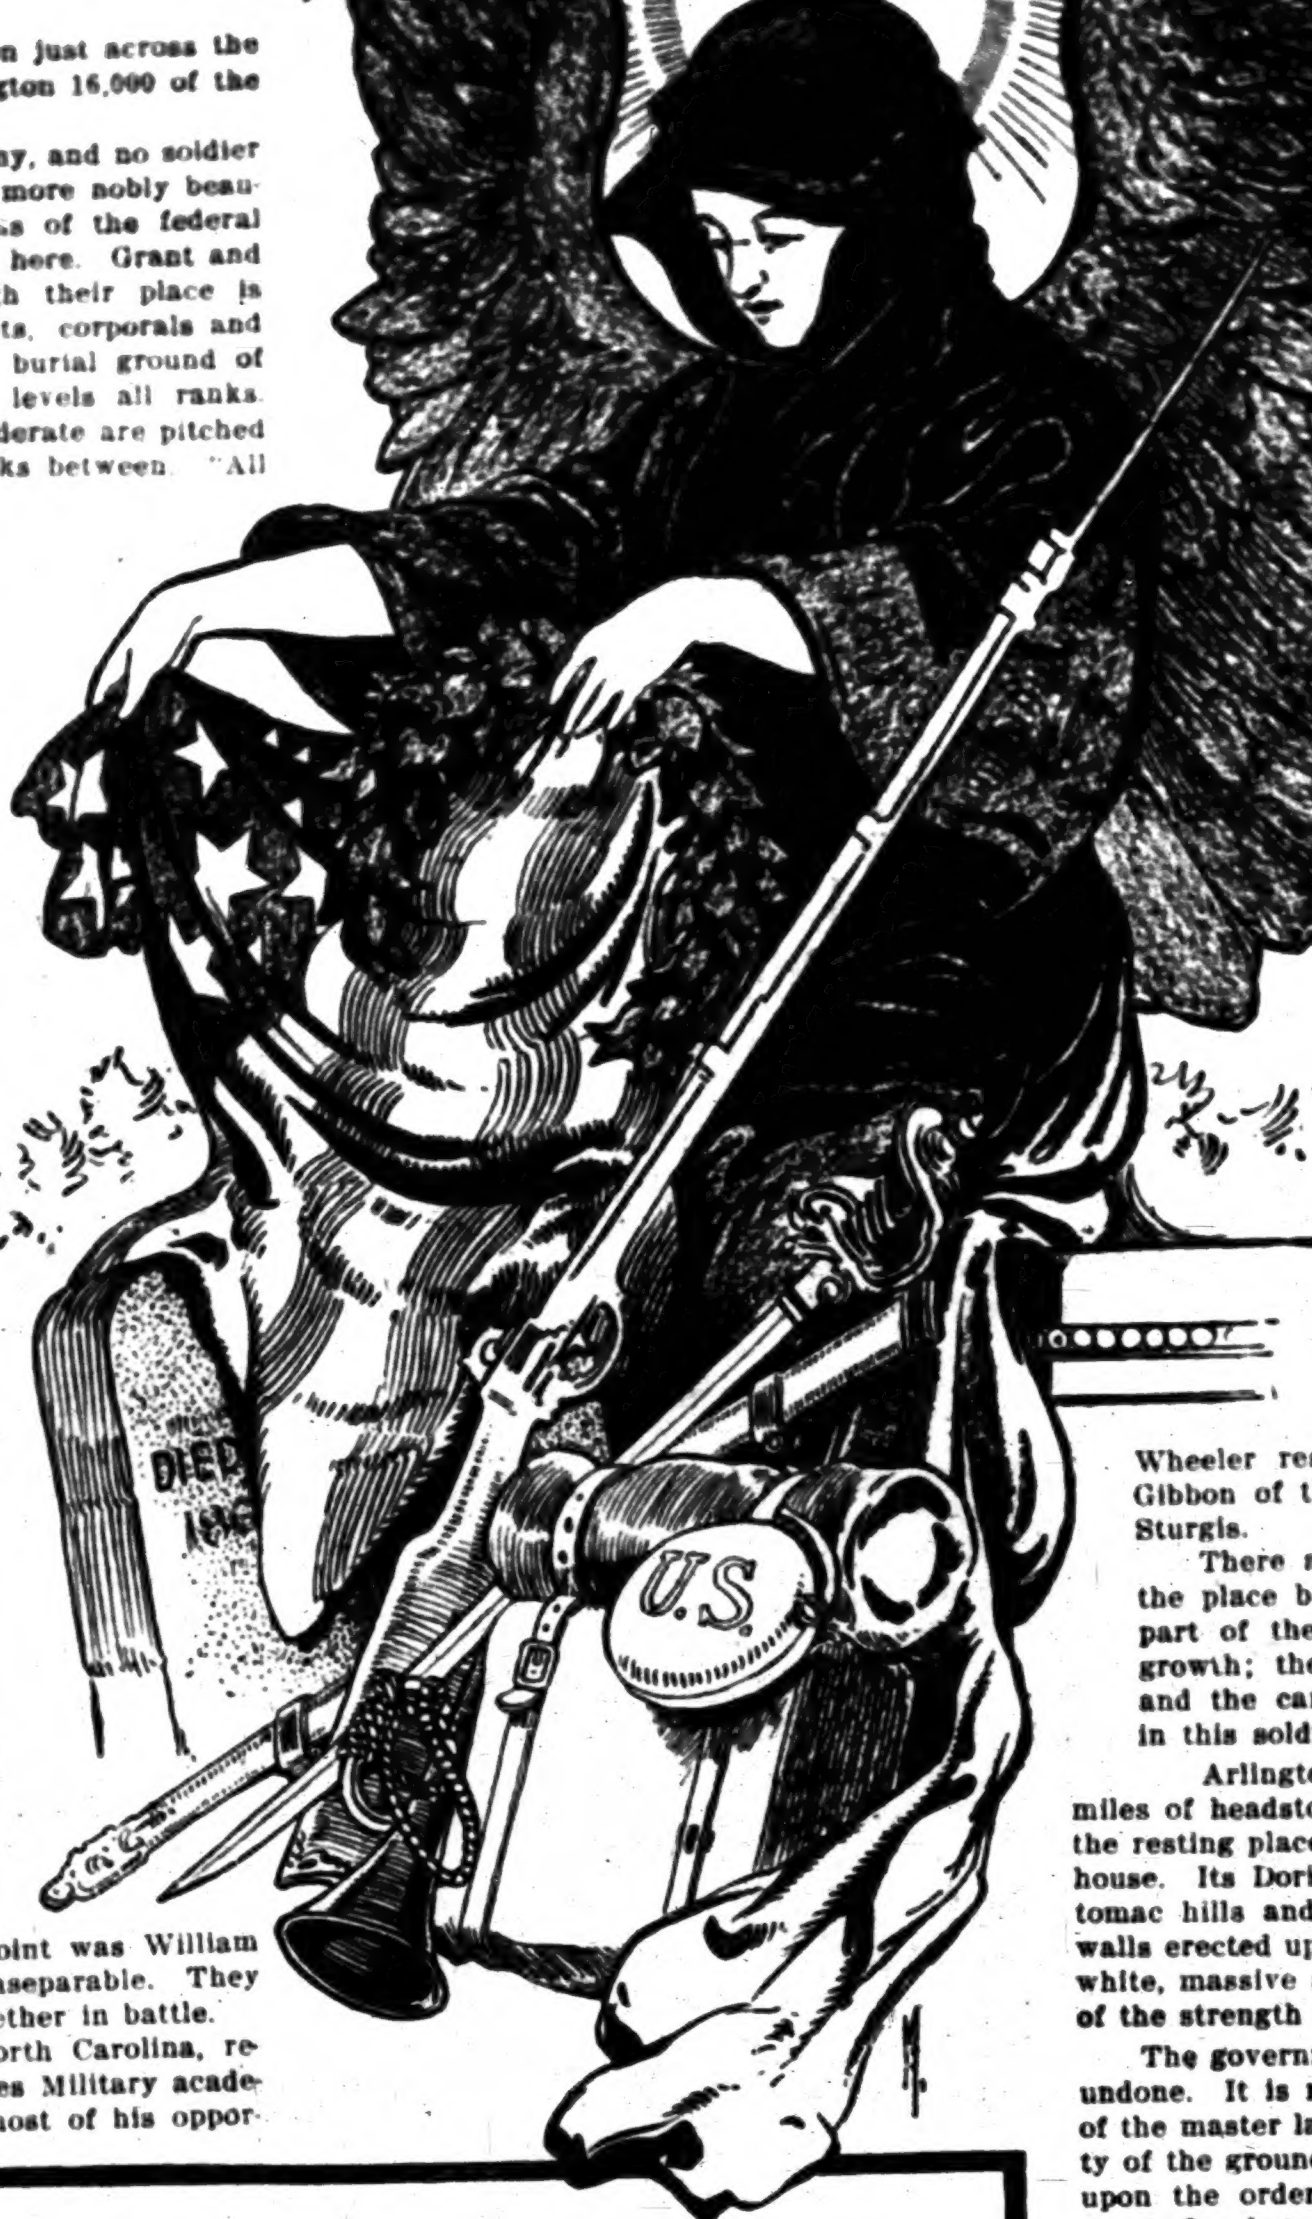

Soldiers of many wars are here. Revolutionary veterans lie not far removed from descendants who met death in the Philippines. The victim of the Seminole rests at Arlington, and with him is the man who fell before the earthworks of Molino del Rey. Sailors who served on the Constitution and on the Maine are in port in Arlington. It is a camping ground of the united service.

The troopers stationed at Fort Myer can look through the iron gateway at Arlington and see the grave of a man who for 71 years was a commissioned officer of the United States army—the veteran Harney of the old Second Dragoons. He fought in the Black Hawk and Seminole wars, in Mexico, on the plains and in the war between the states. He was a soldier after the soldier's own heart. Harney sleeps unforgotten of the army.

Near the Harney monument rises the shaft beneath which lie father and son, both of whom gave their lives for their country. A little removed is the grandson, killed while leading his rough rider company in Cuba. Three generations of the Capron family are represented in the death rolls of the American army. Erasmus E. Capron, the grandfather, was killed at Cherubusco; Allyn Capron, the son, died as the result of exposure and hardship in the campaign before Santiago; Allyn K. Capron, the grandson, was killed while at the front with the Roosevelt command in the charge at Las Guasimas.

The younger Capron's grave is in one of the Spanish war sections of the cemetery. Near him rest Col. Alexander M. Wetherell of the Sixth infantry, and Maj. Albert G. Forse of the First cavalry, who went to their death together on the slopes of San Juan hill. Capron, Wetherell and Forse sleep under noble monuments. Scarce the length of a sentry's post from them lie the remains of Lieut. William H. Smith, killed at the head of his dismounted troop of the Tenth cavalry on San Juan hill. Smith was as gallant a soldier as the army has produced, but save for the government marker and for the flowers which comrades place there, his grave is unmarked. Smith's roommate at West Point was William E. Shipp. The two men as cadets and officers were inseparable. They were members of the same regiment and they died together in battle.

In 1879 William E. Shipp, a country lad from North Carolina, reported as a candidate for admission to the United States Military academy. He was a quiet, studious fellow, and made the most of his opporhis memory Gen. Lawton was from Indiana. Other states have honored with shafts in Arlington soldiers far less distinguished in the services of their country.

Gen. Sheridan is at rest on the lawn in front of the old Lee mansion, which was the manor house of Arlington. A medallion of the general is on the face of the stone and below it is the one word "Sheridan."

Nothing else is needed, for the knowledge of all men supplies the history of the sleeping soldier.

Lieut. Gen. John M. Schofield was buried two years ago in a grave not far from that of the Shenandoah raider. Schofield's grave is on a knoll under a lordly oak that has stood for a century. Near the hero of Franklin lies the body of Gen. Joseph Wheeler, who died in February, 1908. At the time of his death he was a brigadier general, though during the four years of the civil war he wore the gray of the confederacy.

Wheeler rests in close companionship with his one-time foes, Gibbon of the Iron brigade, and the sterling soldiers, Cook and Sturgis.

There are legions of dead in Arlington. Nature has made the place beautiful and man wisely has left to her the greater part of the work. The flowers and the trees are the native growth; the birds are those of the wild places, the woodthrush and the cardinal, who come back year after year, even though in this soldiers' camping ground they sing their revellies vainly.

Arlington house would be a sad place even if there were no miles of headstones stretching away from its doorsteps and marking the resting places of the dead. Time cannot kill the beauty of the old house. Its Doric columns were built to rival the stolidity of the Potomac hills and the mansion itself had its foundations laid and its walls erected upon the faith of honest workmen. The building stands white, massive and impressive and holds the mind with the mingling of the strength and beauty of its lines.

The government has done much for Arlington and it has left much undone. It is nothing short of a crime that a mind kindred to that of the master landscape gardener who saw to it that the natural beauty of the grounds was preserved could not have been brought to bear upon the ordering of the interior of the old southern home. The great fireplaces which at the Christmas season were once gorged with great logs which offered their substance to the flames for the cheering and the comfort of the guests, are now covered with rusty sheet iron. Stoves made at Troy, N. Y., or Detroit, Mich., supply warmth and make the interior look a crossroads station.

On the walls of the great drawing room, where Robert E. Lee and Mary Custis plighted their troth, are some printed extracts from speeches made by fervid orators upon sundry patriotic occasions. The frames are pine, the paper is cheap, the printing is poor and in one or two instances at least the sentiments are tawdry.

On a desk in one corner lies an open register where everyone visiting this shrine must write his name. In this matter of supplying a register and making compulsory the tracing of autographs the government has shown wisdom. If the book were not there to give the average tourist an opportunity to spread his name and residence in big letters, he would take out his finger restlessness either in scrawling on the walls or in chipping pieces from the monuments of heroes who lie without.

Robert E. Lee lived at Arlington until 1861, at such times as he could absent himself from his army duties. The morning of the 22d of April of that year he went to the porch of his home and standing between the two great central pillars he looked across the Potomac at the city of Washington. Then he turned away and an hour later was on his way to Richmond to offer his sword to the south. He never returned to Arlington.

BATTLE TAKES NAME FROM CHURCH

BY HOWARD ENRIGHT SEXTON.

Early in the year 1862 the determination of the union commanders to pierce the confederacy in the center led to a gunboat expedition up the Tennessee river. In military parlance this was a scouting expedition of the river navy to ascertain the chances of breaking the confederate lines by capturing a point on the Memphis & Charleston railroad.

Eight miles above Savannah, Tenn., a cannon boomed from a high hill on the left bank of the river and a solid shot plunged into the water among the boats. The leader returned the compliment with a few shells that fired a building at the foot of the hill. As the boats returned a small party landed and captured the hostile gun. They learned that the place was called Pittsburg Landing; that it was a shipping point for Corinth, Miss., and that two miles out was a little log church called Shiloh. At the suggestion of Sherman, Gen. Smith selected this as the point of concentration for the army to operate against Corinth, and so the great battle takes its name from the peaceful little church that sits demurely among its tall oaks on the Corinth road.

In more than one respect the battle of Shiloh holds a unique position in the annals of great conflicts. For years the confederates, who failed in their attempt to crush the union forces and fled from the field on the second day, spoke of it exultingly as a "great victory." The federals, who, although roughly handled, repelled the attacks of the enemy, could not think of that long and bloody Sunday without humiliation.

Albert Sydney Johnston, who failed signally in his design, was exalted to a fame that shall live forever; Grant, who really won the battle against odds, was in disgrace at its close and but for Lincoln's clear judgment and the accident of Halleck's recall to Washington would have passed into obscurity.

With Sherman, the field of Shiloh marked the turn of the tide. He was 42 years old, but mentally and physically a much younger man. His career had been varied. A banker, a lawyer, a teacher, a president of a street railroad—in all of these, through no fault of his own, he had been unsuccessful.

At Bull Run he had commanded a regiment, whose retreat from the field he himself had reported as "disorderly in the extreme." His judgment as to the magnitude of the struggle was so much clearer than that of his superiors and associates that he had been considered insane. Years after those who had relieved him from command denied that they had ever regarded him as "mentally unsound," even while acting as they did. His unselfish support of Grant at Donelson was the star of a brigadier, and after Shiloh no one ever spoke of the man who, twice wounded, still animated his men as "Crazy Bill Sherman."

THE LEE MANSION AT ARLINGTON CEMETERY.

tunities. On Saturday afternoon during "release from quarters," Shipp went into the room of a classmate and said: "I've done nothing but 'bone' mathematics and French for a year. I'd like to read a novel—the lighter the better. Have you anything stowed away?"

Novels were contraband. Shipp's classmate pried a board from the base of the pillar at the end of the alcove wall and took out a book and threw it on the table. The fact that Shipp came from North Carolina was forgotten and the classmate said: "There is a book that's pretty good stuff! It's Albion W. Tourgee's 'A Fool's Errand.'"

A day or two afterward Shipp brought the book back. "The scene of that story is laid in my home," he said. "It's a libel on every person and everything in the place. The man who wrote it wrote maliciously. It is possible that some day he will learn that something good can come out of the town which he has maligned."

Shipp, a southerner, sprung from the slave-holding class, and, judged by the Tourgee standard, a negro hater, joined, upon graduation, the Tenth Colored cavalry. He was leading his black troopers in the charge at San Juan when he was shot and killed.

A patriot had come out of Tourgee's North Carolina town.

A massive granite block stands on the spot where John M. Stotsenburg lies buried. The men who hauled stones at Stotsenburg gathered them to build a monument to his memory. Stotsenburg was a captain of the Sixth Regular cavalry. He was appointed colonel of the First Nebraska volunteers and went with his command to the Philippines.

Col. Stotsenburg found that his militiamen were not accustomed to discipline. He made them drill and he taught them the duties of a soldier. They resented the process, called him a martinet and were on the point of asking for his removal. The regiment went into battle and won its fight, in part at least, because of the tutelage of its colonel. He was killed while leading the Nebraska volunteers in a charge that brought the regiment everlasting fame. The men of the command raised the money for the monument to their commander.

Near the "Temple of Fame" is the grave of Maj. Liscum of the Ninth infantry, who was killed at Tientsin during the invasion of China. The Liscum monument beyond all question is the handsomest memorial the National cemetery holds. This field officer of the Ninth in initiative and bravery upheld the best traditions of the American army and he was deserving of his memorial, but the shadow of it falls across the grave of Maj. Gen. Henry W. Lawton, unmarked save by the small stone bearing a number and a name which the government places at the resting-places of all who die in the service, major-general and private alike.

Gen. Lawton was killed in the Philippines, and his funeral was a matter of pomp by his countrymen, but time seems to have dulled the edge of remembrance and his state has failed to honor him with a stone in Arlington, though it has remembered him in Indiana's chief city.

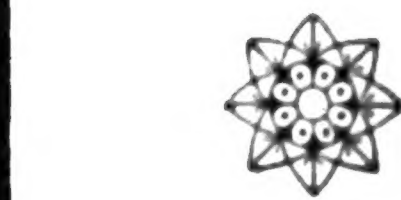

In justice to the family of the dead soldier it should be said on the best army authority possible that Gen. Lawton, before his death, put the wish virtually into the form of a command that no part of the sum left or given for the support of his widow and children should be used for a monument to

Editor Banner—I have been re-columns of the Banner that there will not be a Child's Day or all day singing, as is rumored, on Sunare several reasons, one being the talk of an all-day singing at Pleasant

Chamberlain's Liniment.

This is a new preparation and a good one. It is especially valuable as a cure for chronic and muscular rheumatism, and for the relief from pain which it affords in acute inflammatory rheumatism. Those who have used it have invariably spoken of it in the highest terms of praise. Lame back, lame shoulder and stiff neck are due to rheumatism of the muscles usually brought on by exposure to cold or damp, and are quickly cured by applying this liniment freely and massaging the affected parts. Stiffness of the muscles, whether induced by violent exercise or injury, is allayed by this liniment. For sale by all druggists.

Have your weak eyes and dull headache stopped by having J. V.

Why Suffer?

If you suffer pain from any cause, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills will relieve it—and leave no bad after-effects. That's the important thing. Neither do they create a habit. Most often the attacks become less frequent, or disappear altogether. Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills have no other effect except to relieve pain and quiet nervous irritation.

"We are never without Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. My husband, aged 15, was always subject to sick headaches until he began taking these pills, and they have cured them entirely. Don't think I have had to use them for six months. I recommend them to every one. A few weeks ago I heard an old friend was sick. I went to see him. He was down with La Grippe. I gave him one of the Anti-Pain Pills and left another for her to take a short time. They helped her away, and she says she will never be without them again. Last winter my husband was taken with pneumonia, both sides, and I know he would have died if it hadn't been for the pills. In less than half an hour he was sweating, and went to bed again. Whooping Cough.

This is a more dangerous disease than is generally presumed. It will be a surprise to many to learn that more deaths result from it than scarlet fever. Pneumonia often results from it. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used in many epidemics of whooping cough, and always with the best results. Delbert McKelg of Harlan, Iowa, says of it: "My boy took whooping cough when nine months old. He had it in the winter. I got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy which proved good. Lived 155 Years.

Wm. Parr—England's oldest man—married the third time at 120, worked in the fields till 132, and lived 20 years longer. People should be youthful at 80. James Wright of Spurlock, Ky., shows how to remain young. "I feel just like a 16 year-old boy," he writes, after taking six bottles of Electric Bitters. For thirty years kidney trouble made life a burden, but the first bottle of this wonderful medicine convinced me I had found the greatest cure on earth." How to Cure Indigestion

"When a person cannot eat ordinary food without discomfort afterward, when he has heartburn, acid, headache, gas on the stomach, water brash, belching up sour food, and this condition has continued for a week or more, it certainly is time to do something and do it quickly. That's what a popular physician recently said to the writer. 'First thing you know you'll have dyspepsia if you don't,' said he.

The quickest and best way to regain your normal condition is to step into the drug store and buy a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It gives natural, daily movements to the bowels, and that is usually where more than half the trouble lies. Then it aids digestion, sweetens the stomach, acts on the liver and is a general system tonic.

Postmaster Edgill, of Bruceton, Tenn., had such a severe attack of dyspepsia that his stomach, liver and bowels seemed almost paralyzed, but a few doses of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin relieved him and today he is well as ever. Maude Hall, Alpena, Mich., says that one bottle cured her of a very severe case of indigestion.

A. L. Burch, Chief of Police, New Philadelphia, Ohio, says: "I find Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin the best remedy for indigestion I ever used. I would not be without it." Rev. A. J. Fischer, Father, Tenn., is now 84, and yet it cures him of stomach trouble of 30 years' standing. Mrs. Mattie Crouch, Thompsons, Tenn., cured her five months' old baby of indigestion with it, so you see that while it is so effective it will cure cases of long standing of dyspepsia and constipation in old people, it is equally safe for babies, and it is pleasant to take, and does not pain or grip.

All druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Syrup Pepsin Co., 207 Caldwell Bldg., Cincinnati, O., are glad to send a free sample to any one who has not used it and will give a 5c sale.

BEST STOMACH REMEDY FREE

It is an old saying that if the stomach is sound the whole body is sound. Because so much depends upon proper working of the stomach, many persons find themselves with a variety of ailments which are really dyspepsia or a peculiar stomach ailment.

If you suffer from both stomach trouble and constipation you are on the way to many serious diseases. From just a few simple remedies you can get rid of these ailments. The waste matter that should be expelled from the system through the bowels has found its way into the blood and vitiated it. What is needed is not simply a violent cathartic, but a gentle laxative. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best remedy for this purpose. It has been used for many years by the people of all nations. It is a natural product of the stomach and its action is gentle and soothing. It is the only remedy that will cure the stomach and bowels without causing any harm. It is the only remedy that will cure the stomach and bowels without causing any harm. It is the only remedy that will cure the stomach and bowels without causing any harm.

If there is anything about your ailment that you do not understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. J. Caldwell, 301 Caldwell Building, Monticello, Ill.

AMBITIOUS.

Employer—What! want another? Why, you're getting $5 a month!

Office Boy—Yes; but I'm engaged, and my girl wants to be promoted.

Locations of Promotion.

Elizena, aged four, revelled in kindergarten lore, and each day imparted to her young mother the many interesting things that the sweet-faced teacher had told them. Among the vicissitudes of school life to be encountered was that of vaccination, which was new to the little one. After much explaining and reassuring this difficulty was safely passed. A few weeks later she returned one day from kindergarten in a whirl of excitement, exclaiming: "Mother, mother, I'm going to be promoted—mother, will I be promoted by my arm or leg?"

Work of Fish Hatcheries.

As the result of special efforts in the hatchery work during the year the output of fish and eggs in 1908 was greater than ever before in the history of the national bureau, reaching a total of 2,871,456,250. Of this number 413,809,325 were young fish distributed for the stocking and restocking of public and private waters, and the remaining 457,646,925 were eggs delivered to state and foreign hatcheries. The output of young fish exceeds the highest previous record for any one year by 276,000,000.

Fattest French Soldiers.

Occasionally our Paris contemporaries entertain their readers with an account of the tallest and the shortest man. Now a journal has gone a better and discovered the fattest recruit in the French army, who was found at Corbail. This notable distinction belongs to M. Leblond, the son of a merchant in the city. The young man turns the scale at 268 pounds, avoirdupois, or rather 19 stone.

NOT DRUGS

Food Did It.

After using laxative and cathartic medicines from childhood a case of chronic and apparently incurable constipation yielded to the scientific food Grape-Nuts, in a few days.

"From early childhood I suffered with such terrible constipation that I had to use laxatives continuously, getting from one drug to another and suffering more or less all the time. A prominent physician whom I consulted told me the muscles of the digestive organs were partially paralyzed and could not perform their work without help of some kind. So I tried at different times various laxative and cathartic known to me, but found no help that was at all permanent. I had finally become discouraged and had given my case up as hopeless when I began to use the Grape-Nuts.

"Although I had not expected the Grape-Nuts to help me, to my surprise Grape-Nuts digested themselves from the first and in a few days I was convinced that this was what my system needed.

"The bowels performed their functions regularly and I am now completely and permanently cured of my trouble.

"Truly the power of scientific food is unlimited." There's a reason.

Read "The Road to Wellville," in which you read the above letter. It appears from time to time in the newspapers, true, and full of interest.

Complaint comes from Texas that the railroad companies are discriminating against merchants who are siding the Farmers' union. This discrimination is made in the shipments made by such merchants. If the railroad companies are not already having troubles enough of their own they can increase the supply by thus making an indirect fight on the union.

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Edited and Contributed by W. J. MORGAN,
Springfield, Missouri.

It will produce good cotton and produce good vegetables, and profitable farming in the south, where are good railroad facilities, is more profitable than raising cotton. On many roads special trains run for the rapid transportation of produce and fruit.

Members of the union will co-operate in the production of cotton, and each one can have a small patch of cotton or fruit and yet secure the advantage of car rates in transportation to market.

Just think of what all the farmers could do if they would co-operate. And then think of the results from it. It is not a matter of if, but of when. Why they don't do it.

The fight on the Texas legislature against the farmers and corporate interests to have been "a draw." The corporation forces were strong enough to check all good measures, but strong enough to pass any bad ones.

The politics of the Farmers' union business and farming and the politics that doesn't stand flat-footed on that kind of a platform should be cracked without ceremony.

The farmer is not asking for any special privileges, but he does insist that the other fellow's special privileges should be taken from him so that there may be equal opportunities for both.

If the lawyer as a legislator has passed anything it is that he either won't make laws for the benefit of the people that will hold water when applied to prosecuting the farmer. Better mix the thing up with the more farmers.

The politician's idea of farming is that the farmer ought to farm his own land and the politician ought to farm the farmer. What are the farmers going to do about it?

Under unionism has always had a fight and it is still fighting, but stronger than ever before. The Farmers' union may have even a harder fight, but it also will live on. There will always be parasites who want to live on the earnings of the producers. These there will always be a struggle for existence on the part of organized labor, but they will win out because they are right.

THOUGHTS FOR THE FARMER

Some Reflections That Are Worth a Few Minutes of Even a Busy Man's Time.

Wagon wheels are the wheels that turn the farmer's fortune. Do not buy from every man who will sell, nor sell to every man who wants to buy.

Some of the resolutions we make at night we break before we rise in the morning.

The work we do cheerfully is a pleasure. Thus we may give ourselves wholly over to pleasure.

The things that cost us little may be expensive to maintain and bring us little when we want to dispose of them.

Never slight a man because of his poverty, for to-morrow he may be rich and slight you for the same reason.

Child life is the best life—it is what we begin with and what we end with. When a man gets tired of being a man, which he will if he lives long enough, he is content to be a child again. He is a man but once—he may be a child twice.

There are many poultry raisers who believe in milk for fowls. There are others who have never heard of the benefits that might be derived from the practice. Milk is both meat and drink. Try it, and you will find that the birds will do much better laying.

Getting older? Yes, but your trouble is that you are so conscious of the fact that with one year of time you have lost two years in one. You should realize to think of it at all, so that in two years of time you would add only one year in age. Wouldn't you live longer at this rate?

The man who makes the greatest mistakes also makes the greatest failures. His undertakings are always great. He makes more failures, too, than the ordinary man, since he is always doing more. His disappointments are many and great, for his expectations are many and great.

We spend our life in seeking and finding. Man does not seek wealth merely for the sake of wealth, but because wealth comes nearer satisfying that peculiar longing which he has for a peculiar something. The same is true of the man who is seeking fame. He is seeking the man who seeks wealth alone or fame alone never finds enough to fully satisfy him. The man who seeks God finds enough of him to be content.—William J. Burtcher, National Co-Operator.

Complaint comes from Texas that the railroad companies are discriminating against merchants who are siding the Farmers' union. This discrimination is made in the shipments made by such merchants. If the railroad companies are not already having troubles enough of their own they can increase the supply by thus making an indirect fight on the union.

CREDIT THE FARMERS' UNION

Earnest Work to Secure Enactment of Proper Laws Should Be Appreciated.

If it had not been for the Farmers' union making the fight it did uncompromisingly for the right and against the efforts of the cohorts of the "Fewer and Better Laws" crowd, dire would have been the result and the railroads and the other great corporations that desire to have Texas turned loose so that they may rope and tie her down while they go through her and brand her as their beef, would have, with the assistance and advice of the corporation attorneys, placed the people under the despotism of criminal wealth and kept them there as long as the people submitted. The thanks of the whole people of Texas should be extended to the Farmers' union for the success of the union's effort to protect the people.

The success of these gentlemen with the "Fewer and Better Laws" battle cry in preventing legislation has resulted in Gov. Campbell taking the matter in hand, calling an extra session and plainly informing the lawmakers that they must go to work and pass the laws the people wish, as expressed in their platform, or he will know the reason why they do not.

What the "Fewer and Better Laws" crowd will do now will be watched with interest by the people and the Co-Operator will try to let the readers of the paper know exactly what is happening down in the Austin neck of the woods.

That there was a determined effort made by the "interests to throttle the people of Texas through their laws," can not be disputed, for the evidence is too strong to be successfully denied. The laws that were placed upon the statute books of Texas by the people through the instrumentality of James Stephen Hogg, for their protection, in the first place caused a split in the reigning party political which was supported by all the big corporations, railroads and others, and by all the corporation attorneys, and by all the strikers and hangers-on who made a living by toadying to the classes above mentioned. The efforts of these "Robber Barons" were squelched under a great shower of ballots and the people had their way. That was nearly two decades ago, and these elements, forgetting, or thinking that the people have forgotten that fight, have plucked up heart and courage and again organized their battalions of attack and carried the breastwork of laws that stand between the people and rapine.

The old battle cry of these corporation pirates was "Turn Texas Loose." Do you remember it, boys? And the present one in use and glibly spoken by the well-nurtured representatives of the corporations is "Fewer Laws and Better Laws." Have you heard that cry, boys? With a different cry, but with the same intent to turn Texas over to the shynocks of predatory wealth, they have been organized and were ready when the legislature met for their silent and secret work.

It has been said that this lobby was one of the best and strongest that had ever held its night sessions in the state capital during a session of the legislature, and strongest of these and more to be dreaded was the body organized thoroughly and with the battle cry of "Fewer and Better Laws." It is probable that it was through this organization that the "interests" tried to work their will, for the men who filled the ranks of this organization in Austin were composed of men whose daily bread depended upon the success of their efforts. They were employees and not the authors or practical supporters of the so-called principles that they represented.

The intention of this organization was to not only have the present laws for the protection of the people killed but to have such laws as their instigators wished passed and the people placed entirely at the mercy of the combines, which represented "Capital."

Finding that the people were awake and that they had sent men, members of the Farmers' union, who could be trusted, to watch and prevent the aims of these gentlemen from being accomplished, they changed their policy and used every method known to lobbyists to prevent the passage of any laws, or as many as they could, and thus cause the will of the people to become a nullity. That this is so no one will deny, and if they did the results would prove the truth of the assertion. The platform demands were ignored, and as they contained matter that the people wanted enacted into law and the corporations did not, they were not passed. As one employee in the legislature, or around it, said innocently: "We did not get any laws passed, but we prevented many from passing."—Co-Operator.

Preserving Eggs.

Just as soon as the price of eggs drops again put some by for next winter's use. This suggestion is good for the consumer as for the producer. The outfit used is not a costly one and it will save you money during the cold months when you have to pay the coal bill.

The eggs should not be over a day old. Wipe them clean and submerge them in the water-glass solution, which is contained in a stone crock. Eggs must be kept under the liquid. When used wipe off the water glass. Try this and see if it is not a money-maker.

A good way to fight the trusts is to buy nothing they have for sale if you can help it.

SEEMED LACKING IN RESPECT

Little Girl's Innocent Use of Descriptive Slang Expression Amused Fellow-Traveler.

"I was going to Patchogue," said a woman at the Waldorf, "when I saw sitting near by a little girl with her mother, the mother evidently a foreigner, the child born in this country, both surrounded with bundles in the foreign way. The child was six. The conductor came along and the child of six held out the tickets."

"I want you to put us off at Patchogue," she said, smiling up at him, and help us with our bundles, please. My mother's a greenhorn. She doesn't know anything about traveling."

"I watched her until the two arrived at their destination, and I think I have never seen a more polite little girl or a more seemingly dutiful daughter. It was quite evident to my mind that she meant no disrespect to her mother by calling her by what would seem to us to be an opprobrious epithet. She had merely adopted one of our slang words as the very best of English."—New York Press.

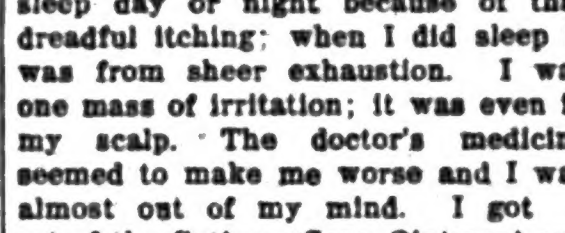

ECZEMA COVERED HIM.

Itching Torture Was Beyond Words—Slept Only from Sheer Exhaustion—Relieved in 24 Hours and Cured by Cuticura in a Month.

"I am seventy-seven years old, and some years ago I was taken with eczema from head to foot. I was sick for six months and what I suffered tongue could not tell. I could not sleep day or night because of that dreadful itching; when I did sleep it was from sheer exhaustion. I was one mass of irritation; it was even in my scalp. The doctor's medicine seemed to make me worse and I was almost out of my mind. I got a set of the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent. I used them persistently for twenty-four hours. That night I slept like an infant, the first solid night's sleep I had had for six months. In a month I was cured. W. Harrison Smith, Mt. Kisco, N. Y., Feb. 3, 1908."

AN INTERESTING PAINT TEST

There is a very simple and interesting chemical test by which to detect impurity in paint materials. Thousands and thousands of people, all over the country, are making this test. It is a sure way to safeguard against the many adulterated white leads which are on the market. Any one can make the test—all that is needed is a simple little instrument which may be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49. The outfit includes also a set of color schemes for exterior or interior painting, or both, if you wish, and a book of specifications. No houseowner should make any arrangements for painting until he gets this outfit.

One can't expect a satisfactory painting job without pure white lead. There is a way to make sure you're getting a pure white lead—without testing it. See that the keg bears National Lead Company's famous Dutch Boy Painter trademark, which is a positive guarantee of purity. Your dealer probably has this white lead. If not let National Lead Company know.

THE BANNER

CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, JUNE 3, 1909

No. 15

MAN ON THE CORNER

He is the age of big things and big things we have seen in him, measuring 54 inches in height, weight 2 pounds. It was in Clanton by J. L. Ruffin, champion cotton raiser.

J. Calloway, of Route 6, is a believer in the all cotton crop, and this year has one acre in cotton from which he expects to realize one bale. But if good and profitable things do not end.

Continual rains and thunderstorms are getting to be a serious matter with our farmers. Let us hope for an improvement in the weather. Hope on, hope ever, is a motto to stick to.

The now the merry month of June, the melody of the frogs is as sweet. "Croak, croak," all wishes to croak in unison, we await the threatened session of the legislature to be in real earnest.

We are proud to note the picture of J. Williams in this week's issue of the Alabama Baptist. He is a Clanton boy of whom we may be proud and carries his honors with dignity. An A. B. of Howard College is something to be proud of.

Way down South, at Dothan, in Etowah county, where we learn the eagle some of the best of the earth dwell, there appears to be a state of inquietude in the outer garments worn around and known to the inmates as "Ellas." What an Elias I don't pretend to know, judging from a recent learned in the Montgomery Advertiser it is a garment worn on festive occasions by Jake Pepperman, of Montgomery, and Bob Neil, of Selma—outsiders barred. But why should the apparel of these gentlemen be questioned? Jake, we know, is an Odd Fellow, and likely to appear in any costume, and Bob Neil, white man all through, is also a man, which makes him an odd fellow too, and none can predict their oddities may lead them.

Of this I feel assured, let them wear what clothes they may—Ellas or not—so long as they don't wear the garb of nature they will be heartily welcomed by the people of Dothan, and if the weather should be particularly hot, I doubt but that permission will be granted to dispense with "Ellas" altogether.

BREAK OF LIGHTNING
Last Wednesday morning, May 27, the family of Mr. Walter Haddox were at breakfast, lightning struck the stove pipe in the kitchen, passing through the floor, making a hole rather larger than a silver dollar, and tearing down the stove pipe. None of the family were injured, but all were badly scared.

CLOSING OF CLANTON HIGH SCHOOL.

A PLEASANT EVENING FURNISHED BY MISS TOLAND'S MUSIC CLASS.
The Clanton High School has just closed one of the most successful sessions in its history, under the management of Prof. Monroe.
Friday evening, May 28, was a scene of great joy and pleasure at the court house; although the weather was stormy without, it was peace and joy within, to a house full of patrons and friends. The stage was artistically decorated in ferns and flowers, with large American flags floating in the rear. Not less attractive on the stage was the music class of 21 girls and young ladies, around which the interest of the hour lingered.
Judge Pearson delivered a very instructive and beneficial address on the "Quest of Truth," which made an indelible impression on many of the young minds, also a number of older ones too. His local jokes were quite a bit. In conclusion he sang an original song to the "Class of 1909," "Trusting," which was inspired by his subject.
After which was the examination of the first grade pupils, Nellie May Porter and Lily Belle Mullins, who acquitted themselves and instructor with great honor. One definition of music was:
"Music is harmony.
Harmony is love,
Love is God,
God is all."

Then came the awarding of certificates to the following young ladies, from the 1st to 10th grade: Misses Florence Hopkins, Bertha Smith, Glennie Evans, Winnie Reynolds, Mamie Woods, Mae Smith, Warren Reynolds, Delene Hayes, Pauline Woodard, Mary Curry, Isora Callen, Willie Reynolds, Nellie May Porter, Lilla Belle Mullins, Ruby Gore. Miss Florence Hopkins receiving the gold medal for excellence in work; Miss Glennie Evans, a gold stick pin for memory, having memorized 160 pages of instrumental music in grade fifth.
Closing with the valedictory read by Miss Florence Hopkins.
Miss Toland is quite an accomplished musician, and with her resolute will has accomplished much in her line of work here; she has sown seed here in the musical world that will multiply and grow in the coming years. It is with much regret that her patrons and friends give her up, she has endeared herself to us all. We wish her much success in future years.

Stomach Troubles.
Many remarkable cures of stomach troubles have been effected by Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. One man who had spent over two thousand dollars for medicine and treatment was cured by a few boxes of these tablets. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at all druggists.

HARRIED
At the court house on Wednesday, May 26, Mr. C. A. Price and Miss Ada A. Vance were united. Judge Reynolds performing the ceremony.

Poplar Springs

Editor Banner—Will you be so kind as to give me space to say a few words about our singing at this place, Sunday, the 30th? We had a glorious day, had fine singing; I don't think I ever heard better. Prof. J. L. Gore was with us, one of our best singers. Also the champion bass singer from Collins Chapel, Mr. Littleton. The Concord choir was also with us. We wish to thank them for their help. Also we wish to thank Bros. Jacks, Tom Wilson and Henry Askins of Maple Springs very much for their aid. We thank all the visitors from other communities, hope they will all come again soon. I think if we could have Prof. Gore and the Concord choir with us a few more days it would wake up some of our people at Poplar Springs. Some of them seem to be asleep in regard to singing.

Singing began at 9:30 a.m. The committee for the day was E. D. Hand, W. C. Scarborough, W. H. DeVaughn and Ed Giles, chairman. J. L. Harris directed the first lesson 20 minutes, Miss Lettie Dupree, organist; C. B. Norrell 20 minutes, Miss Lettie Dupree organist; E. H. Mims 20 minutes, Miss Martha J. Mims organist; W. O. Rich, 20 minutes, Miss Dupree organist; W. H. Robinson 20 minutes, Miss Etta Robinson organist. Dismissed for dinner.

Met again at 1:30 p.m. Song by Prof. J. L. Gore; prayer by Bro. Leman Jones. John Armstrong 20 minutes, Miss Lettie Dupree organist; J. L. Gore 30 minutes, Miss Martha J. Mims organist; C. B. Norrell 10 minutes, Miss Lettie Dupree organist; John Armstrong 10 minutes, Miss Martha J. Mims organist. Closed with song. "God be with us till we meet again."

We desire to thank the people present for their good behavior during the day. Again thanking everybody and especially He that is the giver of all good and perfect gifts.

As I have not seen anything from this place in some time, I will write a few words.
There is going to be all day meeting at this place the first Sunday in June. Singing will begin at 9:30 and last until 10:30; then preaching at 11. Refresh for dinner.
Singing begins at 3 and continues the remainder of the day.

A number of the young people went to Highland Sunday and reported a nice time.

Macedonia

Editor Banner—Please allow me a space in your paper to say a few words in regard to this community. Farmers are getting along fine with their work considering the rainy weather.

Some of the young folks visited Cane Creek Sunday and reported a nice time.

Messrs. Joe and John Cox were pleasant visitors here Saturday and Sunday; we were glad to have them with us and hope they will come again soon.

Rev. E. L. Smith preached an excellent sermon at Mt. Zion Sunday. There will be preaching at Macedonia the first Sunday in June, by Rev. Willie Robinson; we hope to have a large congregation out to hear him.

Well, I have not heard of any more of the boys getting lost in Happy Hollow, I guess they took Blue Jay's advice and stayed in the middle of the road.

Say, Blue Jay, you and Farmer's Daughter come again, we all enjoy reading your interesting letters.

RIVER FOLKS.

Mineral Springs

Mr. D. P. Robinson has been on the sick list a few days or three days. Our Sunday school is still progressing nicely under the management of Mr. M. P. Robinson.

The farmers are all getting behind with their work on account of rain.

Mr. G. O. Smith went over in Coosa county Friday last to a memorial meeting.

Mr. M. P. Robinson and wife have just returned from a trip to Shelby county. Best wishes to the Banner.

ONE OF THE PUSH.

Cooper.

Editor Banner—Will you please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words about Coopers. Coopers is on the boom now. Mr. Philip Barrett went across the river to Coosa county Saturday morning, and has returned and reported that he had a very nice time.

The farmers of this community say that if it don't quit raining they will not make their seed back that they have already planted. But I nor anybody else never did see it rain always, so I guess it will quit before always. With best wishes to the Banner and its many readers, I am as ever

Women Who Are Bored.

Those attractive women who are lovely in face, form and temper are the envy of many, who might be like them. A weak, sickly woman will be unattractive and brittle. Constipation or kidney poison show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. For all such, Electric Bitters work wonders. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion. Many charming women owe their health and beauty to (bott. 50c) of Upchurch Drug Co.

Marble Valley

Editor Banner—I have come again to say a few words in regard to our community. Our community is not getting along so well, but hope to recover in the near future.

Farmers are getting behind with their work on account of so much rain.

On April 25th the home of Mr. McHammonds was saddened when the death angel visited and claimed his loving wife, Ula. She leaves a husband, father, two brothers, two sisters and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. Her remains were laid to rest in Fayetteville cemetery. There is one sweet face vanished, one sweet voice we hear no more, for the hand of death has banished; the family chain is broken; the golden link now waits above; hard, so hard, to leave a tender token of a father's keeping love; let us all through faith in Jesus and the life through Him that's given, join that blessed link up yonder and make that chain complete in heaven.

Mr. Jim Barnett was drowned in the river near Talladega Springs on May 8. He was out in the boat with Walter Dooley, when the boat overturned. Mr. Dooley swam near the bank, but gave out. A darkey near by cut a tree to him and drew him out to the bank. But Mr. Barnett disappeared and was not seen again until on May 8, he was found lodged beneath two willows, about a mile and quarter from where he was drowned. He leaves a wife and one child, relatives and friends to mourn his loss.

The memorial meeting, held at Marble Valley on Saturday before the Fourth Sunday in May, was enjoyed by all who attended. At 11 o'clock we heard an excellent sermon by Bro. Murphy of Birmingham. After dinner was served, the congregation all gathered at the cemetery and cleaned it off nicely and decorated the graves with beautiful flowers. They were then called to order by Bro. Murphy and some excellent songs were selected, after which Bro. Murphy made an excellent talk on death and resurrection. The congregation was dismissed by Bro. Blackman on Saturday night and Sunday we heard an excellent sermon by Bro. Murphy, and were dismissed by Bro. Lookidge. He will be back Saturday before the fourth Sunday in June.

Mrs. E. L. McKinnon, at Gaines, has been very sick.

Mrs. Sallie Blacklock of Marble Valley returned home Saturday morning from visiting her mother, Mrs. R. L. McKinnon.

With love and best wishes to the Banner and its many readers.

DEATH OF MR. IRA CAMPBELL

For many years a well known resident of Chilton, Mr. Ira Campbell departed this life on Sunday and was buried by the side of his wife at New Cedron, Monday.

Quiet and unassuming Mr. Campbell had many friends, who regret his loss. A good man has passed away.

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Edited and Controlled by W. S. HODGKIN,
Springfield, Illinois.

Remember that the union is an educational and a co-operative organization.

The agricultural department is doing a great deal to help the farmer who is willing to be helped. Every farmer should send to the agricultural department, Washington, D. C., asking for a list of publications which are sent out free. In this way it is possible to keep in touch with the best methods of farming. The secretary of every local union should look after this.

The Farmers' union is and will be just what the members make it. It is intended to be a school of education with a view to practical co-operation. But if a man thinks that all there is to do is to join, pay his dues, and then sit down and wait for something to happen, he ought to be bored for the simplest and then soaked in a horse trough.

Just as long as the farmer acts alone and independent he will be the prey of all other classes. In this condition he is the competitor of every other farmer, and every other farmer is a competitor of his. The other classes then use the farmers by having them to bid against each other in offering the products of the farm. It is only in union and co-operation that the farmer can hope to win.

LETTER FROM PRES. NEILL.

161st Cotton Exchange in New York and Various Departments in Washington with Good Results.

We reached New York on the night of the 15th, and on the 16th we were on the cotton exchange. While I was on the cotton exchange Brother Loudemilk was visiting the heads of the express companies and the whole sale grocery companies in the interest of a greater consumption of cotton. This proposition appealed favorably to these men, and after a full discussion of cotton consumption and its benefits to the southern farmer, they expressed a hope that cotton twine could be used throughout their business, cotton twine taking the place of jute twine, which is now used. This would make a larger demand for cotton and aid in taking away any surplus that might be raised.

We reached Washington on the morning of the 15th, and at once called up the president, secretary of war, secretary of the navy and the postmaster general. The larger consumption of cotton and its material benefits were carefully gone over with the head of each department, and each head expressed the belief that in time the great surplus of jute might be supplanted by the use of cotton goods that would consume millions of pounds of cotton and remove the possibility of a so-called surplus.

Jute is a foreign product that is raised in India, and ought not to come into competition with American labor. The Indian can live upon what the American would starve on. Cotton is an American product and ought to be protected by the American government. Should the American government protect the cotton raiser as it does the manufacturer a 20,000,000-bale cotton crop would produce no surplus. The government hedges around the manufacturer with a tariff law that gives protection to the tune of 50 per cent, but suffers the producer of raw material to go without government aid.

The agitation of cotton consumption was started by members of the Farmers' union more than two years ago and the results have exceeded the most sanguine expectations of the most rabid member. The results are here to stay and will prove of greater benefit to the cotton producer.

This competition with jute twine, bags and bagging has somewhat scared the jute trust and they are agitating the proposition of tariff reduction on jute in order to forever bar the door of cotton competition. You may safely look for cheaper jute bagging this fall, but don't be deceived. Push the battle until the rights of the American producer are fully protected.

Ask your merchant if he favors the Farmers' union idea of using cotton bags, rope, etc. If he says he ain't got time to find out what he believes about it, then make him take time and let you tell him what it means, not alone to the farmer, but to him as well. If he won't listen then he is not the man for you, but you should go to some other merchant who will listen. Don't resolve in the union on this question and then quit, but keep on advertising it like a patent medicine doctor does. It is a good thing to talk about—National Co-Operator.

In the Field of Action.

Oklahoma has passed a child's labor law which prohibits children under 14 years of age from working in factories, theaters, and many other public places. Now, if we had laws to compel parents to send their children to school instead of to the cotton patch it would help reduce the acreage and go a long way to solve the cotton problem, as well as to give the children an education.

CONGRESS MEN TO FARMER

Congressman Edwards of Georgia Tells of Small Treatment of Agriculturers by Government.

Congressman Edwards of Georgia, in a speech in the house the other day, showed how congress treated the farmer.

"Mr. Chairman—I shall be accused I hope, for dwelling upon this topic of liberality in one direction and parsimony in the other. It is a subject upon which I feel deeply. We need not wonder, sir, that the farmers of the country grumble when appropriations are withheld which, judiciously expended, would vastly improve the conditions with which they have to contend. Look at the tariff. It is constructed with the greatest solicitude for the interests of the manufacturer, who is hedged in with protection on every side. There isn't much in it for the farmer; on the contrary, the extravagant protection accorded to the manufacturers, especially those who manufacture agricultural implements, bears heavily on the tillers of the soil. The United States sells to the farmers of the world more agricultural implements, almost, than all the other nations combined. The surpassing excellence of the American implement is acknowledged by all the world. And yet, in the face of this universal demand for the American product, the tariff maintains a prohibitive duty on this class of manufacturers and thus enables the International Harvester Trust to charge the American farmer twice as much as he would pay for it under a low tariff. Competition could be established by the importation of plows and harrows and harvesters and thus the price would be lowered to our farmers."

"Far be it from me to enter upon a discussion of the inequities of the present tariff policy. What I have said about the tariff is merely incidental to the general subject of my complaint about the lack of consideration shown the farmer. This indictment is based upon striking specifications. The total of the appropriations for the fiscal year 1907-8 amounted to $920,798,143.30. Of this the farmers' share, as shown by the agricultural bill, was only $9,447,290, a fraction more than 1 per cent. For the fiscal year 1908-9 the proportion is about the same, for of the total of $1,008,804.57 there was appropriated for the work of the department of agriculture only $11,672,106. In other words, Mr. Chairman, that interest that adds annually more to the health of the country than any other of the great sources from which the nation's wealth flows, gets the smallest share. The increase in the appropriations for agricultural purposes for 1908-9 over 1907-8 was a little more than $2,000,000, while for the army it was nearly $17,000,000; for fortifications, $2,500,000; for pensions $17,000,000, and even the diplomatic service profited the amount of $500,000. All these branches of the public service are nonproductive; the agricultural appropriation alone goes into a field that yields a return a hundredfold—yes, a thousandfold."

"The appropriation for the army, the navy, the pensions for the fiscal year 1909 aggregate $380,000,000. One per cent of this enormous sum expended, Mr. Chairman, every year in aid to the states for the purpose of road improvement would be of incalculable advantage to the farmers of the country, would save them many more millions in wear and tear of horses, mules and vehicles, would make intercommunication easier, would in many ways contribute toward making life on the farm less monotonous and far more happy, and would be an important factor in allaying the desire of farmers' sons and daughters for life in the city; because it would mean better schools and churches in rural sections. This is but one of the items in respect of which congress should be more liberal toward the farmer, but it is an important one."

That Cureton Bill.

President Neill and the other officers of the Farmers' union, including F. I. Townsend, chairman of the legislative board, when they issued an address to the membership relative to the Cureton guarantee deposit bill, said: "We believe that this bill is of great importance to the members of the union, and that the bill should pass without material amendment."

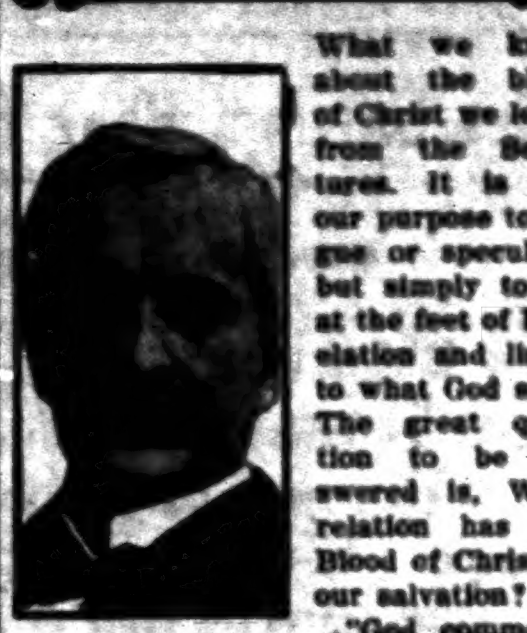

Everybody knows that the favorite way of the political lawyers in the legislative bodies of this country is to amend all of the good out of a bill so that its "mammy" would not recognize it. Everybody knows that. When Brothers Neill and Smith, with Brother Edmonson, therefore issued this address to the membership they simply did their whole duty, and deserve the thanks of the brethren for their action. As to the narrow and putative fact that certain self-important legislators are having over a failure to have a caption on the bill, let them laugh.

Such little schemes as sending letters to headquarters asking for permission to put a head on the Cureton bill, won't work, gentlemen, but something will work sure, and that is that the people will put a political head on some of you legislators that soft soap won't reduce in a month of Sundays. You can fool part of the people all the time; you can fool all the people part of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all the time—so take that home with you, pipsit, and relieve your great minds by smoking it—National Co-Operator.

Every member of the organization should take both a union and an agricultural paper.

The Precious Blood of Christ

By REV. A. C. BROWN, D. D.,
Pastor of the Chicago Ave. Church, Chicago.

What we know about the blood of Christ we learn from the Scriptures. It is not our purpose to argue or speculate, but simply to sit at the feet of Revelation and listen to what God says. The great question to be answered is, What relation has the Blood of Christ to our salvation?

"God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Much more, then, being now justified by His Blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him." Rom. 5:8-9. On the merit of the blood a just God can declare that an unjust man is just before Him. To explain how this is done is not our purpose. The How of all things is mysterious. We cannot even explain how the food we eat and the water we drink give redness to the blood and vitality in the body, how fire burns or grass grows. But, though we do not understand the method, we believe in the fact and rejoice in the experience.

Remission. "This is my blood of the New Testament which is shed for many for the remission of sins." Matthew 26:28. If we admit that Jesus Christ died for us God will transmit our sins to Him and His righteousness to us. "He bore our sins in His own body on the tree." "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission."

This is the gospel that Peter preached to the household of Cornelius in Acts 10:43. "To Him give all the prophets witness that, through His name, whosoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins." Cleansing. "The Blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1:7. When Bengel, the author of the "Gnomon," one of the greatest scholars of his age, was on his deathbed, he sent for a student and asked him to give him a word of comfort. The student, surprised and embarrassed, replied that he did not know how to comfort one so much more learned than he. "Can you not think of a promise that will help me?" replied the distinguished scholar, and the student repeated "The Blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin." "That is enough; it is just what I needed," and Bengel, the scholar, died peacefully, resting on the merit of the blood.

Sanctification. "Jesus also, that He might sanctify the people with His Own Blood, suffered without the camp." Hebrew 13:12.

The blood begins salvation through justification and continues it through sanctification. Like the scarlet thread in the cordage of the British navy, it runs through the whole of Christian experience.

Fellowship. "Having, therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the Blood of Jesus, let us draw near in full assurance of faith." Heb. 10:19-22. Sin means separation from God, and there is no return to Him except by way of the blood; but, when we are once in that way, we may be bold to enter into the secret place of the Most High.

Redemption. "In whom we have redemption through His Blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of His grace." Ephesians 1:7.

The figure is taken from the ancient custom of holding hostages and demanding a ransom. Justice holds a sinner as a hostage until he shall pay the ransom. When Jesus taught us to pray "Forgive us our debts," He meant that the violation of God's laws brings every sinner under obligation to pay the penalty of his sin. If another will pay it for him he will not be expected to pay it again, but the debt must be paid.

Now, Jesus Christ gave Himself as a ransom for many. Through His blood we are bought and liberated. Listen to the song of the saints in glory as given us in Revelation 5:9 and you will hear the echo of this precious truth: "For Thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by Thy Blood, out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation."

An old herdsman of Dartmoor was taken with his little granddaughter to a hospital in London, and when a physician told him they could do no more for him, he said to his granddaughter, "Repeat some verses from the Bible." She turned to the same Scripture: "The Blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin." "Read it again," he asked, and she read it. "Please put my finger upon it and trace the letters as you read it." She took in her little hand the trembling fingers and traced the words, "The Blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin." And the old herdsman died peacefully, resting in the merit of the blood.

Salvation through the blood is the need of the young and the old, the ignorant and the learned, the poor and the rich, the moral and the immoral.

The best employed people are those who devote their lives to doing good.

OPPORTUNITY THAT WAS LOST

President Madison Could Not See Ahead Sufficiently to Realize an Empire Was at Stake.

When the war of 1812 broke out, the world asked President Madison for leaders of courage to equal an armed vessel at his own expense to defend the Pacific colony, but the appeal was ignored. Had that small favor been granted, Astor would probably have maintained himself at Astoria, despite the apathy or treachery of his Scotch partners. If there had been a man of imagination and courage in the White House in those days—a man like Roosevelt or like Jefferson—a reasonable measure of recognition would have been granted.

If they had been granted, what would have been the outcome? With his large resources, his sea base, and his Russian affiliations, it is extremely probable that Astor would have shut out the Hudson's Bay and the Northwest companies from all trade west of the Rocky mountains; that controversy with England over the title to the Oregon region, then including everything up to the Alaskan line, which ended in 1846 by the compromise that gave us all the territory below the forty-ninth parallel, would have been averted; the present British Columbia and Yukon, which were not valued highly by anybody in those days, would have been ours by the peaceable process of occupation and expansion; and then when California came into our hands in 1848, and when Russia handed over Alaska to us in 1867, we should have had an unbroken coast line from San Diego up to Point Barrow, in the Arctic ocean. In that event, restricted to the west side of the Rockies, as she would have been, Canada would probably long ago have asked for annexation; the great lakes and Hudson bay would have been near the center of our territory; and the United States' place upon the world's map, and the United States' influence in the world's councils (large as each is at this moment), would have been much greater.—C. M. Harvey, in Atlantic Monthly.

At a Chinese Banquet.

I once attended a banquet at which one of the guests—an Englishman—drank a little too much sam shu, an exceedingly heavy liquid distilled from rice. There were in attendance two half-grown Chinese girls, 14 or 15 years old, one playing the Chinese flute, the other, the tall Chinese male, the Englishman, to amuse himself, began making hideous faces at them until he terrified the little creatures into silence. A handsome and dignified Chinese merchant was seated next to me, watching this procedure with an impassive face. The Englishman caught his eye, and said: "They no sabe me," pointing to the girls. "They think me all same clay. Wat you tink?" To which the merchant gravely replied, in perfect English: "I would not exactly call you clay, sir; but your mind certainly seems to be somewhat affected."

The Englishman did not know that the Chinese merchant was a graduate of Yale.—Jerome A. Hart, in Bohemian.

As to the Kindergarten.

A writer in a current magazine thinks that the kindergarten child lacks the power of concentration. His effort is to make it learn things easily, and as an education cannot be acquired that way, she thinks the kindergarten unnecessary for children whose home surroundings are what they should be. For other children she can see how the school would awaken dormant faculties that their lack of proper environment would not otherwise develop.

'SOLOMON'S

Said to Have Been Birthplace of Masonic Order.

Investigation Made at Jerusalem by
the State Department Reveals
Many Points of Interest to Members.

Washington.—As a result of the effort of the department of state to learn all that is possible of the "birthplace of Masonry," Thomas R. Wallace, American consul at Jerusalem, has made an extensive investigation of "Solomon's quarries" in the Holy city. His report a few days ago to the state department is of interest to Masonic bodies, and particularly to American Masons, because an American, Rolla Floyd became senior warden of the Royal Solomon, mother lodge, instituted in Jerusalem in 1873. "Solomon's quarries" were mentioned by Josephus in the writing of the ancient historian. They were lost through the middle ages and until most recent times. A chamber is pointed out in the quarries as the original meeting place of the ancient body of Masons. The chamber is the so-called "chamber of brotherly covenant."

Mr. Wallace said that his investigations led him to believe that the quarry became lost when the Romans destroyed Jerusalem. It is believed that the stone with which the ancient Jewish temple was built was taken from the quarry. The basis of this belief is that Josephus described the temple as having been white, "like a mountain of snow." The stone in the quarry is white and soft, hardening with exposure to the air. This factor would have made it desirable as building stone because of the comparative ease with which it may be cut and finished.

Josephus spoke of the mammoth cavern beneath Jerusalem. The quarries were of such extent that an approximately small portion of them might have been spoken of as "vast."

The quarries were discovered by accident. According to the story told by Mr. Wallace, a Dr. Barclay was out hunting. His dog disappeared in a hole near the north wall of the city. The dog failed to reappear. Dr. Barclay tore away the earth and weeds about the hole until he had enlarged it enough to enter. It was the entrance to the quarries.

A chamber is pointed out in which it is said the first meetings of Masonry were held. It is a small semicircular place, with seats about it formed of shelves of stone. Crumbled into a shapeless mass at one end of the semicircle is what was once a pillar of stone and is said to have been the chapel of the lodge. It is in the same condition now as when discovered, Mr. Wallace said.

An American named Page, according to Mr. Wallace, gave the best indication of the time which passed since the quarries were lost. A small pottery lamp, such as those used by the early Jews, was found in the quarry by Mr. Page. It was filled with the minute particles of dirt which float in the air. These particles would remain in the vessel after falling in, because protected from air currents by the rim of the vessel. The pottery lamp had a bowl one inch deep. It contained only these atoms of dust, showing that it required ages to fill.

The supposed connection of Solomon with these quarries, together with the traditional idea that associates him with the early history of the Masonic fraternity, is responsible for the interest with which Masons regard these caves, and especially the particular chamber where lodge meetings are sometimes held. 'SOLOMON'S QUARRY'

Said to Have Been Birthplace of Masonic Order.

Investigation Made at Jerusalem by
the State Department Reveals
Many Points of Interest
to Members.

Washington.—As a result of the effort of the department of state to learn all that is possible of the "birthplace of Masonry," Thomas R. Wallace, American consul at Jerusalem, has made an extensive investigation of "Solomon's quarries" in the Holy city. His report a few days ago to the state department is of interest to Masonic bodies, and particularly to American Masons, because an American, Rolla Floyd became senior warden of the Royal Solomon, mother lodge, instituted in Jerusalem in 1873.

"Solomon's quarries" were mentioned by Josephus in the writing of the ancient historian. They were lost through the middle ages and until most recent times. A chamber is pointed out in the quarries as the original meeting place of the ancient body of Masons. The chamber is the so-called "chamber of brotherly covenant."

Mr. Wallace said that his investigations led him to believe that the quarry became lost when the Romans destroyed Jerusalem. It is believed that the stone with which the ancient Jewish temple was built was taken from the quarry. The basis of this belief is that Josephus described the temple as having been white, "like a mountain of snow." The stone in the quarry is white and soft, hardening with exposure to the air. This factor would have made it desirable as building stone because of the comparative ease with which it may be cut and shaped.

Josephus spoke of the mammoth cavern beneath Jerusalem. The quarries were of such extent that an approximately small portion of them might have been spoken of as "vast."

The quarries were discovered by accident. According to the story told by Mr. Wallace, a Dr. Barclay was out hunting. His dog disappeared in a hole near the north wall of the city.
The dog failed to reappear. Dr. Barclay tore away the earth and weeds about the hole until he had enlarged it enough to enter. It was the entrance to the quarries.

A chamber is pointed out in which it is said the first meetings of Masonry were held. It is a small semi-circular place, with seats about it formed of shelves of stone. Crumbled into a shapeless mass at one end of the semicircle is what was once a pillar of stone and is said to have been the chapel of the lodge. It is in the same condition now as when discovered, Mr. Wallace said.

An American named Page, according to Mr. Wallace, gave the best indication of the time which passed since the quarries were lost. A small pottery lamp, such as those used by the early Jews, was found in the quarries by Mr. Page. It was filled with the minute particles of dirt which float in the air. These particles would remain in the vessel after falling in, because protected from air currents by the rim of the vessel. The pottery lamp had a bowl one inch deep. It contained only these atoms of dust, showing that it requires ages to fill.

stone of the quarry, and on which Masonic emblems are carved, are to be had in some of the stores of Jerusalem, and are much prized by Masons.

ENGLISHMEN ARE SHORTER.

Laboring Classes Decline in Stature While They Increase in Numbers.

London.—Some interesting remarks are made by John Gray, the secretary of the anthropometrical committee of the British association, upon the recent report that American college students are taller than their fathers and grandfathers. Mr. Gray said of the conditions in England:

"The aristocracy, landed gentry and cultured professional classes are improving in stature, but diminishing in number. The artisan class is holding its own in height and numbers. The laboring class—the term includes the unskilled millions of the people in the slums, even the vagrants—is perceptibly declining in stature while it increases more rapidly in numbers than either of the other two. These conditions apply not only to this country but practically to all Europe."

Some of the interesting facts mentioned by Mr. Gray may be summarized: Scotsmen are the tallest men in Europe (average height, 5 feet 8 inches); then come Scandinavian and English (5 feet 6 inches), and German, French and Italian. Through the conditions of life in the valley of the Nile the physical type of the Egyptian peasantry has not varied in 1,000 years.

"The English race," says Mr. Gray,
"is naturally tall. Thus a decline in stature for us might reasonably be said to spell a decline also in physical and mental energy. The stature of our manufacturing classes has been reduced far below the average of the country. The shortest people I have measured are those in the great towns of Yorkshire and Lancashire.
They have, through new conditions of life, become quite a different type from the dwellers in the country."

BIBLES SHOW HEIRS

Establish Rights of Woman to Share in Estate.

Two Bibles Submitted as Evidence and Court Decides Portion of Contested Property Belongs to Her.

St. Louis.—Two family Bibles were the means by which Attorney Warren
D. Isenberg proved the right of Mrs.
Martha Wilson, inmate of an asylum at Clarinda, Ia., to share in the estate of her dead uncle, James and John Francis, bachelor brothers. As a result of litigation started by the attorney, in which the Bibles were introduced in evidence, Circuit Judge Mc-Quillan has decreed that Mrs. Wilson is entitled to a portion of the property. Her share is fixed at about $15,- 000. Out of this Attorney Isenberg asks that he be paid $3,500 as his fee.

The Francis brothers were in the drug business on Broadway, near Easton avenue. James died in 1892.
His brother took charge of the estate, and upon his affidavit that he and his sister, Mrs. Isabella Frances Dark, were the sole heirs, the property was distributed accordingly in the probate court. Thereafter Mrs. Dark died, and in 1906 her brother, John, died.

Mrs. Dark's daughter, Lillie, who lives at the home of Dr. I. R. Hicks, in St. Louis county, was appointed administratrix of both estates. She made affidavit that she and her niece, Mrs.
Marie Rutherford of Hot Springs, Ark., and Mrs. Edith Hondley of Racine,
Wis., were the sole heirs.

Having been acquainted with the Francis brothers and possessing some information that there were other heirs besides those mentioned, Mr. Isenberg began an investigation. He learned that the Francis family, consisting of the mother and four children, came to St. Louis from England in 1840 and that one of the daughters, who became Mrs. Elizabeth Gibbs, placed her three children in the Episcopal Orphans' home in this city in 1861.

One of the children, Martha, was afterwards adopted from the home by Mr. and Mrs. Elijah M. Davis of Quincy, Ill. Her sister, Isabel, died from cholera in 1865 and her brother, William Gibbs, ran away from the home, and it is believed lost his life in the burning of a steamer on the Ohio river years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis moved to Des Moines, Ia., where their adopted daughter, Martha Gibbs, was married to a man named Wilson.

Other heirs of the Francis brothers denied the right of Mrs. Wilson to share in the property, but the two Bibles submitted in evidence satisfied the court that she was a legal heir.
One of the Bibles was that of the Francis family, brought from England.
It showed the birth of the child, Elizabeth, mother of Mrs. Wilson. The other Bible belonged to Mr. and Mrs.
Davis and in it was recorded the adoption by them of Margaret Gibbs, now Mrs. Wilson.

Mrs. Wilson has been in the Clarinda asylum since the death of her husband in 1890. Public Administrator Harry Troll will have charge of her estate as curator. The income will be used to defray her expenses in the Iowa institution and at her death the residue will go to the heirs. She has three children, all living in the state of Washington.

count for the presence of the picture in the egg, and all the scientists consulted thus far have failed to give any explanation.

THE POWER OF THE TONGUE

Booky School Lesson for Jan. 6, 1900
Specially Arranged for This Page

LESSON TEXT.—James 2:22. Man-ify your faith by your works.
GOLDEN TEXT.—Whoso loveth his mouth and his tongue, keepeth his soul from trouble.—Prov. 21:23.

TIME.—It is believed the epistle was written between A. D. 40 and 50.
PLACE.—Believed to be at Jerusalem.

Suggestion and Practical Thought.

Philosophers have striven to discover what faculty most clearly separates man from the brute; as, that man is the only animal that laughs, or the only animal that cooks, or the only animal that stands upright. Most thinkers, however, agree that the power of speech, with all that has grown out of it, is the clearest and most important distinction of mankind, and the surest indication of the superiority that God has conferred upon the human race.
The passage we are to study is one of the finest in the Bible, and is the crown of all writings upon the subject.

Vs. 1, 2a. Why did James urge his readers not to be many masters (teachers, as in "schoolmasters")? 1.
Because the young church met that danger continually (see Acts 15:24; 1 Cor. 1:12; 14:26; Gal. 2:12). In the Jewish church the function of the rabbi was jealously guarded, but the liberty of prophesying (teaching) in Christianity was liable to become il-lence. And "the more the idea pre-valled that faith, without corresponding obedience, was all that is needful, the more men would eagerly press forward to teach."—Alford. This thought joins our present lesson with the last.

To illustrate perfect speech, to what does James compare the tongue?
To a horse's bit or bridle, which, though small, turns and governs the whole body of the great animal; and,
similarly, to a ship's helm or rudder, which, though so small in comparison with the great ship, and so weak in comparison with the fierce winds, yet turns the ship, in the face of the winds, whithersoever the governor
(R. V. "steersman") listeth (R. V.
"willeth"). Even so (like the bridle and the rudder) the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things,
"vaunts great words, which bring about great acts of mischief."—Alford.

What is the point of the comparison? The power of the tongue in the guidance and direction of life—our own lives and those of others. And "we are never to forget that the
"tongue" includes the "pen."—Deems.

What is the next comparison used by James? "The tongue—that world of iniquity—is a fire, sprung from the fires of Gehenna. It is a little fire, to the eye; but a little fire can kindle
a great forest. So the tongue can ruin the whole body—nay, the whole life, in its revolting course from the cradle to the grave." The tongue is called a world of iniquity because "all kinds of evil that are in the world are exhibited there in miniature."—Barnes.

What is the point of this comparison? It pictures the destructive power of the tongue, as the first two comparisons pictured the tongue's guiding power. Little words, mere puffs of air, are insignificant as small sparks;
but as the flame and smoke may spread everywhere, so the baneful effect of evil speech may penetrate all life.

What is James' next comparison of the tongue? To an untamed beast; all other living things have been mastered by mankind—the four divisions of animals, according to James' rough zoology, namely, quadrupeds, birds, reptiles and fishes. But the tongue is an exception. No man can tame it; only God, who made it, can keep it under control. "It is an unruly (restless) evil, full of deadly poison," and so to be classed with the animals most hated and feared, the serpents.

What is the point of this comparison? As the first emphasized the guiding power of the tongue and the second its destructive power, so this comparison emphasizes its unrestrained power.

If the tongue cannot be tamed, are we to blame for our ungoverned speech? Yes, as James himself says (v. 16). "These things ought not so to be." "If we be truly Christ, though "reviled" by the unruly tongues of others, we shall, like him, "revile not again" (1 Peter 2:23). And as the whole body is the Lord's to be sanctified to him (1 Cor. 6:19, 20), so particularly must the tongue be kept from "evil-speaking, lying and slandering," and used rightly for the service of God. Thus may we truly offer "the calves of our lips" (Hos. 14:2), more acceptable than the blood of victims slain on a thousand altars."—Ellicott.

Why does James drop comparisons when he comes to his last point? Because there are no comparisons in nature to man's inconsistency in speech —only contrasts. The constancy of nature was as well known in James' day as in ours. But the tongue is sadly different. "Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing!"

What is the point of this contrast?
Evil speech has been pictured as (1) influential, (2) destructive, (3) memorable, and now finally as (4) unnatural. Men... are made after the similitude of God. "The nature of man is to adore God, and to love what is Godlike in man. Evil speech contradicts your nature and your destiny; to speak ill of others makes you a man-ster in God's world; get the habit of slandering, and God there is not a stream which bubbles from the heart of nature, there is not a tree that silently brings forth its goodly fruit in the appointed season, which does not rebuke."

Coats in Fashion

THE first coat is in blue serge; it fastens over in a point to one side; the fronts then slope away. White faced cloth is used for the collar, cuffs and pockets, trimmed at the edge by black satin-covered buttons and button-holes, made with black silk cord. Hat of straw, trimmed with masses of small roses and a feather mount.

Materials required: 2 yards serge 46 inches wide, 3/4 yard white face cloth, 3 dozen buttons, 2 yards cord.

Here is a coat for fawn face-cloth; it has a semi-fitting front and a light sleeve is trimmed in the same way, and is bound with satin. Hat of straw, trimmed with silk and a feather mount.

Materials required: 1 1/2 yard 48 inches wide, 1 yard satin, 15 buttons, 3

BRAINS NEEDED IN THE HOME.

Without Intelligent Application, Housework Means Drudgery and General Unhappiness.

As a recipe for a happy home there is none better than brains and good housekeeping. The more a woman knows the more easily she achieves.
Housework undirected by brains spells drudgery.

The housewife with brains knows the value of system, of disregarding traditions if they mean a waste of higher powers, of making life more simple if following the fashion means cramped nerves and strained purse.

The brain shows the futility of scrubbing, stitching and dusting as home making qualities; while the other half will never let culture run rampant while stockings are undarned and meals are helter skelter.

A woman was once asked to define her ideal housekeeping. "It is that," she said, "where the woman keeps the house and not the house the woman."
Houses having a way of not only
"keeping" the woman, but binding her with chains impossible to break unless brains form more than half the mixture used in that house's running

IN VOGUE

Almost every gown has a different colored shoulder scarf.

It is now quite the fad to have lingerie embroidered in pink and blue, according to fancy.

A waist that closes in the back is always pretty with tucks extending to yolk depth in front.

Passmenterie drop trimmings are now to be found in all the modish colors, and in pearl, jet, crystal and metallic effects.

There is no more satisfactory arrangement for a yoke than the separate guimpes tied down with ribbons at the waist line.

A long chain, intended to be twisted around the neck a second and third time, is ornamented with rose coral beads effectively matched.

Not girdles of wide soft mesh are embroidered in ribbons (a lustrous fabric), and fringed with it. These come in all of the fashionable colors.

New cloak gowns, which may be worn as an outdoor garment or as a princess robe, come in broadcloth, in black, navy blue, violet and smoky color.

Month Wash.

An excellent month-wash may be made by mixing one ounce of carbolic acid of soda with one pint of water.
Bottle for use. After cleaning the laundry as usual, rinse with a little of this liquid. It has a fine preservative effect on the fabric, and cleanses the tongue and gum.

Return to Quaker Gown.

Among the folk fashioners borrowed from Poland is that curious one of the Quaker gown, of the style of the last. Some of the daring women in Paris are trying the little circle which fall over the shoulders and descend to the knee level about the waist.

on the bodice, and other tucks continue to the end of sleeve; three more tucks of different widths trim the foot of skirt, commencing on each side of panel. Tucked lawn is used for the yoke, which is edged with braid, a gal-loon-waist-band is taken as far as possible, and on the right side of it a ribbon is attached, finished at the end by a tassel.

Hat of coarse straw to match, trimmed with chiffon, roses and a feather.
Materials required: Nine yards linen 36 inches wide, four yards braid, one-half yard galloon for waist-belt, three-quarters yard ribbon, one tassel, one-half yard tucked lawn.

Jewelry in Daylight.

Practically no jewelry is worn purely for ornament during the day.
The small gold safety pins and long bangles for securing the stock as well as the belt buckle serve useful purposes. They should be plain and unobtrusive.

To Save Shavings.

Girls will not be half an eye to down below in their delicate little shavings if only they will have shavers provided with them. This simple operation permits the girl and also to rub together with decidedly less friction, and the work is thus not so great.

DEHORNING CHUTE

DEVICE THAT WILL NOT HURT THE ANIMAL.

Plans for Building Pen That Holds the Head Securely, Thus Preventing Any Possible Accident.

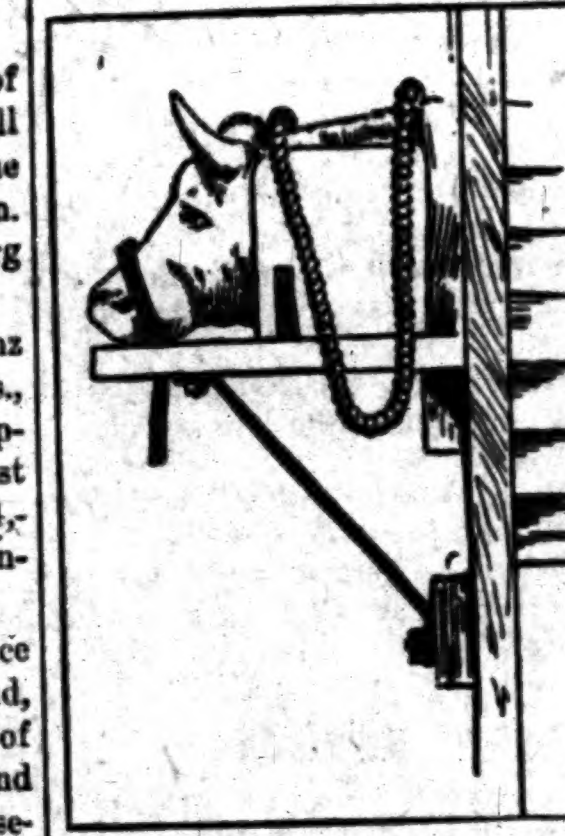

An authority on the dehorning of cattle furnishes the following information on the construction of the chute for the operation:

two feet wide, three feet long and two and one-half feet from the ground. Then prepare a square with an eight-inch side out of plank and hinge it to the table a few inches from the chute at right angles to the face of the same, so that it can move freely from one side to the other. For the hinge use two good pieces of strap iron, preferably wagon tire, and let each extend clear across each side of the width of the square. To make the hinge wrap the end of the tire around a bolt staple secured to the table by tape beneath. Through the end of the tire opposite the hinge and about an inch from the top face of the square bore a hole large enough for an inch and a half rope. You will then have two ropes attached to the top face of this square, and these are intended to pass over the neck of the animal and be secured by a lever at one end of the table. Another identical square is prepared, and this is set on the table facing the hinged square, but distant enough from it for the neck of an animal to be set between. The second square is braced firmly in a vertical position with blocks and steel braces. Two holes are bored through the table near the front side, through which a rope is passed to be placed over the nose of the animal. The head of the animal to be dehorned is held in position by the stationary square, against which the neck of the animal is bound by the hinged square. In this position there is no danger of an animal hurting itself, and the work can be done much quicker than if the head is less firmly held in position.

Dairying in the South.

It is a little peculiar that the butter for the whole country should be made in the northern states when the natural facilities for producing dairy products are much better where the climate is warmer.

The lack of suitable dairy buildings is a drawback to southern dairymen, but it may be easily remedied because warm buildings are not necessary. In fact, stables in the south should be built to be cool and at times dark to discourage flies; but they are easily built. In some instances they are added up when occasion requires. Such a summer stable in some parts of the north would come in very handy during fly-time.

Essentials in Poultry Raising.

At all times I see that my poultry houses are well ventilated. In the winter a very slight crack at the top of the building will provide sufficient exit for the foul air to escape. This is provided with a shutter to prevent too strong a draft. In summer the opening is made much larger and the sides of the building are also open to let as much heat as possible escape. By this means and by proper attention to exercise, cleanliness, etc., my fowls are kept in excellent health and comfort. Not the least of their comforts is a dust bath placed where the hen can shine on it at all times. This bath is also provided with sulphur, kerosene dust or insect powder.

BREEDERS WORK IN UNISON

Co-Operative Breeding to Secure Foundation for Future Prosperity Among Cattle Raisers.

Co-operative breeding, as viewed by a writer for Orange, Just Farmer, gives promise of great achievement in the future. As at present carried on much of our breeding is done in the dark. Unworthy sires are used. Breed is almost entirely ignored.

If a community will form an association, study the breeds, and carefully select the breed they like best, and is best suited to their conditions, and that they will be willing to stand by ever after, then they will have laid a sure foundation for future prosperity.

This much we know, that when an association is formed interest is aroused, and a desire for better things is inspired. Full-blood sires are bought, and if a man feels too poor to buy a good animal alone, two or three will go in together and buy. As good sires are bought, exchanges are made, so a choice animal can be kept near the same locality during the entire period of his usefulness.

Particular emphasis is placed upon the character and efficiency of the live business man, be in touch with every member, he should know what stock each one has, and what he desires to have. Through him exchanges are made, buyer and seller brought together. When they have stock to sell he carries advertising for the whole association, thus lessening the expense. He should have the registry books of the breed, and its prospective animal can be traced, and its sale they are reported to the secretary, so a buyer can find out by him just what can be bought, and where it can be bought, and a buyer will go to such a place, when he would not go from house to house in the uncertainty of finding what he wanted. In shipping there is also an advantage, as animals can be shipped much cheaper in carlots than singly.

Cow testing associations are apt to follow, friendliness is promoted and speakers may be obtained through the agency of such an association.

Lake Mills, Wis., is noted the world over for its cattle, because breeders have been working together raising one breed. A buyer has large numbers to pick from, he can buy in large lots, and he can get what he wants, and he is willing to pay the price. This is business; straight, honest, legitimate business. It will give an uplift to the farmer himself, it will bring comforts to his family, and education to his children.

COLONY HOG HOUSE IS BEST

Litter Raised in Each Individual Building Avoids Crowding and Injury to Shotes.

Where all the hogs sleep together cold nights, two, three and sometimes four deep, it is not an unusual occurrence to find a nice shote overlain or mashed to death. The colony house solves the problem. A family is raised up in each individual house, hence there is no crowding of several sizes in one bed.

We have six of these houses made of fencing plank that has done good service in a fence 36 years. Some are hemlock and some poplar, the greater part perfectly sound, except the nail holes. These houses are distributed over the farm in convenient places to feed and water.

The floor space is 48 square feet with seven feet front and five feet in the rear. The roofing is three-ply prepared paper, which makes a very serviceable roof.

Good Forage Crop.

One of the best, if not the very best, forage crop is Japanese millet. Ground in good condition for corn will grow it in abundance. Fifteen pounds of seed to the acre, sown broadcast the middle of June, will produce a crop which will be ready to cut and feed the twentieth of August. Milk cows are very fond of it and the milk supply will be kept up. Hungarian is a rather extra forage crop and is more and more attracting the attention of farmers. With soil under good tillage, two tons to the acre of dried hay can be depended upon. It requires bright weather to cure it, and when harvested in good condition it makes a valuable supplement to the hay crop. It can also be fed as a molasses crop.

Cure for Mange.

Following is a recommended cure for mange in hogs: Creosote, 1 1/2 ounces; lard, two pounds; lard, two pounds. Mix and apply to the affected parts of the body. Or, creosote, one-half pound; lard, two pounds. Mix and apply to the affected parts. Turpentine and sulphur at the rate of ten parts of the former to one of the latter is another effective remedy. The same mixture may be used for a dog, but the animal should be carefully watched for the first few days, also he might make himself very sick by licking it off.

IN HAPPY HOURS OF BOYHOOD

Fleeting Memory of the School Days and Its Accompanying Joys and Sorrows.

You gather about the cloths, laughing or sitting "tallor fashion" on the moss and the leaves. Covers come of the lunch baskets. Ah, those moments of ours! Who but a mother would spend hours of a busy day in preparing stuffed eggs and sandwiches and apple puffs and cake? There are no less than 75 different kinds of cake in those baskets and boxes, and every kind light and feathery and delicious. You eat it all, all you get, but you do not then appreciate the love and self-denial animating the tired hands which made it. Now, do, now when those hands have been at rest for so many years.

You've eaten all you can possibly stuff and have mistreated the cups with two tin cups of lemonade. Therefore you are ready for the cream which the ubiquitous Hattie is dealing out. His is certainly a job—none better—but like all great men filling responsible positions, Hattie has his troubles.

"Hey? Well, wait a minute, my ye?" he inquires, brandishing a spoon in one hand and an iron spoon in the other. "Hold on till it's your turn. I never see such a gang of young hogs in my born days. All right! All right! Which'll it be—vanilla? Lamon you said? Then be! Clear off my feet! Mr. Hattie for the land sakes make a couple of these young ones keep line, can't ye?"

You had a great scheme, probably "Crocodile's" inventive brain, by which you were to obtain both kinds of cream. You were to get the best first, swallow it as quickly as possible, hide your saucer and spoon in the bushes and then line up to get more, innocent and bland, to be taken to vanilla, the supposition being Mr. Hackett, in the rush of his operation, would not remember and would think it was your first trip. It was a good plan and might have worked, it had not been for teacher—C. C. Lincoln, in Success Magazine.

Kindness That Is Freest.

The world is full of kindnesses never is spoken, and that is not better than no kindness at all. Fuel in the stove makes the room warm, but there are great pine trees lying on rocks and tops of hills where nobody sees them. These do not make any warmth. You might freeze to death in the want of wood in plain sight of fallen trees, if you had no means of getting the wood home and making fire of it. Just so in a family, love what makes the parents and children the brothers and sisters happy. If they take care never to say a word about it, if they keep it a profound secret as if it were a crime, they are not much happier than if they were not any love among them; the love will seem cool even in summer, if you live there, you will envy them when anyone calls him "Poor fellow!" —Dr. J. G. Holland.

Crimes and the Telephone.

From the beginning to the end of the transaction of crime the telephone is brought into extensive use, and both sides with equal fidelity, chief uses it to determine which he may safely rob. The man who uses it to call the police station, police arrive, catch the burglar, him into insensibility and take him for the wagon or ambulance. There was some one telephone a lawyer defend him. The lawyer telegraphed to the judge, the judge telegraphed to the court, the court telegraphed to the jury, the jury telegraphed to the prisoner. After that the telephone kept busy by bankers, politicians, petitioners who make an effort to the prisoner pardoned.

NEW SULTAN OF TURKEY

Mehmed Reashed Effendi, brother of Abdul Hamid, was crowned as sultan of Turkey by the Young Turk Republic in Constantinople. He is a young man with a bloated appearance, owing to good food. The new sultan bears a remarkable resemblance to his father, who is thick and slightly protruding; he has a high forehead and his hair is tinged with gray, but in other ways he is different.

NOW HORSE

Historic Dent Farm Made Haven for Tired City Animals.

Owned by Father-in-Law of Gen. Grant and is Place Where He as a Young Lieutenant, Did His Courting.

St. Louis.—The historic Dent farm, outside St. Louis, where Ulysses S. Grant, then a young lieutenant at Jefferson barracks, went to court, and where he wooed and won Miss Julia Dent, a daughter of the farm's owner, has been turned into a retreat for tired city horses. It is an old-fashioned, well-kept place, with a sort of "back porch" and the 40 horses that have been turned out to graze on the city's edge are now luxuriating in the lush sweep of wooded valley, through which young Grant and Miss Dent used to wander on their hand-in-hand, high-spirited thoroughbreds. There is ample shed and barn room to afford protection against winter storms, to say nothing of the barns, which are filled with hay and grain. The farm was owned by Col. Fred Dent, father-in-law of President Grant. Up to the very day of the emancipation act Col. Dent owned the place, but the time came when the old colonel called himself a "Grant" and he died in the White House. Grant's second administration. It was in 1821 that Col. Fred Dent came into possession of this farm. There is still standing on it a clock tower, constructed with portholes, and for the purpose, doubtless, of protecting Indian attacks. The building was constructed originally of stone and logs, but it is now weathered. The farm itself is about four miles south of the city and about eight miles west of Jefferson barracks. Grant and Fred Dent, Jr., afterward General Dent, had been roommates and classmates at the United States Military academy, and when Grant went to Jefferson barracks young Dent made him promise to call on his father. So one day Ulysses rode over to the 1,200-acre farm, where a warm welcome awaited him. He met the three other Dent boys and three of the Dent girls. Miss Julia happened to be up in the city, and young Grant was destined to make several calls before he finally met the young woman who was to play so important a part in his future. And then, as Grant himself always frankly confessed, "it was love at first sight." After that meeting there was no longer any doubt in the minds of any one regarding the young lieutenant's choice. And as the parents watched him ride away they knew they were agreed that some day the man would be heard from. Just before the outbreak of the Mexican war, when his regiment was ordered south into Louisiana, Grant came galloping over the fields to the Dent place to ask the question that no one but Julia Dent could answer. The question was: would he add anything to his personal charm by having to feed the animals which he had loved so much in his youth? And this is no very distant memory from the time when the young woman had been seen to weep. After remaining for the army, Grant, at his last look, had seen a small, dark, smiling man, and

A Mild Laxative For Baby's Bowels

Doctor Points Out Dangers of Pills and Cathartics

"Bills, purgatives, and violent cathartics are dangerous when given babies, children or delicate women," says a well known doctor. "Neither should they be given medicines containing narcotics for stomach or bowel troubles."

It would be well for mothers to heed this warning and keep on hand a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for baby and himself and for any member of the family that has need of a laxative or a stomach remedy. It is safe and pleasant to take and has cured old people of chronic constipation and dyspepsia of many years' standing, and yet is harmless for a baby as much as a happy mother can testify. It brings natural daily movements, sweetens the stomach, aids digestion and stimulates the torpid liver to proper action. The children like it. Late Weathers, the popular hotel man in Birmingham, says: "The children like it. We all use it and would not be without it in the house." Mrs. Mattie Couch, Tiptonville, Tenn., cured her 3 month old baby of indigestion with it. Mrs. Alma Willis, Jamaica, VI., says it saved her baby's life. Mrs. A. B. Cunningham, Fresno, Cal., says she cured her own stomach trouble with it. It cured her little son of indigestion and stomach trouble.

Mrs. Flora Helmer, New York, Kan., says: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin cured my little girl of constipation. I cannot recommend your splendid remedy too highly for children." Mrs. Mary E. Young, Birmingham, Ala., writes: "I can only recommend it to mothers as the best laxative for children." Mrs. Alma Miller, Canal Dover, Ohio, has used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin with splendid results as a laxative for children.

I doubt you have tried salts and cathartic pills, purgative tablets, etc. I have come to the conclusion that they are violent in action and do very little good. Listen, then, to the experience of with regard to the powerful and mild laxative, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is not a medicine, we are trying to find new friends.

Felix, of Johnston City, Ill., writes: "I was in a terrible trouble for six years. I found his cure in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. His wife used it too. We could name hundreds of others who have heard of it tried through the kindness of friends, others through the offer to send any sufferer from a liver or bowels complaint a free bottle for trial, without charge. I will send you a trial bottle direct to your home. If it proves itself as a laxative, then continue the treatment for a month or $1 bottle of your choice, as all of them sell it. Old people, who are weak, should use it. It is well to mention that the remedy is vouchered for with the name of Dr. Caldwell. Also, though a free bottle is sent, the sufferer is guaranteed from the moment a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is bought, that the sufferer will receive a free bottle of the same. I will send at least for the free test bottle to-day."

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. J. Caldwell, 201 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

RECRIMINATIONS.

"You have now more than a shirt, and when we were married you had only one solitary one!"

"Yes, but that one didn't need mending!"

"All Bets Off!"

The wife of a retail merchant, whose husband is withheld for obvious reasons, is irritated by the non-arrival of mail articles she had ordered from a butcher. She called up the butcher, and the flip youth who drove the delivery wagon answered the phone.

"Did you attend to that order for X?" she asked, indignantly.

"You bet your silk suit I did," came the reply.

"What's that?" she gasped.

"You can go and bet all your fingers (pronounced as spelled) I attended to anything."

"So you know to whom you are talking?"

"Surest thing you know; I'm talking to you!" (The maid.)

"You are talking to Mrs. X," she said, sternly.

"Oh, well then," in apologetic tones, "the bets are off."

Our Wonderful Language.

"Out of sight in that gown, let me observe a gentleman in the doorway, pointing to Mrs. de Koller, who occupied a front seat in one of the lower tier of boxes."

"Out of sight? Well, hardly. It seems to me it is the other way about."

"Which goes to show the elasticity of the American language, which can mean anything and means another. It is so—but, upon second thought, I will respectfully but firmly decline to go into any further details."

THINK HARD

It Pays to Think About Food.

The unthinking life some people lead causes trouble and sickness. I learned from the experience of a lady from Fond Du Lac, Wis.

About four years ago I suffered badly from indigestion, always eating whatever I liked, not thinking of the digestible qualities of the food. Indigestion caused palpitation of the heart so badly I could not walk up a flight of stairs without sitting down or twice to regain breath and strength.

I became alarmed and tried dozens of my clothes very loose, and many remedies, but found no relief. Hearing of the virtues of Grape-Nuts and Postum, I commenced using them in place of my usual breakfast of coffee, cakes, or hot biscuit, and in a week's time I was relieved of my indigestion and other ills attending it. In a month's time my heart was performing its functions as usual. I could climb stairs and hills and walk long distances.

I gained ten pounds in this time, and my skin became clear and completely regained my health and strength. I continue to use Grape-Nuts and Postum for I feel that they are good health entirely to their own credit. A Reason."

I like the delicious flavor of Grape-Nuts and by making Postum into a directions, it tastes stronger than high grade coffee."

"Read 'The Road to Wellville' in the ever read the above story. It appears from time to time in newspapers, magazines, and in the form of a book."
